Reform of archaic court system called a must

By BILL DUNCAN
Staff Writer

New court buildings in California today are examples of the finest modern architecture, but the system that goes inside the fancy new buildings is at best archaic.

"It is like installing a Model T in the chassis of a Cadillac," one court official said.

Court calendars are monstrously overloaded. Justice is administered unevenly—often unfairly. Expenses have skyrocketed in recent years and judicial cost duplications in many court districts are scandalous.

The problem is particularly acute in urban areas—more so in Los Angeles County than anywhere in the state—where court congestion, due primarily to an unprecedented increase in caseloads, has caused a general loss of public confidence and respect for the judicial system.

"The time has come for reform," said Ralph N. Kleps, administrative director of the California courts.

WHAT MUST be done, he said, is to remove the court system from the local, political control and unify it on a state-wide level.

"Experience suggests that California cannot rely upon local government to create an efficient trial court system within our lifetimes," he said. "Local pressures have no real concern with efficient judicial operation; elements of local pride and local ambition loom far greater to local politicians than any issues of judicial efficiency."

Constitutional and statutory provisions in California under which the judicial system is organized are heavily weighted today in the direction of local administration and control. The state Constitution, for example, guarantees a superior court in every county whether a full-time court is needed there or not. California statutes also guarantee that local political decisions will largely determine how many courts are needed throughout the state, where they will meet and what personnel will serve them.

The result is all too often that in one county a judge will handle a few cases a month, while in another a judge will have to dispense with dozens of cases.

Such crowded calendars have created what is judicially called "plea bargaining" which means that a man arrested for a felony in one county might get the full penalty of the law, but in another, because there is no court time left, he might escape with no jail or prison time by bargaining for a lesser plea.

KLEPS SAID that traditionally the system of trial courts came into being as agencies of local government "designed to preserve peace in a rural setting." It can no longer be that way in a urban society, Kleps said, and he believes that court modernization must be in the form of a state-wide judicial system.

"It is now only a pathwork of numerous judicial districts," he said, consisting of a multiplicity of relatively uncoordinated tribunals, almost entirely autonomous in administration, with duplicate administrative and judicial support.

Several attempts toward reform are already under way. One, an Assembly bill authored by Long Beach Republican Assemblyman James A. Hayes would merge the present municipal, justice and superior courts into one statewide court system. It would eliminate the lower court system entirely.

The Hayes bill has some support,

$1 million cash dug up, seized in heroin case

N.Y. dealer's buried cache largest found

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Using shovels and crowbars, federal agents dug out $1,078,000 in cash from the backyard and basement of the New York residence of a convicted narcotics distributor who had claimed to be a bagel baker earning $200 a week.

Some of the money was allegedly intended to be used by Louis Cirillo, the convicted distributor, to hire gunmen to kill witnesses against him, the government charged Saturday.

At the offices of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs here, where the money — mostly in new $100 bills — was sitting on a desk, Frank Monastero, the associate regional director, said it was the largest cash seizure ever made by that agency in the nation.

THE PREVIOUS largest seizure also in the Bronx section of New York, was made in February by agents who picked up two alleged narcotics peddlers with $967,550 that they had in a green suitcase.

Cirillo, who has been described by the government as a major distributor of heroin smuggled into this country from France, was convicted on two narcotics counts last Tuesday and could receive 60 years in a federal penitentiary.

In addition to his narcotics conviction, Cirillo is being held in lieu of $1-million bail on a separate charge that he had conspired to obstruct justice by allegedly plotting to kill the principal witness in the heroin case against him.

Monastero said Saturday that the government had become suspicious that Cirillo had a cash cache because they had found him spending large sums of money without ever seeing him go to a bank.

CIRILLO, 49, was one of 23 men indicted by a federal grand jury here last Jan. 4 on charges that they took part in the past two years in the smuggling of 1,500 pounds of heroin, which federal authorities said had an initial import value of at least $8 million and a street value of more than $200 million. The others have not yet been tried.

Evidence introduced during Cirillo's trial showed that he had been obtaining heroin from a French ring headed by Joseph Signoli. Signoli and his two top associates, Alexandre Salles and Andre Andreani, were arrested several months ago by French authorities.

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Apollo 16's astronauts returned from the mountains of the moon to a cheering welcome from their families and friends Saturday night and thanked the space center workers for helping them snatch success from the brink of failure.

John W. Young, Thomas K. Mattingly and Charles M. Duke flew to Ellington Air Force Base near the space center from Hawaii where they were ferried from the recovry ship Ticonderoga early in the day.

As they stepped from the silvery Air Force jet, the astronauts were mobbed by their wives, friends and hundreds of space workers.

Young, the commander of the 11-day expedition, pulled a gold wedding band that he took to the moon from his pocket and slipped it on the ring finger of his wife, Susy. Then he looked up at the moon overhead and said it was hard to believe they had been up there.

"I think I would characterize from where I was sitting that flight as sort of a cliff-hanger," Young said.

"We almost never knew from one phase to the next whether or not the machinery was going to work so that we could do it."

"It's great to be back," said Duke, who was surrounded by his wife Dotty and their two boys.

Red artillery in position to hammer Hue

Combined News Services

SAIGON, Sunday — Communist troops tightened the noose around South Vietnam's beleaguered northernmost provincial capital of Quang Tri today, turning back relief forces with intensive shelling.

To the south, the South Vietnamese abandoned their northernmost defensive line in the central highlands and pulled in closer to the threatened provincial capital of Kontum City.

North Viet troops also captured a district capital on the central coast, set up heavy artillery positions within easy firing range of refugee-swollen Hue and tightened their grip on the provincial capital of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon.

Military sources said Quang Tri City was still in government hands today as the Communist offensive went into its second month. But Communist fire was so intense no Allied helicopters were able to land at the city, 18 miles south of the demilitarized zone.

Two U.S. helicopters were shot down Saturday, killing two Americans and wounding three others, the U.S. Command said.

An estimated 75 American military and civilian advisers were reported still in their military compound at the city with another 20 advisers with government forces outside Quang Tri.

Supplies and troops failed to reach Quang Tri and its South Vietnamese combat base just to the north for the fourth consecutive day today. An ammunition convoy trying to drive from Camp Evans, 10 miles to the south, came under artillery fire and was turned back as the Communists blocked Highway 1.

Associated Press correspondent David J. Paine reported from Pleiku in the highlands that Vo Dinh on Highway 14 and adjoining Firebase Bravo were evacuated by road and the ranger defenders pulled back

Vietnam war diplomacy steps up in 5 nations

Combined News Services

Activity escalated sharply this weekend on the Vietnam war's diplomatic front as envoys, delegations and rhetoric flew between Hanoi, Peking, Moscow, Paris and Washington.

In Washington, North Vietnam's battlefield gains were seen damaging prospects for success in this week's secret talks in Paris and souring the atmosphere for president Nixon's late May summit meeting in Moscow.

ONE OF the key figures in the talks, North Vietnamese Politburo member Le Duc Tho, stopped off in Moscow Saturday en route from Hanoi to Paris.

Also arriving in Moscow Saturday was a high-level Soviet delegation which completed four days of talks in Hanoi aimed at assuring North Vietnam of continued support for its war effort.

Western diplomatic sources in Moscow said the Soviet delegation might have been carrying specific proposals that grew out of the talks last weekend between U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and Leonid I. Brezhnev, Soviet Communist Party chief.

MEANWHILE, The New York Times reported Saturday that resumption of the Paris peace talks this week stems from deals worked out among the U.S., Hanoi and Moscow recently.

The Communists were said to have assured the Americans that if talks resumed there would be serious and productive negotiations in secret sessions.

Russia is reported eager to scale down the fighting during Nixon's visit to avoid any unpleasant incidents, such as the recent accidental American bombing of Soviet merchant ships in North Vietnamese ports.

Tho, who spent about 24 hours in Peking before arriving in Moscow, has negotiated with the U.S. before.

Last year, at a time when Saigon was faring relatively well, it was Tho who rejected the Nixon peace plan proposed to him in secret meetings with Kssinger.

With North Vietnamese forces now advancing in the South, Tho can be expected to raise his demands to a point even more displeasing to Washington.

SATURDAY, North Vietnam accused Nixon of escalating the war despite his recent announcement that 20,000 more American troops will be withdrawn by July 1.

The Foreign Ministry dismissed as "slanders" Nixon's charge that North Vietnamese forces had invaded the South and added:

"In whatever place on Vietnamese soil where aggression occurs, all Vietnamese have the right and duty to fight aggression and to defend the independence and integrity of the fatherland.

"The fact that the Nixon administration is withdrawing a part of its ground forces and frantically attempting to reinforce the puppet (South Vietnamese) army . . . cannot mask the true nature of America's aggressive war," North Vietnam said.

IN CHINA Saturday, Nixon's address was attacked in an article transmitted abroad which said the U.S. had "revealed its arrogant features before the American people and all the people of the world."

While strongly criticizing Nixon's speech, the article had less to say about Nixon personally than "U.S. imperialism" generally. There was even a touch of formality in the article's references to Nixon, who was addressed as the U.S. president or President Nixon. Before his visit to China similar articles referred to him simply as "Nixon" or as the "U.S. imperialist chieftain."

U.S. puzzled by new Russ cruisers

By WILLIAM BEECHER

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union is building three missile cruisers of a new class that are about twice as large as its current modern cruisers, Pentagon officials have disclosed.

In addition, the Russians have taken three old Sverdlov class gun cruisers out of mothballs and are installing missiles and advanced communications and radar equipment on them.

Military analysts are frankly puzzled over why the Soviets feel they need six mammoth missile cruisers instead of continuing to build more of the 5,000- to 7,000-ton Kresta and Kynda class cruisers.

The new category of cruisers is in the 12,000- to 15,000-ton class, analysts say. The old Sverdlovs are in the 15,000- to 20,000-ton class.

Some military analysts believe that construction of still another

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

Russian warship, a 20,000- to 30,000-ton vessel that is believed to be either the Soviet Union's first aircraft carrier or a new type of helicopter carrier, may provide a clue to the purpose of the missile cruisers.

Under this theory the cruisers may form the nucleus of one or two carrier task forces.

"It's still a little too early to tell," one admiral declared. "Conceivably the larger cruisers are considered more impressive in showing the flag in ports all over the world than their smaller warships. Or maybe they want the larger platforms as command ships to put more admirals and their staffs at sea. That requires more space, for communications, for protection, for quarters.

"But many of us have expected the Russians, as they push farther and farther from their home waters, to realize the value of aircraft carriers, both to protect their fleets and to project power ashore. I'm not at all sure that's where they're headed, but I wouldn't be at all surprised if they are."

A number of analysts suggested that as the Russians extend their naval operations beyond the reach of Soviet land-based air cover, in the Mediterranean, the Indian Ocean, the South Pacific, and the Caribbean, they will want carrier task forces to provide greater self-defense.

Some officials say that if the large warship being built at the Nikolayev shipyard in the Black Sea is indeed a carrier, they believe that initially it will carry vertical takeoff and landing jets rather than conventional jets.

The Soviets have been experimenting with such aircraft since 1967.

Maheu feels Hughes will fall

Robert A. Maheu, ousted in 1970 as head of Howard Hughes' $300 million Nevada operations, says the wealthy recluse someday will be forced to appear in court in the United States.

"He'll learn that the laws cover everyone, not just you and me," he said in Tucson Saturday.

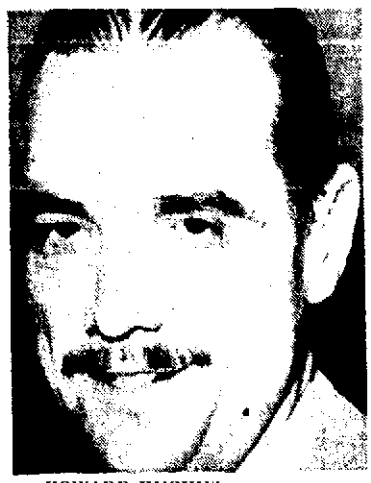

"We have cases pending in the state courts in Nevada and in a federal court in California," Maheu said "We intend to pursue this thing."

In a telephone interview early this year, a man who identified himself as Hughes indicated he would like to stay clear of the United States in order to avoid a never-ending series of court actions.

He said it was nearly impossible to do an adequate job in his position as a Hughes employe because there was no communication except telephone calls and notes from Hughes.

"I feel that he needs a strong person in his entourage to keep him on the right line," Maheu said.

Asked what he thought Hughes' next move might be, Maheu smiled. "I don't know. They haven't consulted me in quite a while."

Hectic work for Nixon visit

Treasury Secretary John B. Connally dug a barbecue pit, his harrassed wife tried vainly to find somebody to shell peas and the entire Connally family primped their Picosa Ranch in Floresville, Tex. Saturday for a visit from President Nixon.

The names of the 200 guests who were to attend a dinner today featuring southern food cooked western style were kept secret but it was learned they included wealthy Texans who might contribute to Nixon's re-election campaign.

"You just can't imagine the detail that goes into one of these things," said Connally, who arrived at the ranch last week to oversee the preparations.

Presidtnt and Mrs. Nixon will sleep in the Connally's bedroom at the two-story ranch house.

"Nellie and I like to leave the drapes open in our bedroom when we go to bed," Connally said. "But I understand the President likes to sleep in total, pitchblack darnkess so I guess he'll pull the drapes."

"I was a little worried about buying the car," Depasquale said, "What with my Italian last name. But I got it at a fantastic low price."

Jack Ruby bar sale

The furnishings of Jack Ruby's nightclub, from liquor cabinets to filing cabinets — in fact everything but the backroom safe — were sold Saturday at a public auction in Athens, Tex.

Ruby was owner of the Dallas strip joint on the day — Nov. 23, 1963 — he shot and killed suspected presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald in the basement of the Dallas city jail as Oswald was being transferred to the county jail.

Ruby died of cancer on Jan. 3, 1967.

HIROHITO TURNS 71

He had been held since 1949 because of a dispute about overseas funds between China and Belgium when the Communists took over the mainland.

Protesters assail flower fete queen

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — A bottle-throwing throng of demonstrators protesting Portugal's alleged racism forced the pretty Portuguese queen of the 19th annual Azalea Festival from her float in tears Saturday.

The 500 demonstrators, most of them black, surged around the float carrying Maria Teresa Sanches, daughter of a Portuguese cabinet minister, and peppered it with soft drink cans and other missiles.

The five honor guards riding on the float reported they were struck by missiles thrown by demonstrators. A college student was later arrested.

POLICE quickly removed Miss Sanches, an attractive 21-year-old student at the Lisbon University school of economics, who was clad in a full-length white gown, from the float and took her to her hotel. She was in tears, but appeared unruffled later at the official coronation ceremonies where she said she hoped to visit Norfolk again.

Miss Sanches, daughter of Portugal's minister of public works and communications, is the first Portuguese representative to be selected queen of the annual festival during its 19-year history. The festival salutes the North Atlantic Treaty Organization alliance (NATO). NATO's supreme Atlantic command is based in this naval port.

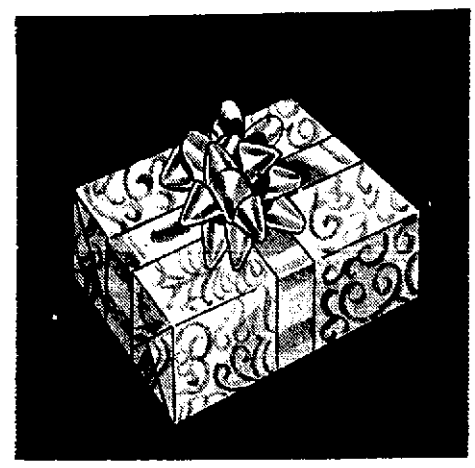

The demonstrators were located in a one-block area and at first numbered about 150 to 200. As floats passed their area, they chanted, "free Mozambique," one of Portugal's African colonies, and booed and hissed parade participants.

What You See Is What You Get!

That was "Geraldine's" reaction at Douglas Aircraft Co. Saturday when she found out they named a DC10 jumbo jet after her. Comedian Flip Wilson, who created Geraldine for his television program, shows his delight with a little impromptu choreography at the Airline Delivery Center where he christened the plane shortly before it was turned over to National Airline officials.

The victims were two-month-old Clyde Hickmon and his brother Preston, 2.

Busch calls court-news conflicts 'futile'

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

The controversy between the judiciary and the new media over coverage of trials is unhealthy for both sides and convinces the public of the ineptitude of the court and press, Los Angeles County Dist. Atty. Joseph Busch said Saturday.

In a speech to the regional convention of the journalistic society Sigma Delta Chia, Busch said the continuing debate "is one of the most futile in which the legal profession has ever engaged."

Busch appeared as keynote speaker at a banquet of 1,000 SDX members from California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaii aboard the Queen May.

"Certain basic rules must be laid down which will be adhered to by all officers of the court — and by the press," he said.

"We cannot continue to fight a guerrilla warfare between the courts and the news media on a case by case, judge by judge, newsman by newsman basis."

Busch said he felt some judges had gone beyond the guarantees of a public trial in efforts to combat prejudicial publicity. He said such actions are futile because there was always someone to reveal what is going on behind the scenes and newspapers who will print it if they feel it proper material.

"Professionals in government — whether they be policemen of prosecutors, judges or military men, engineers or welfare workers — are often inclined to resist providing the public, and therefore the press, with extensive information because they don't like what they consider to be meddlers."

Busch said one way out of the impasse was to get the question into state and federal legislatures where it can be the subject of study and debate and where effective guidelines can be established.

Earlier, in an SDX panel session at the Edgewater Hyatt House, a journalism professor suggested that credibility of newspapers could be increased by establishing community press councils—concerned citizens who monitor the performance of the press

Donald Brown of Arizona State University said that such councils, which should represent a cross-section of the community, should be feee of government control and have no power to suppress news.

They could help newspapers avoid unethical practices by making public the results of monitoring and investigations, he said.

Newspaper officials on the panel disagreed about the value of press councils.

Ray Spangler, publisher of the Redwood City Tribune, said that a press council in his community "established a helpful link with the public we serve."

"When you have a one newspaper town, you have a public utilities situation, and unless you get feedback you don't know what your community is feeling," he said.

"Press councils can feed new ideas into tired newspaper minds."

He said the Redwood City council, composed of a cross-section of local citizens and backed by the newspaper itself, had in no way infringed on the paper's freedom.

Larry Allison, managing editor of the Independent, Press-Telegram, said that if a press council was established in Long Beach, the I,P-T would try to cooperate with it.

But he said, community press councils could become useless if they evolved into mere public relations programs for newspapers, or if they were on completely hostile terms with the papers they criticized.

"The best hope of raising journalistic standards is in raisng the standards nf the people who work in the field," he said.

Jaycees pick 5 outstanding men

The chairman of the state Democratic Party and four other Californians were named the state's "five outstanding young men" Saturday by the Junior Chamber of Commerce at its annual awards congress in Long Beach.

The recipients were:

Charles T. Manatt, 35, Van Nuys, an attorney who became state Democratic chairman in 1971 after his work as campaign chairman for Sen. John V. Tunney.

Sgt. Edward A. Artis, 26, Concord, a U.S. medical corpsman at Fort Ord who has devoted off-duty time to work both in the United States and Southeast Asia on behalf of civilian casualties of the Indochina wars.

Dr. C. Robert Breckenridge, 32, Lodi, an oral surgeon who has served on many community projects in the Northern California city.

Rodney J. Diridon, 33, Saratoga, who heads a firm which advises public and private agencies on educational and sociological studies on a nonfee basis.

Wayne D. Wedin, 33, city manager of Brean who is involved and active in church and community projects.

East L.A. teen beat to death with brick

A 19-year-old East Los Angeles youth, who was apparently bludgeoned with a brick in the early morning hours, died Saturday afternoon at County-USC Medical Center.

Sheriff's deputies said Thomas Albert Contreras was discovered lying in the street near Whittier Boulevard and Burger Avenue shortly after 1 a.m. and was bleeding profusely from his head.

A witness told deputies that he saw the teen-ager being chased by two "long-haired juveniles" earlier in the evening and that, after visiting a friend, the witness discovered Contreras lying in the street.

Investigators also said that they found a brick with blood and hair on it near the spot where the teen-ager fell.

GRAFFITI WAIT FOR NO TRAIN

Brandt predicts OK on Eastern treaties

BERLIN (AP) — Chancellor Willy Brandt — addressing a sea of West Berliners — predicted Saturday that his Eastern treaties will be ratified, and appealed to wavering delegates to "listen to this city" before they vote.

"Ha-ho-hey," the crowd of 50,000 in John F. Kennedy Square chanted, "Willy is okay." Their old mayor took his coat off on this sunny though chilly day as he warmed to his task.

With the ratification of his treaties with Moscow and Poland, Brandt said, the four-power Berlin agreement will take effect and East-West German relations will normalize.

"This, our city," Brandt shouted above the din, "has better chances now than at any time since the war. This city knows: what is good for Berlin is also good for our country, and good for Europe. That is why I take up the appeal: delegates of the German parliament, listen to this city."

At the rally in the square where President Kennedy declared, "I am a Berliner," Brandt referred to a connection between his treaty with the Russians and their accord with the United States, Britain and France on Berlin . . . When things are better between East and West, it will be increasingly to the benefit of Berlin."

Lashing out at opposition party critics who say that while Brandt talks detente, German division remains and shooting along the Wall continues, Brandt declared: "Certainly at the end of this process the growths of the cold war must disappear . . . No one could and can bring me to legally recognize the division of our country — and this city . . .

"At the same time we must begin with the way things are . . . Normal relations to Communist states does not mean that ideological and social political differences are covered over."

Belfast sniper shoots down girl, 6, wounds her father

BELFAST, Sunday (UPI) — Gunfire in Belfast today killed a 6-year-old girl and wounded her father, an army spokesman said. In East Belfast, troops fired rubber bullets to disperse hundreds of rock-throwing Protestant youths.

The spokesman said the Roman Catholic youngster, not immediately identified, was walking with her parents along the Catholic side of Old Park Road when four shots were fired from Ardilea Drive, also a Catholic area, toward Protestant Heathfield Avenue. The girl died instantly and her father was hit in the legs.

The mother was not struck by any of the bullets but was hospitalized for shock, the army said. The spokesman said troops believed the sniper was firing on an army post on Heathfield Avenue.

Less than half an hour later, an army patrol found a 16-year-old girl lying with a stomach wound in a garden gateway in Duncarn Gardens. Police said she had been hit by a shot from the Roman Catholic New Lodge Road area. Her condition was not serious, police said.

Troops and police fought running battles with the Protestant youths in East Belfast who earlier attacked a group of Roman Catholics. Police said five persons were arrested and six policemen hurt, two of them requiring hospital treatment.

At the border town of Newry, police arrested four men after a rifle and M1 cabine were found in their possession during a routine check.

Sunday's shooting death brought to 317 the number of persons killed in Northern Ireland since August, 1969.

Okinawa's 1st election since war set in June

TOKYO, Sunday (UPI) — Okinawa, which for 27 years has been ruled by a U.S. military governor, announced today that it will hold its first election as a Japanese province since World War II on June 25.

The Okinawa election management committee notified the Japanese government that voting for the post of province governor and a 44-man provincial legislature will be held then.

The election takes place 41 days after Okinawa's reversion to Japan. The United States seized the tiny Pacific island in one of the hardest fought battles of the war between April and June, 1945. Two months later it was placed under U.S. military governorship.

The governor's race will draw national attention in Japan. Chobyo Yara, chief executive of the government that administered the affairs of Okinawa's Japanese-speaking people under American supervision, has announced he will seek four-year term as province governor.

Yara, bitterly critical of the reversion agreement because of Okinawa's continued use as an American military base, was elected chief executive in 1969 with the support of Okinawa's left-of-center parties. He will be opposed by Seisaku Ota, an Okinawan official of Japan's ruling Liberal-Democratic Party.

Soviet envoy charges Jewish League abuse

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Soviet Ambassador Jacob A. Malik charged Saturday that the Jewish Defense League had abused him and insulted his wife in a renewal of "hostile anti-Soviet provocation."

In letters made public here, he demanded that U.S. authorities "take all necessary measures to stop all such hostile actions" against the staff of the Soviet U.N. mission.

He said his mission had got an anonymous letter April 21 threatening physical violence against the staff.

Malik said that on April 19, as he sat in a car in front of the mission in New York, an individual wearing Zionist badges and carrying an anti-Soviet placard came and shouted abuse at him.

He related that the next day, some JDL members "burst into" the block where the mission is located.

AERIAL VIEW OF CARSON FACTORY FIRE

Explosion, fire rip Carson paint firm

Scores of firemen braved flying spray paint cans and roaring flames to battle a fire which destroyed a Carson paint factory Saturday.

The fire, which started at 12:57 p.m. after an explosion in a room where aerosol cans are filled with paint, destroyed the main building and two smaller structures of the Mar-Glo Paint and Wallpaper Co. at 189th and Main Streets.

The blaze was brought under control at 1:45 p.m.

"There were spray cans flying all over the place," said Inspector Chuck Cutter. "One of them put a healthy dent in a fire truck."

At one point danger from fumes and exploding tanks of lacquer forced the evacuation of houses near the plant.

Damage was estimated at $200,000. The cause of the explosion is being investigated.

Division Assistant Chief Dan Beckman led 180 Los Angeles County firemen from 25 companies in fighting the blaze. Thirty fire vehicles were used at the height of the fire.

One fireman suffered an injured leg.

Flames from the blaze leaped 150 feet into the air, and a column of smoke, visible for several miles, drew a crowd of several hundred spectators.

Construction strike looms in San Diego

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Major construction sites in San Diego County could be idled early Monday if a proposal to renew stalled talks between a laborers' union and contractors is not worked out today, it was learned Saturday.

Talks broke off late Friday between Local 89 of the Laborers' International Union of North America and three contractor groups. Included was the Building Contractors' Association, the Associated General Contractors and the Engineering and Grading Contractors' Association.

Union sources said their current contract expires at midnight today and the local's leadership already had strike authorization from its 6,600 members.

John Reid, chairman of the contractors' negotiating committee, said the union informed him after negotiations stalled Friday that they would call a strike. Reid said further talks were proposed for Wednesday, but the meeting was only tentative.

He estimated up to 40,000 workers would be idled if all crafts observed picket lines the laborers threatened to establish.

A spokesman for the two sides said they were 40 cents apart in a wage and fringe benefit package. Wages for construction workers in the local had a base of just below $6 an hour, the spokesman said. The local sought an added $2.40 in wages and fringe benefits. The last contractor offer reportedly was for a $2 increase.

Law group votes for pot initiative

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The bar association of San Francisco Saturday announced support for the "marijuana initiative" after members voted by a margin of more than two-to-one in favor of the measure.

3 escape as power yacht hits Palos Verdes rocks

Three Torrance men escaped with minor cuts and bruises Saturday evening when their power yacht struck rocks and sank off Palos Verdes.

Lifeguards said the 36-foot cabin cruiser, Icaye Sea, valued at $55,000, sank in 20 feet of water when it was pulled from rocks off Pt. Vincente.

The three men aboard, boat owner William Dempster, 49, of 16918 Kornblum Ave., his son Dale, 20, and Robert Weberg, 20, of 3435 W. 172nd St., Torrance, waded ashore with two lifeguards when the boat started to sink.

The yacht's engine failed at about 3:45 p.m, and a strong tide pulled the craft onto rocks about 25 yards offshore.

Two county lifeguards later attached lines from the Coast Guard cutter Point Bridge and lifeguard boat Baywatch Redondo to the stricken vessel, then waded ashore with the three Torrance men.

When the rescue craft pulled the stricken vessel off its shallow berth it started to ship water from a hole in the side of the hull, and finally sank in 20 foot water.

Workers say pay veto vote sure

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California State Employes Association reports it has collected more than enough signatures to qualify for the ballot a measure to prevent a governor from vetoing state worker pay increases.

CSEA officials said that more than 900,000 signatures on petitions have been collected for placing the initiative on the November ballot. To qualify a measure for the ballot, 520,806 signatures of registered voters are needed.

The initiative would eliminate the governor's veto power over pay raises proposed by the State Personnel Board, the State College Board of Trustees and the University of California board of regents. Under the measure, pay raises could be turned down only through a two-thirds vote of the Legislature.

The initiative drive was prompted by Gov. Reagan's veto last year of proposed salary increases for state workers approved by the Legislature.

ASTROLOGERS RIDING HIGH ON THE SIGNS OF 'PLANET X'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A new age of stability could accompany the possible discovery of "Planet X" according to San Francisco Bay Area astrologers who say they have been predicting additional members of the solar system for some time.

There are 12 zodical signs in the area of the sun but only nine identified planets, the astrologers say, meaning at least three planets remain to be discovered.

The new planet — whose existence was predicted by University of California scientists at Lawrence Livermore Laboratories — may be one know as Vulcan to astrologers, according to Macelle Brown, a South San Francisco astrologer.

Many astrologers believe Vulcan could bring an age of stability and practicality to a world now filled with emotion, she said.

But whatever its effects, she predicted considerable astrological impact for the proposed new planet due to its huge estimated size — believed to be 300 times that of the earth.

Profound changes in human consciousness have followed the discovery of each new planet, said Robin Newhouse, a San Francisco astrologer.

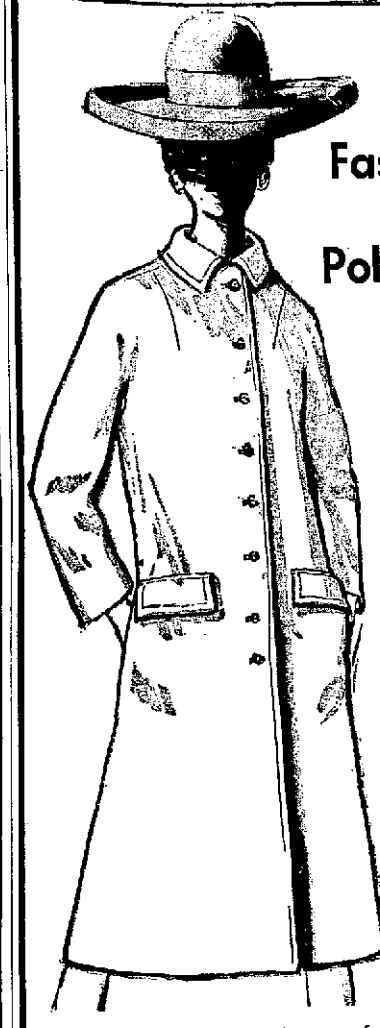

The 18th Century discovery of Uranus was followed by an age of revolution, Neptune's discovery witnessed a subsequent wave of interest in the psychic during the 19th Century, and with Pluto came the atom bomb, crisis and upheaval, she said.

They believe even more unusual events will follow the revelation of "Planet X," due to its unique characteristics as outlined by the scientists.

At last it can be told— Russ nipple crisis is over

By THEODORE SHABAD
New York Times Service

MOSCOW — The nipple crisis is over.

The word has come from M. P. Parfenov, deputy minister of the oil-refining and petrochemical industry.

To the undoubted delight of millions of babies in the Soviet Union, he announced a crash program intended to raise the production of nursing nipples and pacifiers from 19.3 million last year to 40 million by 1974. The Soviet population is 245 million. There are no statistics on nipple users.

The key to the program is 1RU-138, an experimental nipple-manufacturing machine with a potential output of 40 million nipples a year. It was ordered six years ago when the nipple shortage first loomed, but it is not yet functioning.

PARFENOV has ordered that it be in full operation by Oct. 1. Two of the ministry's divisions, the Administration of the Tire Industry and the Administration of the Rubber Footwear Industry, have been ordered to discipline those responsible for the delay.

The nipple affair yields a typical case history in the Soviet Union's valiant efforts to regear its economy from gigantic hydroelectric stations and supersonic airliners to more delicate, but equally essential, consumer products.

In an attempt to satisfy growing consumer demand in a country that has long gone without many of the goods taken for granted in the West, many of the Soviet government's ministries in charge of heavy industry have been ordered to devote at least part of their capacity to the manufacture of consumer goods.

And so it happened that the tire industry and the rubber footwear industry were made responsible for designing and installing equipment for the manufacture of nipples. It soon became evident that these agencies, concerned with weightier problems, did not have their hearts in the new assignment.

THE latest installment of the story began on Feb. 29, when the Moscow industrial daily, Sotsialisticheskaya Industriya, published a satiric article lamenting the absence of nipples.

The author reported that a Siberian friend who had just become a grandfather had written to him and asked for a couple of pacifiers, since Moscow was reputedly better supplied than Siberia.

Willing to be helpful, the writer, A. Yerokhin, canvassed Moscow pharmacies, but without success. The nipple shortage intrigued him, and he proceeded to make inquiries.

Soviet newspapers, all of them controlled by official agencies, have broad investigatory powers, particularly in seeking to curb inefficiency, shortages and waste.

YEROKHIN did not list all the agencies and research institutes he visited before he reached the Committe of Peoples Control, a watchdog agency.

There, Georgi M. Bystrov, a helpful inspector in the section on chemical fibers and rubber goods, filled Yerokhin in on the nipple shortage.

It seems that when the need for pacifiers first became evident in 1966, this nation's planners decided to install a nipple machine at the rubber-goods factory of Volzhsky, a new industrial city on the Volga.

The rubber industry's design institute in Moscow was charged with drafting blueprints for a machine that was expected to silence Soviet babies for the duration of more than one five-year plan.

IT TOOK years for the machine to be designed, built and installed, and when the day arrived and the button was pushed, it balked and refused to disgorge the badly needed nipples.

A high-level commission met in August, found the machine defective, and drew up a long report on what had to be done. There matters rested when the industrial newspaper took up the cause of Soviet babies.

Soviet ministries are expected to investigate and follow up any criticism of their activities in the press, and now Parfenov, the ministry official, has announced in the industrial daily that the nipple problem had been solved.

Sadat wins Moscow pledge of greater aid to Arabs

New York Times Service

MOSCOW — President Anwar El-Sadat of Egypt ended a seemingly perfunctory two-day visit to Moscow Saturday with Soviet pleges of more military aid and some encouragement of the view that the Arabs might use other than political means to recover territories lost to Israel in the 1967 war.

A communique made public after the Egyptian leader's departure for Cairo said the two sides had reached agreement on further strengthening of military cooperation."

"The taking of important appropriate measures in that direction was arranged," the statement added.

The communique thus confirmed speculation that additional Soviet military assistance to Cairo would be among the topics discussed by Sadat and the Soviet leaders. The speculation had been aroused by the presence of Gen. Husni Mubarak, the air force commander, in the Egyptian delegation.

The communique also said that in view of the continuing frustration of a political settlement in the Middle East, "the Arab states have every reason to use other means, too, to regain the Arab lands captured by Israel."

The Soviet Union thus appeared to pay at least lip service to Sadat's proclaimed intention of regaining the lost territories by force if necessary.

In the past Moscow has been hesitant to condone any but political methods to resolve the Middle East conflict.

Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist Party chief, is reported to have assured Sadat, however, that ultimately the Israelis would have to withdraw and the Arabs' cause would thus triumph.

Ex-envoy to U.S. named Turk chief

New York Times Service

ANKARA, Turkey — Suat Hayri Urguplu, a 60-year-old veteran of Turkish politics and a former ambassador to the United Satles, was named premier Saturday by President Cavdet Sunday.

His appointment was preceded by rumors of a direct takeover by the military, impatient for reforms that they have been pressing on parliamentary leaders. However, these rumors were squashed recently with the departure of the chief of the general staff and the heads of the army, navy and air force for staff exercises to the North Atlantic Alliance in Belgium. The military leaders returned to Turkey Saturday after the announcement about Urguplu's appointment.

800 busing foes at White House rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 800 persons turned out Saturday for a rally behind the White House to oppose school busing and were told "We have a rapport with this administration."

This assessment came from Irene McCabe, the Pontiac, Mich., mother who staged a 44-day-walk from her home to Washington to dramatize her opposition to school busing.

Mrs. McCabe and L. Brooks Patterson, general counsel for the National Council against Forced Busing, said John Ehrlichman, President Nixon's domestic affairs adviser, told them Friday that if Nixon's antibusing proposals are not passed by Congress or are struck down by the courts, the President will immediately send to Congress a constitutional amendment to bar busing.

Nixon's proposal calls for legislation imposing a moratorium on forced school busing.

Organizers of the rally, who had predicted an attendance of 5,000, obviously were disappointed by the turnout which included many who wore buttons supporting Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama for the presidency. Wallace rose to political power in Alabama as an ardent segregationist but has been soft-pedaling this issue in his national campaigning.

Two men selling "Wallace Hard Hats" were arrested on charges of violating a federal regulation against sale of goods in a park.

They put up some resistance and many in the crowd expressed anger at the arrests but Mrs. McCabe counseled the audience to ignore the incident.

Nixon will back busing amendment

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon will support a constitutional amendment to prohibit busing for racial balance in the schools if his bill to impose a moratorium on new busing orders stalls in Congress, the White House said Saturday.

"His view is that he is not against a constitutional amendment," press secretary Ronald Ziegler said. "He has stated that all along. It is simply a matter of the time involved."

Nixon last month proposed legislation prohibiting the courts from issuing new racial busing orders until July 1, 1973 or until Congress enacts new laws dealing with the subject.

Antiwar protests lessen in intensity

United Press International

About 3,000 perons gathered for antiwar rally in New York's Washington Square Park for the second weekend in a row Saturday, and about 1,300 protesters marched in the nation's capital for a much-heralded May Day demonstration.

Small marches were also reported in Los Angeles, Cleveland and Plattsburgh, N.Y. About 500 members of the Plattsburgh Spring Peace Program demonstrated peacefully at the Strategic Air Command base near that city close to the Canadian border.

There were signs that wave of antiwar demonstrations that broke out in the wake of U.S. Bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong was on the wane.

Campus guards evicted antiwar protesters from one Columbia University building Saturday afternoon. Two buildings were still held by protesters, but the rest of the university community largely ignored them. Two persons — neither of them a Columbia student — were arrested and charged with trespass and disorderly conduct.

ABOUT 75 antiwar demonstrators continued to occupy the Cornell University library, despite a court order barring the occupation.

University of Pennsylvania officials revealed that several files were stolen from offices in the administration building during a two-day sit-in by 200 antiwar protesters that ended Friday night. They said little other damage was done.

The Washington protesters were almost lost among tourists as they stepped off from the Lincoln Memorial for a march called by the National Peace Action Coalition. Only a few policemen were on hand.

The group marched 2½ miles to the Pentagon without incident. A platform with loudspeakers was setup at the foot of the stairs leading to the Pentagon's main entrance, where a rally was held. Only a handful of Pentagon security guards were on duty.

MOST Columbia students went about their weekend activities, taking little note of the buildings still held by antiwar demonstrators.

On Friday about 40 demonstrators moved out of physics laboratories after an all-night debate with faculty members and students opposed to the demonstrations.

A spokesman for Penn said most of the files stolen during the sit-in at the Administration building contained information on the university's budget and staff salaries.

He said the university court, composed of administrators, teachers and students, will meet within two weeks to hear cases of students identified as involved in the sit-in. Those convicted of violating the school's discipline code could be suspended for two years.

IN Atlanta about 40 sign-carrying demonstrators gathered in front of the federal information center to protest the war.

An estimated 400 persons staged an antiwar demonstration Saturday afternoon at the main gate of Ft. Ord.

There were no arrests reported and no one was hurt. Highway 1, on which the main gate is situated, was blocked off and on for about an hour.

Doctors cautioned on heart surgery

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Heart surgeons were warned Saturday to go slow on their exciting new operation, the artery by-pass, which will be performed this year on 35,000 Americans.

Ten per cent will die on the operating table but the future of the others is promising if uncertain.

Many surgeons are much more enthusiastic about the by-pass operation than they were about the heart transplants because of the high mortality rate among heart transplant patients.

The surgeons see the by-pass operation as a promise that death might be long postponed among victims of heart disease which now causes 674,000 U. S. deaths annually.

WHEN arteries or veins become narrowed or clogged by fat, blood flowing to the heart diminishes or halts, and heart muscle dies as a result. In a by-pass operation, a vein section is taken from the leg and used to make a by-pass around the clogged area.

At the Interamerican Congress of Cardiologists, Dr. Arthur Selzer, a San Francisco cardiologist, said much medical experience is necessary before the operations can be judged. Selzer himself had a heart attack five years ago and refuses to undergo the preliminary test to a by-pass.

THE TEST is an arteriogram in which a plastic tube and dye are inserted into arteries and pictured by X-ray. One out of 200 die from the test.

Dr. Herbert L. Abrams of Harvard, who performs the test, urged surgeons to be extra cautious with by-passes. He said 12 heart surgery procedures have been tried and rejected since 1938.

ERRANT WHALE ADOPTS FAMILY

Gigi having fun frightening surfers

United Press International

Gigi, the wandering baby whale released from captivity a month ago to see if she could survive in the ocean, apparently has been adopted by a momma whale and a poppa whale.

Navy helicopter pilots reported Saturday they had spotted a half-ton grey whale cavorting off the Carpinteria beach with two adult whales, sending surfers scurrying to shore.

"We feel sure we've found your critter," one pilot reported to Steve Leatherwood, director of the San Diego Marine Science Project who raised the whale from infancy.

Gigi has destinctive markings on her back, namely humps enclosing radio equipment for tracking. A week ago, her transmissions suddenly ended and there was worried speculation that she had died or that her batteries had gone dead.

But then a frisky baby whale showed up Friday evening offshore from the beach home of Roberta Bond, who alerted the coast guard and the Navy.

Leatherwood said Gigi was doing exactly what he expected, joining a small party of whales and skipping the mass migration north to the Bering Straits. She had made only 200 miles north from San Diego in the past month.

"She will not take life seriously," Leatherwood said. "She goofs off and plays around and does unwhalelike things. Surfacing to watch surfers is the sort of capricious behavior she has displayed. She thinks it's great fun."

Leatherwood said her behavior was bearing out his theory that not all gray whales migrate north and south every year but that a number of small parties live out their lives in isolated shoreline communities and are responsible for survival of the species.

Woman disabled by pills gets $500,000

OROVILLE (AP) — A 37-year-old woman has been awarded $500,000 by a Butte County jury which heard testimony that a drug firm's birth control pills paralyzed her and left her speechless for life.

Priscilla Looza, mother of 12 children, took pills in November 1967 that caused a blood clot in an artery leading to her brain, her attorneys said.

Scott Conley, attorney for the Detroit-based drug firm of Parke Davis & Co., said the decision was a "sympathy verdict" and added it would be appealed.

Mrs. Looza had asked for $1.4 million in damages for herself and her husband, Leo.

During the six-week trial, Mrs. Looza's attorneys argued the firm failed to give proper notification that the pills—Norlestrin—could cause blood clots.

Hollywood vice squad raids films

United Press International

Sixteen Los Angeles vice squad policemen equipped with "back seat search warrants" drawn on the spot by a cruising municipal judge Friday night raided 20 adult movie theaters, bars and penny arcades in search of pornography.

Municipal Court Judge George W. Trammell II accompanied the raiding force and drafted warrants on the spot when plain clothes detectives entered the establishment and returned to report they had seen pornographic movies and other allegedly obscene matter on display.

Police Lt. Robert E. Loomis, in charge of the raiding force, said the raids were aimed at "hard core pornography," which he defined as:

"The graphical depiction of acts of sexual intercourse, oral copulation, sodomy or masturbation."

Loomis said Trammell accompanied the raiders to prevent the alleged pornographic material from being moved before officers could obtain search warrants.

All the locations raided were in the Hollywood area.

KEY ISSUE IN TRIAL

The love letters of Angela Davis

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE — The love letters of Angela Davis, multilingual black scholar, sent past prison bars to George Jackson, black convict author, have become a key issue at Miss Davis' murder-kidnap-conspiracy trial.

Three have been admitted in evidence, and the state is pushing to show jurors a fourth "diary" type letter so personal they say it may be "embarrassing."

The state says the letters portray a passion so consuming it could have led to the Aug. 7, 1970 Marin County shootout in which four died. Miss Davis, they charge, wanted to exchange hostages for Jackson's freedom. The defense says the letters show love — no more.

In the three letters, Miss Davis, in her own words, tells how "abruptly . . . spontaneously" she was lovestruck when she first saw Jackson at one of his court hearings. He was one of three unrelated black "Soledad Brothers" charged with killing a prison guard.

The story of their love is told in segments of the lengthy letters — parts written in the pre-dawn hours of June 2, June 10 and June 22, 1970 — two months before the deadly shootout:

In the first letter, she writes:

"If I start by dropping the mask and say in all naturalness: I have come to love you very deeply, I count on you to believe me, George. I have used these words very seldom in my 26 years — because I could not have meant them very often.

"Believe me, it happened so abruptly, so spontaneously. I was not seeking love when I walked into a Salinas courtroom on Friday, May 8, 1970. And so it is difficult to articulate it further . . . My love, your love, reinforces my fighting instincts. It tells me to go to war."

In the same letter, she adds:

"I am rambling, dreaming that the words from my pen are sounds absorbed by your ears, regretting that I am lying on the only warm spot in this big double bed. It is 2:30 a.m. . . .

"The night after I saw you in court, for the first time in months, I dreamt or at least the dream was significant enough to work its way into my consciousness we were together, fighting pigs, winning. We were learning to know each other. I love you."

Eight days later, June 10, she writes: "Only you could imagine the intense frustration which has accompanied all my daily actions, gestures, thoughts. I have wanted to reach you for so long. But not all has been frustration: vicarious joy in absurbing second person anecdotes out of your past, in catching glimpses of a letter or two written to your family, all the subtle contests to outpraise a beautiful black warrior."

She concludes: "It is very late — my eyes are closing . . . George, my feelings for you run very deep. My memory fails me when I search in the past for an encounter with a human being as strong, as beautiful as you.

"Something in you has managed to smash through the fortress I long ago erected around my soul. I wonder what it is. I'm very glad. I love you. Hasta la Victoria Siempre (until victory forever) Angela."

The last letter, written hurriedly June 22, during a visit to San Jose for a Soledad Borthers committee meeting, she writes: "Man, I have gotten into a lot of trouble — but I don't give a damn. I love you. I love my people. That's all that matters — liberation by any means necessary . . ."

Indicating she has received Jackson's letters, she adds: "I try to avoid artificial modesty — but I must admit that I hardly recognize myself in your words; this doesn't mean that I won't do everything in my power to be that person, that Black woman you see in me.

". . . It has taken me a while to convince myself that George is not a dream, a wish-dream which evaporates when it comes down to the hard realities. But you are those realities — and everything else. I wish I could touch you — we could touch each other here now."

Miss Davis, fired from her UCLA philosophy teacher's job three days before she wrote the last letter, added a reference to this:

"I will write soon. I am completely free. fired, grades in, there are beautiful plans ahead."

Chinese team ends tour of U.S. today

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mainland China's table tennis delegation leaves for a playing tour of Mexico today after a 20-day, eight-city whirl through the United States.

Smiling members of the team and delegation posed for official photographs and later enjoyed a lavish barbecue banquet at a posh country club in Napa County's wine country Saturday.

OFFICIALS at the club overcame a brief snag in preparations for the barbecue, sending couriers about 50 miles to San Francisco when team members asked that mainland and not Nationalist Chinese wines be served.

The eight-man, six woman team dined on pork, chicken, fish and fresh fruit at the barbecue.

Earlier in the day, four or five team members tried out a 10-speed bicycle owned by a club member and others received invitations to play tennis.

The team returned to Napa — headquarters during its four-day stay in Northern California — after a banquet Friday night near Stanford University.

"We hope our friendship and understanding can be improved by this visit," the team's top player, Churang Tse-tung, told a group of about 400 persons.

"I will never forget your warm welcome and I will give it to my country when I return."

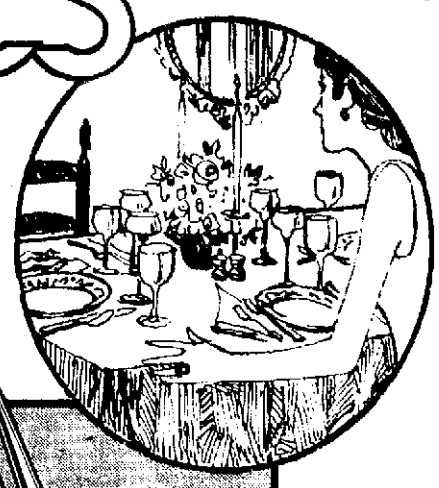

CHUANG ALSO made a rare political remark, saying the people of mainland China have "witnessed rapid development" during the past 22 years of Communist rule. "Our living standards have risen constantly since the revolution and we feel confident our motherland will become even more powerful," he said.

GOP convention decision this week

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Republican National Chairman Robert Dole said Saturday only Miami and San Diego are under consideration for the Republican national convention, but that Miami has not submitted a bid.

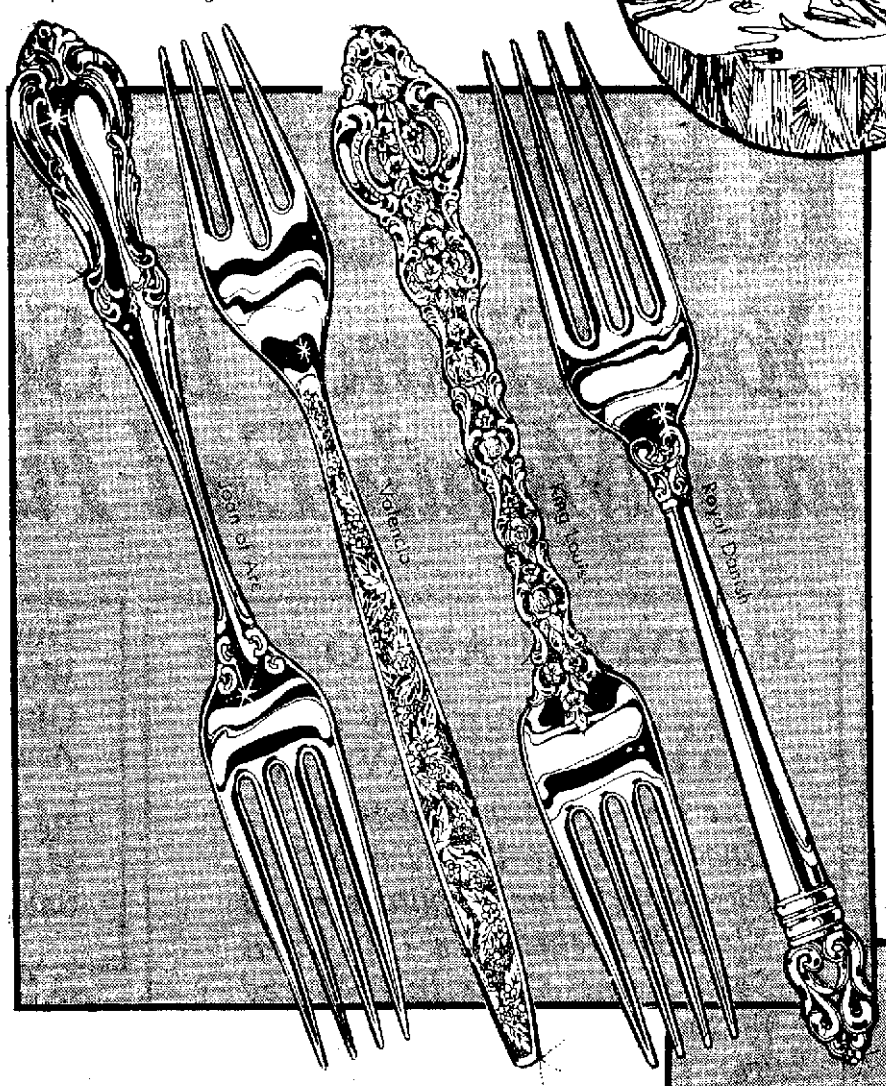

"Hopefully," Dole added, "A decision will be reached next week" when the Republican National Committee meets in Washington Friday and Saturday.

ODDS ON

LEICESTEI, England (UPI) — Ron Hallam has introduced something new in his off-track betting shops — a topless young lady chalking up race results on the board. Jane Siddons, 21, had the first crack at the job last week and said while her boss feels her presence will increase trade, she is not so sure.

"I doubt whether many will even notice me," she said. "They get far too excited over their bets."

ADVICE

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Police Sgt. Melvin Cuckovich told a thief a few years ago, "You should be ashamtd of yourself, stealing those bicycles from children." Cuckovich saw the man again last week. He was in handcuffs at the police station and recognized the sergeant.

"I took your advice," the handcuffed man said. "I've been stealing cars."

BIGOT

OLD TOWN, Maine (AP) — City Council pondered then decided not to name a new street for a French Jesuit of centuries ago, Father Bigot.

The streets in the city's newest subdivision had been named after well-known Jesuits. But Councilors decied they "just didn't want a Bigot Street in Old Town." They named it, instead, LaBree Lane.

STATION

WASKEFIELD, England (UPI) — A jury last week found demolition contractor Reginald Sedgwick innocent of stealing the Cleckheaton Railway Station.

A prosecutor alleged during the two-day trial that Sedgwick stole large quantities of metal, stone and timber belonging to British Railways and had, in effect, stolen the disused station.

Sedgwick said he pulled the station down in good faith after a "Mr. Watson" of a development firm hired him to do the job.

OFFER

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath has sent a no-thanks reply to a member of Parliament who offered the bachelor leader his little black book to choose likely ladies to accompany him to public functions.

Heath told Laborite Leslie Huckfield, also a bachelor, in a written response distributed in the House of Commons that he would decline, "notwithstanding your kind offer of advice based on your own extensive experience."

EXCUSE

VIENNA (UPI) — Josef Bindr, a former mail guard, recently convicted of mail theft, gave the judge a novel excuse — he had used the money to buy an Inn and was only trying to be middleclass.

When asked if that was the proper way to succeed, he replied, "no, I suppose not, but I intended to repay the debts out of my earnings.'

'Cut tax for short people, no short shrift for longs'

BOSTON (AP) — With tongue firmly in cheek, one of the government's top tax officials suggested Saturday that short people pay half the taxes of tall people to compensate "for the inequities thrust upon the short people of the world."

Edwin S. Cohen, the Treasury Department's assistant secretary for Tax Policy and a deceptive 5 feet 5 said all people 5 feet 6 and under should pay half the tax rates of those over that height.

HE SAID the proposal would be easily administered by an objective standard and provides "a high degree of equity and fairness in the tax structure."

In remarks to the Federal Tax Institute of New England, Cohen said that officials over 5 feet 6 in the Treasury opposed his idea, but he added most of the women workers like it.

In fact, he said, because of the division, he has become a charter member of an organization known as the Association of Short People or ASP's.

"To administer this system the ASP's are advocating a restoration of the old form 1040A so that we can once again have a short-form and a long-form tax return."

ON A serious note, Cohen said that claims by senators and congressmen that tax reform proposals would produce large amounts of revenue are "vastly exaggerated."

He said that advocates of tax reform on Capitol Hill should recognize that attempting to close so-called loopholes "are serious problems that require calm, deliberative reflection."

"The issues are far too important for hasty action," Cohen said.

Cohen said that in many instances sudden tax changes "made without substitution of the other programs would damage the economy and endanger important social goals."

HE SAID proposals to tax capital gains at death are not likely to produce significant amount of revenue in the short run. Most of the pending bills would tax only the gains accruing after enactment of the new law, he said.

Instead of raising $2 billion to $3 billion as some claim, there would be "relatively little revenue effect for some years to come," Cohen said.

He said the same is true of proposals to tax interest on state and local government securities since it would apply only to future bond issues. "Moreover any proposal would inevitably require an alternative subsidy, which also would prevent any substantial net revenue gain," he said.

COHEN said it would be unwise now to limit, as some lawmakers have suggested, tax benefits to real estate investment. If it is done, he said, a new government program would have to be substituted to replace the tax incentive.

Cohen, joining Treasury Secretary John B. Connally and other officials in opposing tax reform this year, also criticized efforts to speed up tax write-offs under depreciation regulations and to change the oil and gas depletion allowances.

SEN. KENNEDY AT MEDICAL CONVENTION
Won't Now Endorse Any One in Running

Kennedy repeats: not a candidate

Associated Press

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy reiterated Saturday that he is not a candidate for president and won't endorse any other Democrat befort the nomination.

"It is my intention not to support any candidate until the nomination," Kennedy said in reply to a questioner who asked if the Massachusetts Democrat would consider backing Sen. George McGovern.

Kennedy said he wouldn't run for the presidency because "My first responsibility is to the family of my brother, and my own," he added.

During the question-and-answer session after a speech in support of a national health insurance program, Kennedy said he does not favor political endorsements. "I think the people ought to be telling the politicians who to vote for," he said.

In a press conference before the speech to the national convention of the Student American Medical Association, an organization of medical school students, Kennedy flatly denied he was a candidate for the presidency.

"No, I'm not going to run," he said.

Kennedy called the present system of health care "indefensible," in his address to the medical students. "We must cover every American with a single comprehensive national health insurance program," he said.

"In no other country in the world do so many people pay so much for health and receive so little benefit," he said.

He called for support for a proposed national system of health insurance. He said it would replace private health insurance carriers "who are money changers in the temple of American health," and guilty of "irresponsible profiteering."

"Health care ought to be a basic right for all our people," he said, "not just an expensive privilege for the few."

$1 million Demo aid from exec

Associated Press

The board chairman of Kentucky Fried Chicken disclosed Saturday that he is personally underwriting $1 million of expenses for a Democratic Party fund-raising telethon but hopes for donations from "the little guy."

John Y. Brown of Louisville, Ky., where the big take-out chicken franchise is headquartered, confirmed in a Los Angeles interview that he's underwriting all but $250,000 of the expected $1.25-million costs for the previously announced 19-hour telethon.

THE MARATHON fund-raiser, to be carried by the American Broadcasting Co., is aimed at wiping out the Democratic Party's current $9.3-million debt, he said.

"If we can't get the party out of bankruptcy we're not going to be effective in the fall," he stated.

Brown said he was in Los Angeles helping to make arrangements for the July 8-9 telethon.

"I HOPE SO" he replied "I'm optimistic that we'll have a good program. We have an outstanding lineup of entertainers.

The list includes Glen Campbell, Andy Williams, Warren Beatty, Paul Newman, Alan King, Carol Burnett and Shirley MacLaine.

Simple tax form advocated

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Atty. Fred W. Chel, Democratic candidate for Assembly in the East Long Beach-Signal Hill 39th District, has proposed state income tax be calculated as a percentage of one's federal return, using a single form.

Under the present system, said Chel, taxpayers must fill out a separate state tax return each year in spite of the fact that the information on both federal and state tax returns is essentially identical.

Chel proposes that taxpayers fill out only the federal tax return and send a copy to the state Franchise Tax Board. The state tax due would be a percentage of the federal tax paid.

"This method," said Chel, "would eliminate the unnecessary duplication of effort by California and result in saving many thousands upon thousands of tax dollars in both printing and processing of forms.

"The solution of this bureaucratic duplication is so simple that it should have been adopted many years ago to save the taxpayers both considerable money and immeasurable agony."

SHARP ENDORSEMENTS

Long Beach City Councilman Wayne B. Sharp, 7th District, announced he has received endorsements from virtually every major labor union in tht Long Beach area in his re-election campaign.

Sharp, praised as "a man of the people" in endorsements by eight local labor unions, said' "I am indeed grateful and humble to receive the backing of all these fine working men and women. Throughout my years on the Long Beach City Council I have always maintained an open door policy to all the residents of Long Beach. I shall continue this policy afttr my successful reelection."

Endorsers announced are: Bartenders Union Local 686 (James Hamilton, secretary-treasurer); Culinary and Hotel Workers Local 68 (James Stevens, secretary-treasurer); Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union Local 1-128 (Bill Braugton, secretary-treasurer).

Also, Teamsters Warehouse and Helpers Union Local 572; Teamsters Local 962, Teamsters Local 88 and past secretaries Joe Perkins and Claude Ripley; Longshoremens Union, ILWU Local 13 (Kirk Johnson, president); Marine Clerks and Stewards Union Local 13 (Joe Goren, port agent).

Councilman Sharp said he is campaigning on a program of continued high quality of city services but without the need to increase property taxes.

SPURGIN ON AIR

Herbert A. Spurgin, candidate for Los Angeles County supervisor, 4th District, said tougher guideline for industrial waste permits are needed to keep air pollution health hazards from reaching disaster proportions.

The Air Pollution Control Board spends more than $500,000 annually in control measures, he said, "principally in spotting the most flagrant violators ahd levying fines of insignificant amounts which the polluters can well afford. Yet the county continues to issue permits to industry that spews pollutants into the air."

DONN MAY CAMPAIGN

Don May, 3rd District candidate for Long Beach City Council, announced his campaign chairmen J. C. "Jim" Hoffman and E. C. "Gene" Hoffman, assisted by Virginia Christensen and Pauline Singer as co-chairmen.

May's finance committee will be headed by Forrest Huffstettler, Dave Camp, W. J. "Bud" Sieg and Glen Copeland. In charge of candidate coffee hours are Elva Dudley, Marcy Maurer and Isabel Patterson.

The Hoffmans said, "We have known Don May for many years. His knowledge of our area and its problems will make him an effective councilman."

BELLFLOWER DEMOS

Representatives of three Democratic presidential candidates will speak at a meeting of the Bellflower Democratic Club at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the administration building lounge of the Bellflower School District, 16703 S. Clark St., Bellflower.

Doug Bruce, law student, will speak for Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn.; Howard Ostroff, a former speaker for former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, will speak for Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and Lloyd Napier, manager of the Manpower Development Program for the Shuttle Proposal, North American Rockwell, will represent New York Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm.

HHH, McGovern one-on-one match looms in Ohio

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Political Writer

Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and George S. McGovern meet Tuesday in the closest thing yet to a one-on-one match for the front runner's role in the Democratic presidential campaign, with Ohio the political arena and 153 nominating votes the prizes.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington is campaigning there, too, but with Sen. Edmund S. Muskie out of the campaign lineup, Humphrey and McGovern are the top-ranked Ohio contenders.

Humphrey is generally rated the Ohio favorite, but McGovern said he expects to pick up a substantial bloc of delegates there.

Ohio's is one of a half-dozen Democratic presidential primaries in the next seven days, and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is involved in more of them than anybody else.

IT COULD be a pivotal week for Wallace to assemble a force of committed delegates that would give him clout at the Democratic National Convention, particularly if, as he forecasts, it takes several ballots to settle on a nominee for the White House.

Wallace is facing Humphrey in Indiana Tuesday and, on the same day, seeking to gain control of the delegation from Alabama in a contest with his home state foes.

On Thursday it's Tennessee, where Wallace is a runaway favorite. None of the other candidates have campaigned there.

Saturday, Democrats vote in North Carolina, where former Gov. Terry Sanford, now president of Duke University, is trying to bar Wallace's path. Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York also is campaigning in North Carolina.

In national terms, the stakes are highest in Ohio, and they went up when Muskie announced he was quitting active competition in the primaries, while remaining a presidential candidate.

After a succession of primary defeats, Muskie thus pinned his hopes on the possibility that a divided convention might turn to him in deadlock.

HUMPHREY went to Ohio buoyed by his first major primary victory, in Pennsylvania last Tuesday. He claimed another boost in the Muskie campaign dropout, saying it "should be a great help to me." He said Democrats who favored Muskie in Ohio should "find it very comfortable to be supporting my candidacy."

McGovern, who didn't plan a major campaign effort in Ohio until his Wisconsin primary victory on April 4, has acknowledged Humphrey is ahead there, but said he might yet pull an upset.

Humphrey campaigned in both Indiana and Ohio Saturday, vowing in Terre Haute, Ind., to seek Soviet and Chinese support in freeing U.S. prisoners in Indochina and hitting the Nixon administration's farm and economic policies in speeches in Ohio.

He charged in a speech at a labor dinner in the Cleveland suburb of Parma that the administration's policy on price rollbacks and refunds is "a monumental fraud that once again gives business a break at the expense of the working family" because it requires those seeking refunds to go to court at their own expense.

McGOVERN was endorsed at a Cleveland news conference by a battery of black leaders, mostly from Michigan and California, and then took them to Cincinnati for campaigning in a black suburb there. He is seeking to cut into Humphrey's support in black areas.

Jackson attacked both Humphrey and McGovern at a Cleveland news conference, calling the Minnesota senator vague on key issues such as school busing and amnesty for draft evaders and criticizing McGovern for backing third-party presidential candidate Henry Wallace in 1948.

McGovern called the charge "pathetic" noting that he had voted for President Harry S. Truman in 1948 after becoming disillusioned with Wallace. He was a 26-year-old graduate student at Northwestern University at the time.

George Wallace made Indiana campaign appearances in Indianapolis and Evansville.

There is no presidential preference primary in Ohio. The competition is for delegates. Humphrey, McGovern, Muskie, Jackson and former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy all are fielding full slates of candidates for the 38 delegates to be elected statewide. The other 115 are apportioned among the congressional districts.

McGovern has been campaigning full time in Ohio since the Massachusetts landslide he scored last Tuesday. Humphrey has concentrated his efforts there, while skipping back and forth across the border to Indiana. And Jackson has been stumping the state since April 14.

JACKSON has increasingly concentrated his campaign fire on McGovern, portraying him as the candidate of the left and accusing him of advocating appeasement. He says that if the Democrats nominate the South Dakota senator, they will risk the ideological division and defeat that beset the Republicans with Barry Goldwater eight years ago.

McGovern pushed his criticism of U.S. policy in South Vietnam, and said he offers "a constructive alternative" to Wallace.

Humphrey emphasized economic issues and his claim to be the candidate of the center. His forces hoped to gain stepped-up labor backing in Ohio, where Muskie had the endorsement of leaders of the United Auto Workers of America.

With Muskie's withdrawal, the prospect is that many of the state's top Democratic names will be missing from the roster of delegates at the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach.

Gov. John J. Gilligan is, for example, one of those on the Muskie slate of delegates. Gilligan said he wasn't going to campaign, but would remain "a Muskie man as long as he's in it."

In neighboring Indiana, where the primary awards 76 delegates, the central issue was Wallace. Nineteen Indiana delegates go to the statewide winner in a presidential preference vote, the rest to the candidate with a plurality in each of the state's 11 congressional districts.

A stop-Wallace drive was under way there, backed by state party leaders and organized labor. Humphrey has urged Democrats on his Indiana campaign forays not to let the state "turn the block back" by giving Wallace a victory.

Muskie's name is on the Indiana ballot, too, but he dropped that campaign even before he quit the others.

ELSEWHERE in the primary schedule:

—The District of Columbia will elect delegates to cast its 15 nominating votes in Miami Beach. The competition is between a slate of delegates pledged to favorite-son Walter E. Fauntroy, the capital's delegate to Congress, and one running as uncommitted. A leader of the uncommitted slate said there is considerable sentiment for McGovern among its candidates.

—In Alabama, Wallace is trying to take control of a 37-vote delegation in a complex election in which defeat would be a national embarrassment.

—Tennessee is electing 49 delegates, and the odds heavily favor Wallace on a ballot that lists 11 Democratic names. That primary will commit the delegation for the first two convention ballots.

McGovern's forces opened a campaign headquarters in Nashville, but that is the closest thing to a campaign challenge.

—In North Carolina, Sanford and Wallace are competitors. Mrs. Chisholm can gain a share of the 64 delegates if she captures at least 15 per cent of the pesidential preference vote.

Jackson and Muskie also are on the ballot.

Humphrey rests future on centrist strategy

By AL EISELE
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The long, lonely comeback trail of Hubert Humphrey finally began to look like the road to success last week.

Humphrey's victory in Tuesday's important Pennsylvania primary and Sen. Edmund Muskie's decision to drop out of the rest of the 1972 primaries provided the first solid evidence that Humphrey has chosen the right strategy in this third try for the presidency.

By knocking Muskie out of the race, Humphrey took a giant step toward the first goal in his carefully planned comeback scenario — proving that he is the authentic spokesman for what he calls "the vital progressive center of the Democratic Party."

EVER SINCE he first began seriously considering another presidential campaign in early 1971, Humphrey has maintained that the next Democratic presidential nominee would be chosen from the historic center of the party and not from its right or left fringes.

Humphrey will try to prove that theory and secure his place as the party's chief centrist candidate on Tuesday, when he battles his two remaining principal rivals, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota and Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, in the Ohio and Indiana primaries.

However, Humphrey clearly regards his old friend McGovern as his principal rival for the Democratic nomination, and is concentrating his major effort on Tuesday in Ohio, where he will have his first head-on confrontation with McGovern, rather than Indiana, where Wallace is his only opponent.

HUMPHREY hopes to pick up the lions's share of Ohio's 153 convention delegates, but he also is trying to push McGovern further to the left in the Democratic spectrum by running up a large vote among the state's 1.4 million labor union members and 970,000 blacks to emphasize McGovern's weakness among voters who have long been considered the backbone of the party.

After a succession of primary defeats, Muskie thus pinned his hopes on the possibility that a divided convention might turn to him in deadlock.

HUMPHREY went to Ohio buoyed by his first major primary victory, in Pennsylvania last Tuesday. He claimed another boost in the Muskie campaign dropout, saying it "should be a great help to me." He said Democrats who favored Muskie in Ohio should "find it very comfortable to be supporting my candidacy."

McGovern, who didn't plan a major campaign effort in Ohio until his Wisconsin primary victory on April 4, has acknowledged Humphrey is ahead there, but said he might yet pull an upset.

Humphrey campaigned in both Indiana and Ohio Saturday, vowing in Terre Haute, Ind., to seek Soviet and Chinese support in freeing U.S. prisoners in Indochina and hitting the Nixon administration's farm and economic policies in speeches in Ohio.

McGOVERN was endorsed at a Cleveland news conference by a battery of black leaders, mostly from Michigan and California, and then took them to Cincinnati for campaigning in a black suburb there. He is seeking to cut into Humphrey's support in black areas.

In both states, Humphrey's basic strategy remains the same as it was in Pennsylvania — to present himself as the leader of the party's rank and file and the candidate most likely to defeat President Nixon in the vital Northeastern industrial states next fall.

Humphrey faces McGovern and Wallace in separate primaries again the following week, taking on McGovern in Nebraska and Wallace in West Virginia on May 9. Although he is planning to campaign in both states and would particularly like to wipe out the memory of his disastrous 1960 defeat in West Virginia, Humphrey doesn't regard either Nebraska or West Virginia as crucial to his hopes for the nomination.

THE PRIMARY that he does consider crucial, however, is on June 6 in California, according to his campaign manager, Jack Chestnut. "California is the final battleground," Chestnut said last week. "It's the primary that we and McGovern are both aiming at."

Chestnut pointed out that California is a winner-take-all primary with 271 delegates, and added, "The winner in California will win the nomination."

Chestnut said the New York primary June 20, which has a high priority in McGovern's planning, is not as crucial even though it has 278 delegates. New York, he pointed out, is not a winner-take-all primary and delegates are not identified on the ballot with the candidate they are pledged to support, thereby making it more difficult for any one candidate to capture all or most delegates.

CHESTNUT ALSO disclosed that Humphrey plans to ignore the May 23 Oregon primary, where all presidential candidates are automatically entered.

Chestnut feels Muskie's candidacy showed the first fatal signs of weakness when he came in fourth in the April 4 Wisconsin primary and that "we just put nails in the coffin in Pennsylvania."

Humphrey moved quickly last week to lure Muskie supporters into his camp. He sent telegrams to all 135 delegates won by Muskie in the early primaries and convention states, and contacted every major Muskie supporter to ask for support.

"I have a feeling that those for Sen. Muskie as an active candidate would find it comfortable to be supporting my candidacy," Humphrey said last week in Akron, Ohio.

It is fitting that Humphrey's first test of strength against McGovern, the most liberal of his rivals, comes in the state where the mythical "average American voter" resides. According to the 1969 political best-seller, "The Real Majority," the average American voter is a 47-year-old wife of a middle-income machinist who lives on the outskirts of Dayton.

The book, which cautioned liberal Democrats against becoming preoccupied with the young, the poor and blacks and urged them to pay more attention to the average Americans concerned about "disruptive social change," has been Humphrey's political bible since it was published in 1969.

But whether it goes by the name of the real majority or the progressive vital center, it means the same thing to Humphrey.

Security promised for meets

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The city of Miami Beach was promised Saturday more than $1 million and other federal assistance for security maintenance if the Republican as well as the Democratic national convention is held in the Florida city.

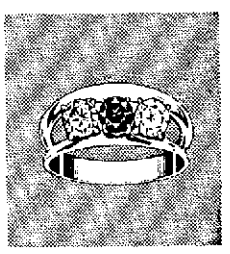

The pledge of broad federal aid for security was sought by Miami Beach officials who feared that back-to-back conventions would overtax the city's resources and attract protesters and demonstrators who might cause damage in the resorort town.

REPUBLICANS want to shift their convention scheduled to start Aug. 21, from San Diego where they have been plagued by money and housing problems. The Democratic Convention opens in Miami Beach on July 10.

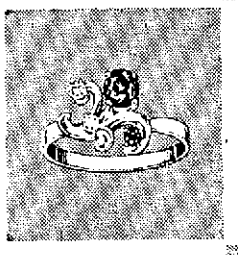

Jerris Leonard, administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, gave the federal government's assurances of security assistance for both conventions at a meeting with Miami Beach officials Saturday.

The Miami Beach City Council, which considers the federal security aid as critical to inviting the Republicans, is expected to consider the pledge at a meeting Wednesday and decide whether to invite the Republicans. The Republicans already have asked for an invitation, but the council has held it up pending a resolution of the security and other problems.

McGovern strategists see victory if . . .

By R. W. APPLE JR.
New York Times Service

COLUMBUS, Ohio — For the first time, strategists for Sen. George McGovern can foresee a series of developments, none of them outlandishly unlikely, that could bring him within reach of winning the Democratic presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Some other politicians, though not a majority by any means, are beginning to concede that such an occurrence — almost unthinkable when April began — is now possible.

Most Democratic professionals continue to anticipate a multiballot convention, producing either a victory for Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey or, despite the semi withdrawal of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, a deadlock.

THE calculations of the strategists and analysts are turning away from abstract "scenarios" toward careful delegate counts in an effort to discover whether anyone can come close to the 1,509 delegate votes needed for a majority at the convention, which opens on July 10 in Miami Beach. Delegates who will cast 709 of the 3,016 votes — almost one-quarter of the total — have now been chosen.

For McGovern, the South Dakota liberal, a substantial bloc of Ohio votes — a minimum of 59 out of 153 — is vital. That, his counselors say, was one reason he decided to devote at least $200,000 and a week of his time to Ohio's primary on Tuesday. Another was a poll, completed last weekend, showing him with 21 per cent of the vote here, close behind Humphrey, with 26 per cent, and Muskie, with 22 per cent.

In the first six primaries, McGovern has won 210.5 delegate votes—4.5 in New Hampshire, 13 in Illinois, 54 in Wisconsin, 102 in Massachusetts and 37 in Pennsylvania.

RICHARD STEARNS, his coordinator for nonprimary states, whose projections have been very accurate in recent weeks, expects the senator to amass 300 votes in these states.

He has already won or laid the ground work for winning about 150 in such states as Arizona, Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas, Virginia, Idaho, Vermont and Wyoming.

Stearns expects McGovern to do about as well in states that begin their selection process soon, such as Kentucky, Oklahoma, Texas, Missouri and Connecticut.

McGovern is heavily favored in the Nebraska, Oregon and South Dakota primaries and may have moved ahead in Rhode Island, once considered Muskie country. A new poll by the Providence newspapers reportedly shows him in first place in that state.

In addition, he should win some delegates in the Michigan, Maryland, New Mexico and New Jersey primaries, none of them winner-take-all. Only in Florida, so far, has McGovern failed to capture at least a few delegates, even in losing efforts.

FRANK MANKIEWICZ, McGovern's senior strategist, said in an interview this weekend that "by conservative estimate we should get 190 delegates" out of thoses eight contests. He gave the senator only 30 of 132 delegates in Michigan, ceding the majority to Humphrey and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama.

Taking the three categories together—delegates already elected in primaries, the projected results in the nonprimary states and projected results in future primaries — the McGovern forces arrive at a total of approximately 700 votes. To that, they hope to add at least 50 here in Ohio, all 271 in California on June 6 and about 230 of 278 in New York on June 20, for a grand total of 1,250.

McGovern would then have to gain an additional 259 votes in preballoting maneuvers, either from former backers of Muskie, about 25 of whom are already favorably disposed toward him, or from among the ranks of the uncommitted.

Ordinarily, a candidate so close to going over the top would have little difficulty in doing so, but resistance to McGovern by labor leaders, who control many of the uncommited votes, and by Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago, who controls another large bloc, could make the task difficult.

An endorsement from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts just before the first ballot — something the senator has said privately that he would be willing to do — could prove decisive with a large number of delegates.

Eight hard weeks of campaigning lie ahead of the convention, of course, and events could upset the McGovern staff's calculations. The most tenuous of their assumptions would seem to center around California. Without a victory there, it is doubtful whether the South Dakotan could be nominated, and his own polls currently show him a few points behind Humphrey.

The former vice president currently trails McGovern in committed delegates, 232.5 to 77, according to the latest New York Times tabulation. He will gain if he wins ancitipated victories in such big states as Indiana and Michigan. He also has hidden strength among the uncommitted delegates.

But Humphrey is seriously handicapped by weak organization in the nonprimary states, where he scored heavily in 1968. Unless he wins in California, he is likely to go to Miami Beach well shy of a majority.

One senior party official foresees the following breakdown of delegate strength: 1,200 for McGovern, 900 for Humphrey, 300 for Wallace, 350 uncommitted, 150 for Muskie and 100 for other candidates.

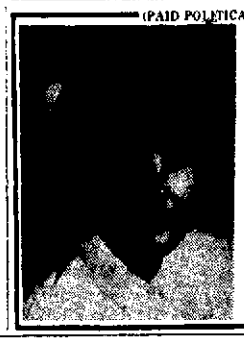

If McGovern then failed in his run at 1,509, Humphrey would have his chance. If he also failed, a deadlock would be in prospect, to be broken in a way that few Democratic professionals are ready to predict.

Gets Things Done!

DIAL 432-3451

ACTION LINE is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write ACTION LINE, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801, or dial 432-3451 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., Monday through Friday. Questions to be answered are selected for their general interest and helpfulness. Please, do not send original documents you wish returned.

Testing

I have heard about tests you can take to receive credit for two years of college, but have been unable to learn the details. Can ACTION LINE help with this? D.H.W., Cerritos.

You probably are referring to the College Level Examination Program tests. These tests were given in a pilot program to freshmen applicants at San Francisco and Bakersfield State Colleges last fall. There were five tests, each worth six college credits. A student who passed all five became an instant sophomore if he enrolled in the school giving him the tests. David Brooks, public affairs spokesman for the State Colleges, told ACTION LINE the tests are an experiment in educational innovation. The testing probably will continue, but it isn't certain at this time which campuses will be involved, Brooks said. You can call the admissions offices at various state colleges in mid-summer to see if they will offer the tests.

Mission possible

Years ago we visited a Catholic church that had a courtyard with beautiful paintings around the walls and it also had a small replica of the Madonna of Lourdes of France. It was somewhere in the north Los Angeles area or in Pasadena, if I remember correctly. I've asked so many people where it is, but no one seems to know. We have company coming from the East that would enjoy seeing it. Maybe you might know. Mrs. E.L., Long Beach.

You undoubtedly visited the Mission San Gabriel, said the Rev. Francis Weber, archivist with the Archdiocese of Los Angeles. The paintings you speak of were representations of the 14 Stations of the Cross, and were painted by an Indian in 1810, he said. The convert made his own paints with a base of olive oil using native wildflowers for the pigment. The paintings were moved inside to protect them. The mission is located at 537 .W Mission Drive, San Gabriel.

Visa advice

My finance is a Japanese citizen. He is visiting the United States on a tourist visa which can be extended only three times. His final extension runs out in mid-summer. We plan to marry, but we can't manage it until September. If my fiance leaves the country when his visa expires and goes to Canada, could he then reenter the United States and apply for a new tourist visa. If not, could he apply for permanent resident status if I marry him by proxy? .KC., Long Beach

The answer is no to both questions. Your fiance will have to leave when his visa expires, but you can take steps to enable him to return. He can go to Canada rather than return to Japan. After he has left the country, you should contact the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 300 N. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles, and request a fiance petition (for I129-F). The petition will be forwarded to whichever U.S. Consul's office is nearest to where your fiance is staying. The counsul's office then will issue a special fiance's visa. If you are married within 90 days after your fiance returns to the United States, he can file for permanent status.

Snap course

I am a fairly advanced amateur photographer with a lot of equipment. I would like to volunteer my time to work with youngsters. Can ACTION LINE find an organization that can use my services? R.H., Long Beach.

The federally-funded Youth Development Project currently is looking for someone who can teach a photography class at one of its Teen Centers. For more information, contact Mrs. Miriam Smith, executive director of the project, at 426-0407 Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The project also needs donations of furniture for its new Teen Center in North Long Beach.

SOUND OFF!

My brother and I got aboard the bus and my brother realized he had lost his bus fare at school. The driver still let him ride to his destination. I told him the money would be paid to him when he returned on the other side of the street headed downtown. My brother did just that and the driver was really surprised that he had returned. It is nice to know that if you are honest there are still people who will trust you, even if you are young. I'm 15 and my brother's 12. K.D.F., Long Beach.*

Nader sets up deafness study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ralph Nader, claiming "deafness is one of the most expensive physical handicaps a person can face in the United States today," announced creation Saturday of a hearing disability task force to see what can be done to ease the problem.

In a statement describing the project, Nader said an estimated 15 million Americans are hard of hearing to some degree and that the task force will be contacting hundreds of such people in the course of its study.

A major goal will be to find out why more than 75 per cent of the population with a hearing disability do not wear a hearing aid, and ultimately to provide guidance for consumers who want to buy one. Nader said.

Archaic court system hit

but its main opposition, as strange as it seems, is from the judicial branch itself.

The strongest opposition is from Los Angeles County where judges have described the proposal as an attempt to "create an administrative monstrosity."

Even Kleps testified against the bill when it was before the Assembly Judiciary Committee earlier this month. Kleps' objection was on the grounds that the bill called for "too radical of a change and called for it to happen overnight."

"It is unacceptable to almost everyone in the judicial branch," he said.

INSTEAD, the California Judicial Council, has proposed a slower approach and one it hopes to get on the November ballot as a state initiative. It calls for the creation of a unified county court system to deal with cases that are now handled by the municipal and justice courts. Los Angeles County only has two justice courts—one on Catalina and one at Malibu.

Under the proposal the current 308 municipal and justice court districts in the state would be reorganized into about 66 county courts, with Los Angeles' present 26 judicial districts reduced to about nine.

The California Judicial Council, in recommending the county court system, claimed the merger of municipal and justice courts will produce substantially greater flexibility and effectiveness in the use of judicial and staff manpower, therefore allowing cost savings.

The council rejected, at this time, a proposal that California's 58 superior court systems be included in the new county court system, but Kleps predicts that change is coming within the next ten years.

The council itself reaffirmed its support of legislation that would authorize establishment of not more than five regional offices to assist the Chief Justice and the Judicial Council with California's statewide court management responsibilities.

Under the council's county court system proposal, a court commissioner would be appointed to handle minor cases and be traffic case referees. This would relieve judges to handle more serious cases.

FOR EXAMPLE, under the proposal Orange County's five municipal court districts and its 32 judges would all be brought under one county court. Los Angeles County's 118 municipal and justice court judges would be in one of the nine separate county court districts.

Salaries for the judges and commissioners would be paid by the state, rather than the county. The salaries for the staff personnel would continue to be paid by the county government.

If this plan gets on the November ballot and is approved by the voters, the new county court system would be established by Jan. 1, 1974.

Ultimately, according to Kleps, a gradual phasing-in of a single-level trial court—eliminating the lower court system entirely—is mandatory if court reform is to be successful.

Will it save money?

"In my opinion, no program for the improved operation of state judicial systems can be made upon the premise that money can be saved," Kleps said. "You can no more save money in the design and operation of an effective, modern judicial system than you can save money in the construction of a modern highway system."

The reform, he said, will eliminate some duplication of expenses that courts now have, but "if society wants results from the judicial establishment we inherited from a colonial background, it must be prepared to spend the kind of money on the judicial system that it has in achieving other goals, such as the sending of men to the moon."

Viet vet job drive ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson said Saturday he has ordered state employment officials to have every firm with 500 or more workers submit a list of job openings to help find work for an estimated 400,000 Vietnam veterans.

The unemployment rate for Vietnam veterans has been running higher than the national rate of about 6 per cent.

Hodgson said he wanted the firms contacted by letter and less than 10 days later by phone, whether or not they had a contract with the federal government.

In the letters, the firms will be told that "veterans represent premium manpower," Hodgson said. More important, he said, the companies will be reminded that the veterans "have given a period of their lives in service to us" and "the least we can do is give them every opportunity to find their rightful place in our economic system."

Noose tightens on Quang Tri; Hue threatened

into Kontum City 10 miles to the south.

No explanation was given by South Vietnamese officials but there has been fighting in the region in the past several days. Presumably the government forces were trying to consolidate their strength around the city itself in an anticipation of an all-out North Vietnamese assault.

The nothernmost position now blocking an invasion path into Kontum is Firebase Lima, about six miles north of the provincial capital.

Fighting was reported around Lima and South Vietnamese spokesmen claimed 65 enemy troops killed by air strikes. Four South Vietnamese soldiers were reported killed and six wounded.

Tanks were reported sighted a mile southwest of Vo Dinh shortly after midnight Saturday. South Vietnamese gunships were called into attack.

IN QUANG TRI, the North Vietnamese struck with rocket fire in an outflanking movement that halted ranger reinforcements trying to reach the city.

The enmy drive there and at Hue, 35 miles south, appeared to be part of an attempt to seize control of the two northern provinces.

The Communists were expected at any time to renew their assault on Quang In and the situation was described by senior American officials in Saigon as "very grave."

Beyond the concern for Quang Tri, there was also deep anxiety for Hue, the central highlands sites and An Loc.

The South Vietnamese government's in its worst position since the Tet offensive of 1968, observers said.

The latest assaults open the way for more splitting of the government's reserves in what looks like an increasingly desperate government gamble to avoid giving the Communists any location of political importance.

UPI correspondent Stewart Kellerman, reporting from the American military base at Phu Bai near Hue, said North Vietnamese forces had moved 130 mm guns into newly captured Bastogne and Checkmate firebases and were in a position to shell Hue and Phu Bai.

South of An Loc, a 100-truck convoy was able to break through to government troops at Chon Thanh, 40 miles north of Saigon. The convoy had been stalled for five days.

Officer charged in shooting

EUREKA (AP) — A California highway patrolman was charged with manslaughter Saturday in the shooting death of a 37-year-old Arcata man, Arcata police said.

The patrolman, Robert B. Hahn, 43, of Arcata, was being held in Humboldt County Jail on $10,000 bond.

The warrant for his arrest was issued by county Dist. Atty. William Ferroggiaro after a three-day investigation into the death of William L. Smith, whose body was found on the shoulder of Highway 101 near Arcata Tuesday.

It was first believed that Smith had been a victim of a hit and run accident, but a medical examination disclosed a gunshot wound in the head, officers said.

WARNINGS ON WITCHCRAFT

What possesses occultists?

By LARRY LYNCH
Staff Writer

Occult practices develop a hold on some persons much like drug addiction, a Norwalk psychologist warns.

Dr. James D. Lisle, whose counseling practice has recently included several young persons involved in witchcraft and satan worship, fears that today's fascination with the occult will develop into a horrendous social problem.

"You can never be sure a person involved in this won't step over the line into infant sacrifice or cannabalism. We have evidence that it happens," he says.

Dr. Lisle's concern receives support from what might seem a strange corner:

"People who have a psychological weakness should never get involved with occultism in any form," agrees Charles Fraser, an articulate young man who says he was converted to the "ancient religion of witchcraft" five-and-a-half years ago in Germany.

FRASER is owner of the Cauldron occult shop in San Pedro, studied philosophy at California State College, Long Beach, and this past semester taught a student-sponsored experimental course in witchcraft at the Long Beach college.

Dr. Lisle studied occult practices in some depth twenty years ago as a young student of comparative religions. Today, as director of the Helpline youth counseling center in Norwalk, he finds "significant numbers of young people are substituting the occult scene for the drug scene, or combining the two.

"The people who get involved in a thing like witchcraft have a developing tunnel vision about the world and life," he says. "It is a continually narrowing thing that cuts them off from what is going on around them."

DR. Lisle identifies strong parallels in the psychological factors that draw a person into witchcraft or satan worship and the factors that influence a person to move from occasional marijuana usage to heroin addiction.

In both instances, he says, the person is likely to be:

—"1. Suffering from powerlessness and seeking power.

—"2. Seeking to gain control over his own life and sometimes the lives of others.

—"3. Engaged in primitive, magical, childish thinking.

—"4. Seeking to escape some reality problems in his life.

EVIDENCE of increased interest in the occult has been stacking up for at least four years.

Much of it has operated on an apparently harmless level. There have been books like "The Exorcist," movies like "Rosemary's Baby," and a rash of television shows, all treating the subject as traditional horror-story entertainment.

And shops like The Cauldron have opened in many communities to a thriving business. Fraser, who has operated The Cauldron for two years, says business is up 38 per cent in the last year.

THERE also have been what Dr. Lisle considers more serious manifestations of the fad. Covens of witches are becoming commonplace. "I know a group of Lakewood ladies over 40 who hold coven meetings like they would an afternoon tea," Fraser says.

Persons like Anton LaVey, self-proclaimed head of the First Church of Satan in San Francisco, have publicly pushed the fad to extremes. His adherents stage psychodrama rituals involving naked women and phallic symbols.

Along with this there have been several real-life horror stories. In July 1970 the torso of a social worker was found floating in Yellowstone River with the heart carved out. Another young man confessed to the cannibalistic murder. In Orange County that same month, two teen-age members of a drug-using cult were accused of devil-worship murders of a 21-year-old service station attendant and a 31-year-old school teacher.

THE phenomenon is international. In the last month a bishop of the Church of England has become so alarmed about the spread of witchcraft he called on churchmen to revive, in cooperation with Roman Catholics, the established but neglected practice of exorcism — the driving off of evil spirits.

Sorting out the variations of occult practices, particularly distinguishing between witchcraft and satan worship, is a complicated matter.

Fraser maintains that the worship of the devil and the practice of witchcraft are two quite different things. Witchcraft dates back to the ancient Greeks and Egyptians, he says, and basically involves self love. All the incense and herbs that he sells in his shop are simply "spiritual crutches," he says. "All of the power you really need is in yourself."

"Satanism is something different. Satan answers prayer. Whether that involves selling your soul to Satan, I don't know."

DR. LISLE is convinced that witchcraft is simply one aspect of satanism and that the occult arts are all of a piece "aiming at the glorification of man rather than God."

The two men agree in part, however, on the reasons for the popularity of the occult. It stems from the intense alienation and disenchantment with materialism that is felt by many persons today, they say.

In addition, says Dr. Lisle, "there has been a serious decline in the moral and spiritual value system of our society in the last few generations."

Three centuries after the Salem witch trials, says Dr. Lisle, society is poorly equipped to deal with the spread of malevolent occultism.

"There is nothing tangible to get your hands on in witchcraft, not like there is with drugs. It would be difficult right now to get the social acceptance about the evils of witchcraft and satanism to go into the classroom with an educational program along these lines," he says.

Spock urges greater efforts to end war in Southeast Asia

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

Dr. Benjamin Spock and other antiwar leaders Saturday urged a West Coast Peace Festival audience at California State College, Long Beach, to redouble their efforts in working for an end to the Indochina War.

An estimated 600 persons attended the day-long festival on the Long Beach campus to hear speakers, panel discussions and rock bands, and view guerrilla theater presentations and films — all with messages against the war.

Planned months before the United States escalated its bombing in Southeast Asia, the peace festival was completely peaceful and termed a success both by organizers and campus security officials.

Festival-goers heard addresses by Spock, draft-resister David Harris, Peace and Freedom Party candidate Marge Buckley, and two Vietnam veterans opposed to the war.

Between speeches and other presentations, those in attendance wandered among two dozen booths near the mid-campus speakers' platform, swappping information with antiwar group representatives and collecting literature.

The tall, stately Spock, last of the day's speakers, told listeners that the reasons behind American involvement in Southeast Asia could be traced back as far as 1953 in statements made by the late President Eisenhower.

In a speech before a governors' convention, Spock recalled, Eisenhower explained that the U.S. government had paid 80 per cent of the expenses incurred by France while that nation had struggled since 1946 to keep its colonial empire in Vietnam.

Spock added that Eisenhower also told governors why: "It's all the tin and tungsten and other valuable materials in that part of the world —we want to control them."

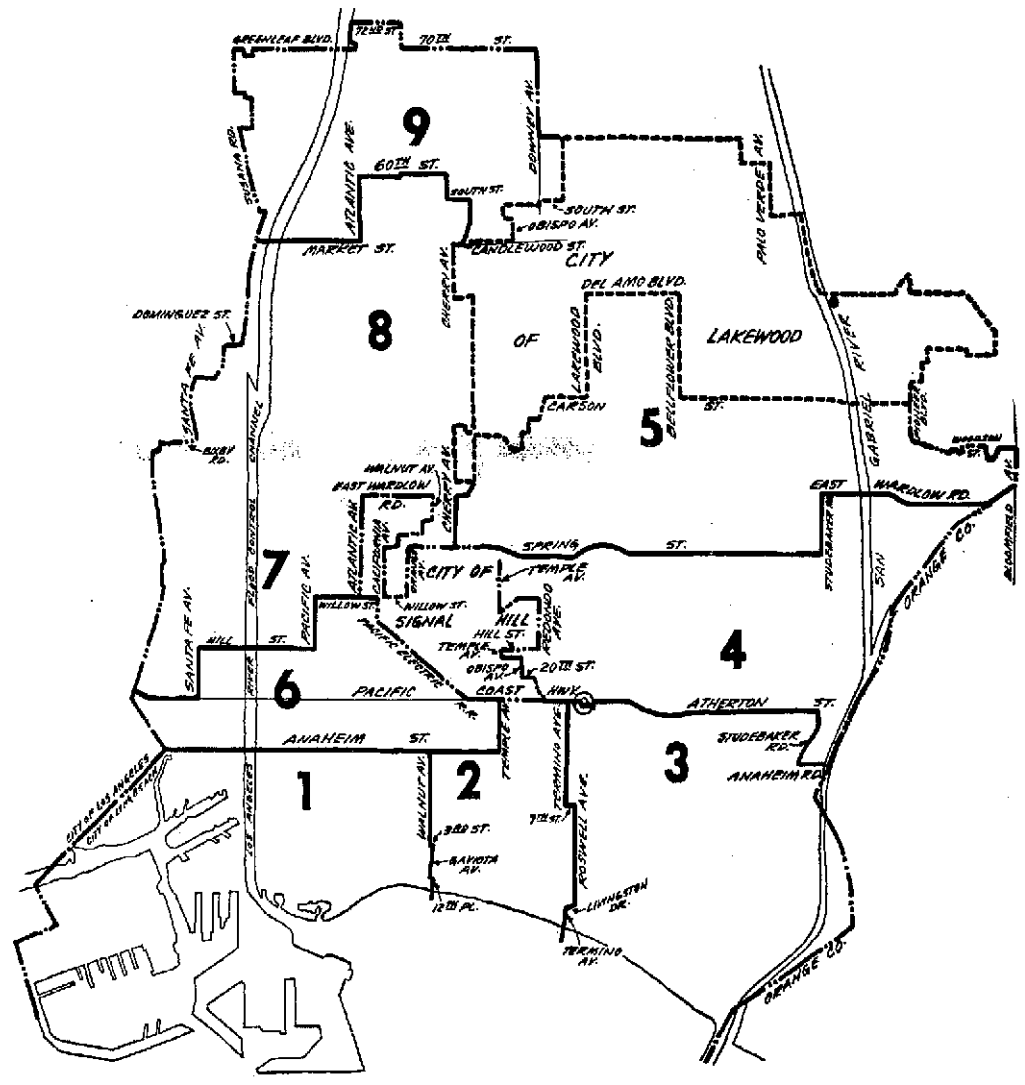

Also under Eisenhower, Spock said, the U.S. helped arrange the overthrow of an elected leader of a South American nation who was moving to nationalize vast business and land holdings. The United Fruit Co. was the largest land-holder in that South American country, he added.

Spock's accusations that large

The rock music stunt

AS A PUBLIC SERVICE it is my duty to report that hard rock may stunt the growth of flowers, while they seem to thrive on the classics.

This revolutionary news comes from an eighth-grade pupil at San Mateo's St.. Matthew's School. She participated in a science fair at San Francisco, which is noted for strange blooms.

Thirteen-year-old Sue Jean Condon experimented on primroses. Every day for a month she played three hours of classical music to one primrose, rock music to another, jazz to a third and country and western to a fourth.

A fifth control primrose got nothing but silence.

SUE JEAN said that the plant which was fed classics grew better than the one raised in silence.

"Slightly hampered growth" resulted from the jazz and country and western music.

The primrose subjected to a steady diet of hard rock suffered stunted height and fading blooms.

I hope that Sue Jean will carry her experiments over to the human race. If the results are what we might expect, the teen-ager who camps in our house from time to time should be the first to be notified.

It must be conceded that he has grown tall on rock, but — who knows? — with a few shovels of Bach and Mozart around his roots he might shoot up to the point where he could look Wilt Chamberlain in the eye.

His hard rock has certainly stunted my growth and there are some days I can't put out a single blossom. I'm not even asking for classical music. I'll settle for a month of silence.

A LETTER FROM Leah C. (Mrs William) Billings of Cypress says:

"Enclosed is an article from the Denver Archdiocesan newspaper, The Register, and I am sending it to you for your 'good news' file. St. Mary's (Kansas) College is of particular interest to me because my uncle was a seminarian there . . .

"For one who has seen only the arid regions of Kansas . . . it is difficult to believe that this area is so beautiful and fertile. But it is just that and a worthy gift to the Indians whose land it was originally. After ordination to the priesthood my uncle spent his entire life working among the Indians at St. Stephen's Mission in Wyoming and at Pine Ridge, S.D. That plus my tiny bit of inherited Indian blood makes this news item of even greater significance to me."

The Register reports a gift by the Jesuits of land worth almost $750,000 to the Prairie Band Pottawatomi Indians. The property includes the St. Mary's College campus of 12 buildings and 1,200 acres of adjoining lands.

I CAN'T CLAIM any Indian blood, although my grandmother told me that her father was a "blood brother" of Chief Mahaska in Iowa pioneer days.

It sems great-grandpa's gift of potatoes and other stores helped the chief and his tribe through a hard winter, which is the only kind they have in Iowa.

When I was about as tall as a tomahawk, my grandmother told me that if ever I was in danger I could expect to see an arrow come whanging into the nearest tree. This would be the signal that Mahaska's grandsons were riding to my rescue.

If you don't believe this, just look at the map of Iowa down there around Oskaloosa.

That's Mahaska County.

IN A PIECE about branch bathrooms I mentioned toothpaste and said nobody had ever gotten more than two-thirds of the paste out of the tube.

A friendly note has come from Morris Hayter, manager of Long Beach School Employes Federal Credit Union.

He enclosed two tube squeezers. I hope I can talk my wife into using them. She never squeezes anything but babies and bread.

Return of the sweatshop?

Ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment by the California Legislature is still possible this year, but the prospects are dim.

The amendment may still become part of the U.S. Constitution. But the impetus that could have come from early ratification by the California Legislature has been lost.

A MAJOR ROLE in opposition to the amendment was taken by some California labor leaders. Some unions, such as The Newspaper Guild, have endorsed the amendment. Others, unfortunately, have been persuaded that it could return sweatshops to California, and as a result the California AFL-CIO sent John F. Henning, its secretary-treasurer, to testify against ratification.

Some women in the labor movement joined Henning in testifying that equal rights for women should be accompanied by special protection for them to make sure they could not be compelled to work excessively long hours or to work without adequate rest periods or adequate sanitary facilities.

The worries of these women are understandable, but it is obviously impossible to grant women both equal rights and special privileges.

Fortunately, women do not need special privileges. Nor do men. Both men and women are entitled to decent working conditions, reasonable working hours and regular rest periods.

SOME CALIFORNIA laws now provide special protection for women. To the extent that such protection is desirable for women it is desirable for men.

If a woman needs a place to lie down when she feels ill, so does a man. If a woman shouldn't be compelled to work eight hours with no time off for a meal, neither should a man.

California laboring men and women should insist that safeguards be written into the laws. Labor—and everyone else — should also insist that there be no discrimination against any worker because of sex, any more than there should be discrimination because of race.

The two kinds of discrimination have similarities. Mervyn Dymally, the author of the ratification resolution and the only black in the State Senate, said criticism of the Equal Rights Amendment reminded him of arguments southerners used to make against equal rights for blacks.

THE COMPARISON WAS a just one. The assumption that women are inferior creatures in need of special protection is precisely analogous to the bigot's assumption that blacks are inferior creatures with bodies, intellects and moral standards innately different from those of whites.

AFL-CIO leader Henning took personal offense at Dymally's remark, which he called "a direct insult that we shall not forget."

If Henning assumes that white southerners were generally guilty of thinking one thing and saying another, his anger with Dymally may be understandable. But such an assumption is itself unfair to many white southerners, who sincerely believed that blacks require special protection — just as Henning believes that women require special protection.

UNCONSCIOUS SEXISM must be changed, just as unconscious racism must be changed. The premise that different laws are needed for different sexes or different races is a pernicious one, whether its sources are conscious or hidden deep within the unconscious.

It is to make sure that premise cannot govern anywhere in America that the Equal Rights Amendment was proposed. Thoughtful labor leaders and thoughtful legislators will support it while ensuring that needed protections for workers are preserved and applied to men and women alike.

Huge waste of anticrime funds alleged

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A report by a House investigating subcommittee, charging massive misuse of federal anticrime funds, is stirring some partisan political attacks and is certain to touch off a congressional debate on the effectiveness of the administration's crime-fighting programs.

The study declares the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration's (LEAA) grants of more than $1.1 billion to state and local governments, for use in strengthening their police forces and law enforcement programs, have had "no visible impact on the incidence of crime in the United States."

Clark Mollenhoff

WHAT IS MORE, federal money has been diverted for political purposes — for example, the purchase of a "crime control" airplane which ended up as handy transportation for Indiana Governor Edgar Whitcomb, his family and staff — and has been wasted on "exorbitant" consultants' fees, the subcommittee investigators found.

They determined that massive amounts of money were used to make questionable purchases of equipment, particularly Motorola police radios, without proper bidding procedures.

LEAA officials have failed to monitor how the federal funds are being spent, and state and local officials have been permitted to run wild in their decisions on how to spend the money, the report alleges.

THE WHOLE SITUATION raises serious questions about the concept of revenue-sharing, in which federal money would go to state and local governments to spend generally as they see fit, it concludes.

The report is based on hearings and investigations by the House Government Operations Committee's subcommittee on legal and monetary affairs, chaired by Representative John S. Monagan, D-Conn.

Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., a co-author of the Safe Streets Act of 1968 which included the LEAA block grant program, was incensed at the report. He produced a memorandum written by LEAA Administrator Jerris Leonard, who accused the subcommittee members, in effect, of being soft on crime and trying to destroy the program.

Monagan, in a blistering reply on the house floor, accused Hruska of "inaccuracies of fact and unwarranted conclusions" and said LEAA has a "public history of scandal, ineptitude, and criminality." Leonard's attack in his memo on the motives of the House panel "shows a total misunderstanding of the role of an oversight committee of the congress," Monagan said. By "guttersnipe tactics and political obscurantism," Leonard is "equating investigations of his agency's program with softness on crime," he added.

The LEAA funds are distributed through state planning agencies, which are supposed to develop comprehensive crime-fighting and law enforcement plans. On the whole, the subcommittee found, the state plans have been "too much the products of outside consultants, too much in the nature of shopping lists for hardware items, and too infrequently a comprehensive blueprint for action." This, combined with inadequate supervision by LEAA in Washington, has produced problems like those surrounding the purchase of police radio equipment.

THE RADIOS HAVE been bought "at or above list prices, without competitive bidding and on specifications drawn by one supplier, Motorola Communications and Electronics, Inc.," the report says.

The subcommittee said its study of LEAA spending in Arkansas showed "excessive payments" of at least $200,000 on radio equipment, primarily to Motorola, whose "sharp and aggressive sales tactics" and "wining and dining" of public officials had aided its efforts.

Beyond that, the subcommittee report questions whether the pouring of large amounts of money into police hardware is what Congress had in mind when it authorized a comprehensive attack on crime in the Safe Streets Act.

Much of the crime fighting money has been wasted on "superficial" planning studies done by consulting firms, the subcommittee claims.

The national accounting firm of Ernst & Ernst has picked up $1.1 million in fees; the International Association of Chiefs of Police has collected $2.5 million, the accounting firm of Touche, Ross & Co. has been paid $3 million; and Systems Science Development Corp. has received $2.2 million.

IN SOME CASES, the consultants have simply rewritten federal manuals for their clients, the report says.

All in all, the subcommittee says, the LEAA programs have produced some better co-ordination of criminal justice agencies and improvements in criminal justice services, "but regrettably it must be said that they have acheived far less than the Congress and the public can rightfully expect considering the vast amounts of public funds which the taxpayer has provided."

That conclusion, and the subcommittee's recommendations for a whole new system of controlling how the money is spent, are destined for much discussion here in coming months. The outcome will not only influence crime fund distribution but the entire concept of federal revenue-sharing with state and local governments.

Taking a reporter to lunch

Several of us will mosey over to the Board of Supervisors meeting May 9 to look a gift supervisor in the mouth.

Pete Schabarum, former Republican Assemblyman from Covina and now 1st District Supervisor by Gov. Reagan's appointment, has said some nice things about the press thereby endangering his whole political future in the eyes of a cynical public.

Schabarum, with only a few weeks of appointive tenure before he has to be tested at the polls in the June 6 primary, raved on like this:

"IN OUR nation the great safeguard against regimented thinking is the newspaper. It is the clear, loud voice of truth and reason that enlightens man and stimulates individual and community thought."

Most of us in the profession have thought of it that way all along. For some strange reason the polls show a lack of overwhelming confidence in newspapers; in fact, in news media of all kinds. How come?

I fondly—perhaps vainly—hope that in a showdown the people would reexamine their shallow put-down of the press and elect to keep it rather than whatever agency or constituency they might be toying with as a substitute. What IS in second place, friends?

My own observation is that the people who write for newspapers are the nearest thing to a deputy "you" that you'll find on the public scene. Most of the hundreds of reporters I've known have considered themselves surrogates for the people—not in any heroic sense, merely as the last buffer against the stuffed shirts and villains of the world.

IMPERFECT? Of course, even as you and you and all the public for which they serve as daily ombudsmen.

Probably the two things that most bug a newspaperman are the phony and the armchair carp who tells a pollster he doesn't have much faith in the newspaper. The phony can be dealt with. The shallow critic, without realizing it, is flailing knownothingly at friends he can't perceive. His case is harder to deal with.

Reporters see the phonies at close hand. If, without slander, they are able to demonstrate the flaw they do it. It's a service for which they are often rapped as "slanting." Slanting exists, of course—because of the reporter's flaws, background, training, prejudices and an infinity of conditioning variables.

But there are editors and publishers to stem his slant. Checks and balances within the organization and between newspapers, wire services and the other media render the slanter intolerable, outrageous, or at least visible.

A SALUTE is in order also for television news. Infant TV tended toward actors, hambones and cosmetics, beauty and profundo delivery of the lines. Overlooking the current trend toward silly badinage among the news teams and the arcane credibility accorded weathercasters who are always wrong, the news men are first rate professionals for the most part.

Bob Houser

POLITICAL EDITOR

There are precious (the word is used advisedly) few whose stock is still slant, cant and pollyanna.

The thing I'm driving at is that the press is on your side. As a friend it should welcome constructive criticism on all its facets and functions. But frankly, the press is more your friend than the guy conducting a poll. And of course we use his poll telling us in what low esteem we're held.

Editorial policy is another matter. There the slant is labeled opinion and is bound to make some of you—some of us—steam. The happy and the outraged are welcome to register their views. A diversity of columnists, some diametrically opposed to the paper's editorial viewpoint, get in their licks.

SUPERVISOR Schabarum gives us heart. He's invited some reporters to hear some kind words from the board and attend a reception. Among his reasons, he says, is his conclusion "that in the past there has been an inaccessibility of the Supervisor to the press and a general remoteness of county government. It is a goal of my office to understand the needs of the news media and provide complete accessibility on matters that are before the Board of Supervisors."

Complete accessibility can't be all bad.

Reagan's elastic philosophy

SACRAMENTO — Ohio Congressman John Ashbrook, describing himself, in effect, as the nagging conscience of President Richard Nixon, visited the state capital last week and called attention to what is probably Ronald Reagan's most vulnerable characteristic.

That is the elastic nature of his philosophy of government.

Ashbrook said he found it difficult to understand Reagan's continued support of small farmer out of business.

But, the governor said, "this type of interference with a free market is undesirable. This is a restraint of free enterprise."

He was correct, of course. Except that his concern for free enterprise was not very much in evidence earlier in the year, when he supported a government-guaranteed loan for the beleaguered Lockheed corporation, a loser in the competitive struggle among the giants of the aerospace industry.

Sometimes the elastic philosophy followed purely political lines, as when he considered two bills by Sen. Albert Rodda of Sacramento, a Democrat, and Sen. George Deukmajian of Long Beach, a Republican.

Bob Schmidt

VIEW FROM OUR STATE BUREAU

President Nixon in view of what he said was Nixon's "move to the left."

The 43-year-old conservative accused the governor of putting political expediency before his personal beliefs.

"GOV. REAGAN IS my friend,' Ashbrook told newsmen, "and about the only thing I find unique about him is that he is not now applying the same standards to Richard Nixon that he applied to Democrats in the election four years ago."

For instance, Ashbrook said, "Ronald Reagan practically hit the roof when Walter Heller (President Johnson's economic adviser) advocated a $10 billion budget deficit. But now he is silent when Richard Nixon talks about a $40 billion deficit."

SEVERAL INCIDENTS in 1971 were particularly illustrative of his flexible philosophy. And not all of them were partisan in nature.

For instance, he vetoed a bill which would have permitted cling peach growers to impose, with government backing, a limit on the quantity of peaches which could be grown by an individual grower. Proponents said it would help the small farmer withstand the effect of huge growers who produce so many peaches there is a surplus, forcing the price down and the

THE GOVERNOR VETOED a bill by Rodda which would have permitted a school district to use the permissive override device, over which local voters have no control, to extend school nutrition programs to needy children in preschool programs.

"I strongly support local decision-making and local control of public education in California," his veto message said.

An articulate statement, certainly leaving no room for doubt about where he stood on the issue of permissive overrides.

EXCEPT THAT 18 days later, he approved a bill by Deukmejian which permitted the Long Beach Unified School District to finance a regional occupation center by bypassing local voters and adding a permissive override on future tax bills!

Certainly every Californian is aware by now of the difference between Reagan's approach to welfare recipients who make improper demands on the state treasury and his approach to prosperous individuals and business who take advantage of poorly drafted tax laws to avoid paying a fair share of the cost of government.

John Ashbrook expressed surprise at Ronald Reagan's contradictions. Californians, who gave Reagan an overwhelming mandate in 1966 and a more cautious mandate in 1970, can only express dismay as those contradictions increase in number.

Democratic fight may aid Nixon

By JOHN S. KNIGHT

One year ago George McGovern was the man nobody knew. They said he wouldn't catch on — just a dry preacher from the plains with no charisma.

What had been overlooked is McGovern's honesty and courage in saying what he believes without regard for popularity points. Other than Sens. Morse and Gruening, the South Dakotan was the earliest member of Congress to question our folly in Vietnam.

The senator, no pacifist, is a former history professor and a decorated bomber pilot in World War II.

McGovern's appeal lies in not being a slick politician telling the folks what they want to hear. He is recommending both the closing of alleged tax loopholes and redistribution of wealth. McGovern would raise corporate taxes from 48 to 52 per cent; phase out depletion allowances for oil and minerals; impose tough minimum income taxes along with sharply higher estate and gift taxes.

In essence, the McGovern plan is to take about $43.1 billion a year from the well-to-do and redistribute it among the poorer people. Time was when the fruits of a man's labor could be left to his family. Since the highest rate on estate taxes already reaches 77 per cent, McGovern's approach would amount to virtual confiscation.

The Democrats are left with a choice of Hubert Humphrey or George McGovern. On his side, Humphrey will have the labor leaders who know how to raise money and get out the vote, as well as the bulk of Democratic organizations and establishment politicians.

McGovern's appeal is to the antiwar Democrats, the middle-class liberals who think Hubert Humphrey is outdated, college students and intellectuals. Moreover, McGovern has demonstrated unexpected organizational capacity by recruiting masses of volunteer workers in both the cities and the suburbs.

Although President Nixon is under severe criticism for the renewed bombing of North Vietnam, the reputed ITT scandals and dissatisfaction with his economic programs, the conflict for power within the Democratic party, including Governor Wallace's low regard for the probable nominee, could turn the election in the president's favor.

Unless, of course, a sorely divided convention turns to Teddy Kennedy and we have a brand new ball game.

Vote on racism planned

By TOM WICKER

One of the arguments blandly put forward by opponents of busing is that it would be better to integrate neighborhoods so that neighborhood schools would be naturally integrated. Of course it would, but most of those who make this argument know that integration of the white suburbs of America is about as far in the future as passenger service to the moon.

Now those in congress who oppose busing but who say they favor integrated neighborhoods and schools will have a chance to vote for the kind of action that might lead to such an ideal situation. Fat chance!

Rep. Herman Badillo, D-N.Y., has introduced a bill that would prohibit the use of zoning, subdivision controls or building codes to prevent development of low and moderate-income housing in suburbs, or anywhere outside the core cities. This bill directs the Housing and Urban Development department to give top priority to communities with comprehensive development plans that include such housing.

A vote on his bill, Badillo says, would "demonstrate to the American people and to the nations of the world whether or not racism is involved in the busing dispute, whether or not the Congress intends to keep the poor locked into urban ghettos, and whether or not the Congress will live up to its promises for equal housing opportunities."

If busing is now to be stopped, and if neighborhood integration is as far in the future as the evidence suggests — Nixon has twice denounced "forced integration of the suburbs" — then the nation is going to have heavily segregated schools for a long time to come.

Nixon and others contend they can provide quality education to neighborhood schools as they now exist; even if that dubious proposition is accepted, most of the schools they are talking about will be segregated schools. If that is what the nation wants, it is ignoble to pretend otherwise.

Subdivision lakes often die early

(Editor's note: Former Independent, Press-Telegram contributing editor Gil Bailey will continue his weekly Down to Earth column on environmental matters as a member of the Washington bureau of these newspapers.

The real estate ad is typical across the country. It extols the beauties of a man-made lake next to the new subdivision.

There can be a catch to that lake, the U.S. Department of the Interior is warning, a catch which will make the lake a minus instead of a plus.

DOWN TO EARTH

Dr. David Rickert, chemist and urban hydrology specialist for Interior's Geological Survey, pointed out man-made lakes often die an early death.

"WITHIN ONE YEAR following development, some real-estate lakes are overcome by excessive algae growth and rendered useless to a community both as a source of recreation and as a means of enhancing property values," Dr. Rickert said.

"The cause for the stepped-up aging process is found mainly in poor control of nutrient and sediment drainage into the lake. Nutrient-rich discharges from sewage disposal systems, and overly fertilized lawns flow unchecked into many of the urban lakes. The nutrients stimulates the growth of plants that in turn trap inflowing sediment.

"The lake gradually fills from the accumulation of plants and sediment. As the dead plants decay, more nutrients are released for new plant growth thus a vicious cycle begins that speeds up the death of the lake," Dr. Rickert explained.

THE SAME process can occur in natural lakes.

Beautiful and huge Lake Tahoe is rapidly becoming a victim of the same process.

The difference between a clean, clear, attractively landscaped lake and the liabilities of a weed-choked, foul-smelling mudhole can usually be traced to poor planning, construction and management, according to the federal scientist.

The whole process in a small, man-made lake can take only a year.

Dr. Rickert has some specific suggestions on how to protect lakes from such a process.

"To be successful the development of a real-estate lake requires the advice and guidance of experts. Planning and management insight can be obtained through consultation with local environmental planners and engineers. The earlier these experts are consulted the more problem-free the establishment and use of the lake will be," he said.

SEDIMENT CONTROL is almost impossible while the lake is being constructed, but erosion can be controlled after construction. Banks, stream channels and hillsides should be seeded or sodded and channels should be lined with stone or concrete.

Sewage discharge into the lake must be controlled.

In addition, people should be educated to keep their lake clean, Dr. Rickert pointed out.

There is another point in the report, one which is not directly stated.

Buying property on a man-made lake can be a dangerous proposition.

Some developers are quick buck artists. They won't spend the money to protect the lake. They will just sell the property.

SO THE BUYER should beware.

It is nice to have a lake in your backyard. A cesspool does not have the same advantages.

Can America remain No. 1?

Even to a reader as untrained in business as I am, Japanese business practices, as described by Herman Kahn, have something of a topsy-turvy character. According to his book, "The Emerging Japanese Superstate: Challenge and Response" (Prism Paperback, 1971), the Japanese, by American standards, do everything wrong. Yet Japan has become the toughest competitor of all in world markets.

At the end of World War II, the Japanese economy was flat on its back. Nevertheless, 25 years later, Japan has outstripped England, France and Germany to become the world's third greatest economic power. How was this accomplished? Why is the Japanese economy continuing to grow at a rate that astonishes the world?

FIRST, IN reconstructing the economy after the war, the Japanese government, instead of encouraging inefficient industries to become efficient, permitted them to be eliminated. They also eliminated industries in which the Japanese were either not competitive or had little hope of becoming so.

The nation committed itself instead almost totally to the most technologically advanced and prestigious industries—a decision which had only a little to do with calculations of profit and loss, but more to do with a supreme technological self-confidence and a huge sense of the need to restore national pride. Certain industries, such as cotton textiles and the manufacture of simple kinds of sewing machines, were pushed to the wall, thus releasing men and resources for use in other, more efficient and desirable enterprises.

In addition to national pride, there is company pride. If one company or company grouping (zaibatsu) successfully introduces a new product or enters a new field, competitive concerns at once follow suit, if only to preserve self-respect. This competition results in extremely rapid movement of capital and management skills into these new areas.

The Japanese have taken, and continue to take, dangerous risks for the sake of business expansion. Because companies are eager to expand and because they want to work in the most advanced fields, they often expand at the cost of temporary diminution in net income.

KAHN SAYS HE once posed a hypothetical risk situation to a group of Japanese, American and European businessmen. Would they be willing to risk 10 to 20 per cent of their capital on an investment which presented an equal chance of total loss or of tripling the money invested? The Americans and Europeans said they would not take the risk. The Japanese said they would.

Moreover, the Japanese operate at a very high debt-equity ratio. In the 1950s the ratio was about 10-to-one, compared with the American practice, in which a one-to-one ratio is seen as too risky.

Nevertheless the actual risks in Japanese business are less than they appear. High growth rates cut down the probabilities of loss and make it easier to cover such losses as may occur. Furthermore, a large Japanese firm in serious trouble is almost always bailed out by the government, with the aid of the big banks. (Is it the obligation of the U.S. government to bail out Boeing Aircraft? The implication of Kahn's book is that in Japan such a question would be answered in the affirmative, almost without debate.)

Japanese firms are growing at such a rapid rate—10 to 30 per cent annually—that fresh money is always needed. The capital comes from the people themselves—from their habit of heavy, constant savings.

What makes saving easy for a Japanese is that much of his annual income comes to him in the form of twice-a-year lump sum bonuses. Since real income rises by approximately 10 per cent a year, the worker feels little compulsion to spend his bonuses. So he immediately deposits these lump sums in his bank—thereby increasing the capital available to industry.

TO HAVE SOME idea how important these high savings are, imagine what could be done with an extra $200 billion a year, were it available to our banks and loan associations for investment purposes!

Finally the Japanese government is willing to force its people to make sacrifices, when necessary, for the good of the economy. The Japanese have artificially created three sharp but short depressions in the past 25 years—something no Western nation has been prepared to do. In fact, as a consequence of the unwillingness of Western governments to make sacrifices for the sake of the economy, even temporarily, Kahn predicts that there will be a deterioration in the West's competitive performance in world business.

Mr. American Executive! Mr. American Union Member! As you enjoy the music on your stereophonic Sony, as you take snaps of your family picnic with your Nikon or Yashica camera, as you bop along the highways in your Toyota, please think about the rigidities in American business and labor practice that cripple our ability to compete in world markets.

Tonight's paper tells me that Nissan Motors is sending representatives to pick a site near Los Angeles or Seattle to assemble Datsun trucks. Toyota Motors is also studying the possibility of opening an American assembly plant.

Doesn't that scare you? It scares me.

Social Security is major federal tax

"With relatively little fanfare Congress is well on its way this year to what will be the most radical alteration of the nation's Social Security system in the 35 years of its existence." That is the way the New York Times reports from Washington. Similar observations are given in other publications dealing with what Congress is preparing to do about Social Security in this election year.

The articles I have read comment on the importance of the Social Security taxes now being collected. For the coming fiscal year it is estimated workers and employers will pay $64 billion into the fund. By comparison individual income taxes will be about $94 billion and corporation income taxes about $36 billion. It therefore is evident that Social Security is a major factor in the nation's economy and contributes to inflation.

IT IS ARGUED that inflation is caused by the half of Social Security contributions paid for by employers who must add this cost to the products they make or sell and pass the cost on to the consumer. But Congress is working on plans to increase these Social Security taxes on higher incomes to cover those up to $12,000 a year. The maximum is now 5.2 per cent on a maximum of $9,000 a year. An equal amount for each employe is paid by the employer.

For example this year Social Security taxes stop after the first $9,000 is earned at which time the worker will have paid $468 in taxes and an equal amount by the employer. Anyone earning less than $9,000 a year will pay his tax each month. The amount will be less in proportion to earnings.

The principle of Social Security is based on benefits being in proportion to earnings. This has resulted in more than a million recipients receiving only $70 a month in benefits. In most cases this has been augmented by welfare payments under the Old Aid Assistance programs by the states. Congress is now considering a minimum of $200 a month for all who retire on Social Security.

THIS IN EFFECT would mean the worker who had low earnings and Social Security taxes would be financed by the higher tax on these earnings up to $9,000 a year — expected to go to $12,000 next year. It would be transferring large portions of these higher bracket taxes to pay for benefits that have come from general taxes used in the welfare programs.

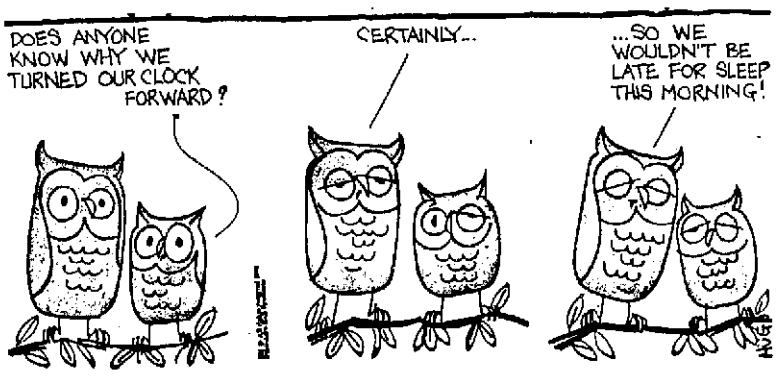

This would be a drastic change in the fundamental principal that Social Security pensions be based on earnings of the individual. It has much in its favor. But it must be realized that once Social Security taxes are used to replace one welfare program the tendency may be to use them for other welfare programs. As Congress plans an overall increase in benefits this year and the plan whereby benefits will be increased to make up for cost of living increases — there is a danger that the plan may become unsound and endanger benefits in the future.

Under the escalation plan it is estimated that a man retiring this week who had earned the wage base would receive $325 a month for himself and wife. But the man now 35 years of age who averaged $12,000 a year or more to age 65 could count on receiving close to $1,500 a month assuming inflation continues as it has over the past 20 years.

These are fantastic amounts compared with the original system. The meeting cost-of-living increases could change the soundness of the program in dangerous ways. It can mean Social Security taxes paid by worker and employer would have to rise to levels exceeding income and corporate taxes combined. It is a reason why Congress should be cautious in voting increased benefits for political purposes and thereby endanger the most important Social Security for the older people of the present and of the future.

Compton High band in Mexican triumph

By MARK CLUTTER
Staff Writer

Mexico has been conquered again — this time by a band of 111 conquistadores from Compton High School.

The Mexicans hailed the conquerors with joy, friendship and standing ovations.

The Mexican adventure is a saga of how the seemingly impossible can be achieved through the enthusiastic hard work of a large group of people.

THE EVENT was the first International Mexican Band Festival, in which Mexico plays host to high school musicians from other countries.

The Compton band was invited — but how could they afford it? The cost of flying 111 boys and girls, 10 parent chaperons and two faculty members, Louis Thomas and Mrs. Doris King, to Mexico City was $25,000. That would be a hunk of dough in an affluent community. Compton is not affluent.

So the people, students and parents went to work.

"We started our campaign in December," Thomas said. "We used every fund-raising method we could think of. The Band Aides, a parents' organization, planned fund-raising dances, concerts, religious programs and other events. There were also dances for the kids.

"THE KIDS had candy sales in the school and the community. They washed cars. They did every chore they could think of to raise money.

"It was a real experience for them. They learned that people can achieve what they want through united effort. Right now they are planning another campaign to get new instruments and uniforms, and they're hoping for a trip next year."

They will not soon forget the journey. Seventy per cent of them had never been on a plane and 95 per cent had neve been outside the United States except maybe to Tijuana.

In Mexico, which has a few black people, the young people were treated like visiting royalty.

THEY ARRIVED a week ago Thursday and were immediately asked to play in the huge public square. They were one of four visiting bands, two from Florida and one from Pennsylvania. Other bands are being hosted during a three-week period.

On Friday they played in the Mexico City cathedral built in the 16th century.

"Crowds were exceptionally enthusiastic," Thomas said. "After the official concert we were applauded to three encores."

They also played at the University of Mexico, the Olympic Stadium and at the National Gymnastic Competition. They were welcomed by the mayor and by national government officials.

"The kids got along fine with the Mexican high school students," Thomas said. "Many of them could speak English and some of us could speak Spanish. Autographs were constantly being demanded."

THEY MANAGED to cram a tour of the city into their crowded schedule.

The director of the university conservatory said, "You played like professionals. I am very, very proud to judge this group." The festival is noncompetitive so no prizes were given.

Thomas was invited to serve on the executive committee for the festival next year.

The band returned home early last week. But the young people are still living in Mexico in their imaginations.

"It was an experience our students will never be able to replace or forget," Thomas said.

Cerritos paper places 4th in college contest

Talon Marks, the Cerritos College newspaper, placed fourth in general excellence in competition with 60 California collegiate newspapers. The competition was sponsored by the Journalism Association of Community Colleges.

Two Cerritos journalism students won individual awards in the statewide contest. Roy Crane of Downey won a third-place for photography, and Thom Lecoq received honorable mention for on-the-spot editorial writing.

Lecoq was editor of the weekly Cerritos newspaper during the fall semester last year.

REGULATION FOOTGEAR

When Craig Hosmer (R-Long Beach and Orange County) was accused in a new political book (Almanac of American Politics, Gambit Pub., 1972) of being a "kindred spirit" with little old ladies in tennis shoes, a constituent, Charles A. Furgason of Huntington Beach, promptly sent him a star-spangled pair of size 10½s. Furgason told Hosmer that "if you're going to represent Orange County, please do it properly." Hosmer responded that he found the shoes "attractive but philosophically uncomfortable."

GEN. SAM C. PHILLIPS
New Assignment

Lt. Gen. Sam C. Phillips, commander of the Air Force Space and Missile Systems Organization (SAMSO) in El Segundo, has been named director of the National Security Agency.

The agency is responsible for highly specialized technical functions in support of intelligence activities of the United States.

It has a combination national security and intelligence mission. Its functions include establishing principals and procedures for use within the U.S. government, producing intelligence data, organizing research and engineering activities in support of the agency's function.

Gen. Phillips will become the agency's seventh director on Aug. 1, when he replaces Vice Adm. Noel Gayler. As director, he will report directly to the secretary of defense.

Gen. Phillips successor at SAMSO has not been announced.

As commander of SAMSO, Gen. Phillips has been responsible for research, development test and evaluation of Air Force spare and ballistic missile systems. He has been responsible for development of the Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile; space launch vehicles, such as the Titan III-C, and a variety of Department of Defense satellite systems.

Prior to his assignment to SAMSO in 1969, Gen. Phillips was director of the Apollo Manned Lunar Landing Program, a job he held for five years on loan from the Air Force. His assignment was completed when Apollo 11 crew landed on the moon and returned safely to earth.

Prior to the NASA assignment, Gen. Phillips directed the Air Force Minuteman ICBM program.

Operation is success, but patient dies

DETROIT (UPI) — A man suffering from congestive heart failure died Saturday, five days after receiving a permanent mechanical heart pump in an operation doctors continued to maintain was a technical success.

Vincenzo Orsi, 45, of Albany, Ore., died from severe lung and kidney complications that were first noticed two days after the implant operation, doctors said.

The device, known as a "patch booster," was attached to Orsi's aorta, the heart's main artery, to aid the heart in pumping blood. Doctors at Sinai Hospital, where Monday's operation was performed, said the patch booster functioned "satisfactorily" from the time of insertion until Orsi died.

The only other heart patient to receive the patch booster on a permanent basis was Haskell Shanks, 63, of suburban Warren, Mich. who died 94 days after the operation last August.

But Dr. Adrian Kantrowitz, developer of the device, said he considered the operation a success, despite the death of his patient.

Lawyer shot 3 times

A 45-year-old deputy public defender was listed in critical condition Saturday night at County-USC Medical Center after being shot three times by a trio of armed bandits at a North Hollywood tavern, authorities reported.

Los Angeles police detectives said Dale R. Vinje was shot while the holdup was in progress shortly before 1 a.m.

Police said Vinje, along with eight other patrons, was seated in Lola's Place, a tavern located on Chandler Boulevard, when the three men entered and told everyone to place their hands and heads on the bar or else they would shoot them.

Witnesses told investigators that Vinje made some remarks which angered the gunmen and was hit on the side of the head with a metal object and knocked to the floor.

At that point everyone was odered to get down onto the floor and the bandits then tied their hands and feet.

Antiwar leaders at CSCLB

American business interests and a national policy of relentlessly pillaging the resources of smaller countries were echoed in every other outdoor speech or presentation.

In the guerrilla theater presentation, a 20 fatigue-clad Vietnam Veterans Against the War stormed a mock-Vietnamese village and lined the "gooks" up for execution at the order of their commanding officer.

But the troops balked at the execution order from the commander — "Gen. Motors" — then turned on the offending officer and "killed" him with plywood M-16 rifles.

Harris, who spent 20 months in prison for resisting the draft, explained that American technology has produced devastating weapons now used in Indochina that have been imporved to make wounds less medically treatable.

He said congressional testimony bears out the fact that a Central Intelligence Agency-owned airline helps Meo tribesmen in Laos export their principal "crop" — opium — in exchange for the natives' services as guerrilla soldiers.

"We're a society of profits," said Harris. "There are 18 branches of the Bank of America in South Vietnam now . . . and there's an incredible profit in those machines that are destroying that whole subcontinent."

Marge Buckley, Peace and Freedom Party candidate for Los Angeles district attorney, pinpointed similar problems in America, but from a domestic viewpoint.

She charged that America's judicial-legal system maintains a double standard in enforcing the nation's laws, often turning a blind eye of flatly harassing persons or groups opposed to the war and related establishments.

"The New York Times, The Washington Post, they were not prosecuted for publishing the Pentagon Papers," she said. "Only individuals who are not rich, the Ellsbergs, the Anthony Russos, are being prosecuted."

L.B. PEACE FESTIVAL

Harris hits Asia aerial war

The people of Southeast Asia are being massacred by the American air war, and only the American people can put a stop to it, antiwar activist David Harris said Saturday in Long Beach.

Harris, who served 20 months in federal prison for refusing to be inducted into the Army, spoke at a convention of the Sigma Delta Chi journalistic society and at the West Coast Peace Festival at Cal State Long Beach.

"The government is right when it says there is no war in Southeast Asia," Harris told the SDX audience in the Edgewater Hyatt House. "It's no war, it's a massacre."

Harris said that instead of winding down the war in Vietnam, the Nixon administration had stepped it up by vastly increasing bombing attacks while withdrawing American soldiers.

"This was done because the American people were tired of their sons, brothers and uncles being brought home in plastic sacks," he said. "The soldiers have been replaced by machines."

Harris said that the expanding air war in Vietnam has three phases:

—Exploding bombs dropped by B52s that can devastate mile-square areas and kill by concussion.

—Burning bombs such as napalm that stick to the flesh until fragments burn out.

—Fragmentation bombs that explode a few feet above ground and the fiberglass fragments can't be located by X-ray machines.

"Sixty per cent of the casualties from these bombs in the last year have been children," Harris said.

The air war is becoming increasingly removed from Americans by new technological developments, Harris said.

He said that electronic sensors that detect human presence are being dropped throughout Southeast Asia. "These sensors will relay information to computers in Thailand. This information is instantaneously relayed to American computers, decisions are made and the Thai-based computers then dispatch pilotless aircraft which fly by radio signals to drop bombs."

He said that the 4,000-year-old village-based civilization on the Plain of Jars in Laos has been wiped out by continued American bombing runs.

"A few years ago 50,000 people lived there, but now there's so many craters it looks like the moon," he said.

The bombing drives villagers into the major population centers, destroying their village-based economy, he said.

"To stand back and watch this war is to become something less than a human being," Harris said.

Candidates running in new areas

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

With six congressional districts now wholly or in part in Orange County, voters will find themselves deciding on some relatively unknown candidates in the June 6 primary.

And most of them will have little identification with the new districts, which divide Orange County into segments.

Only the 39th Congressional District — formerly the 35th — is wholly within Orange County. It ranges along the eastern portion of the county to include Brea, Placentia, Yorba Linda, part of Anaheim, most of Orange, part of Santa Ana, all of Tustin, most of Costa Mesa and half of Newport Beach, plus Laguna Hills, El Toro, Mission Viejo, Laguna Niguel, San Juan Capistrano and Capistrano Beach.

OF ALL the candidates in any of the races, perhaps the best known — and certainly the most controversial — is Rep. John G. Schmitz of Santa Ana.

He now represents the 35th District and will campaign for re-election in the new 39th District. So will Andrew J. Hinshaw, the Orange County assessor, a Republican from Mission Viejo. Also in the race are Earl Carraway, R-El Toro, a banker; Larry Denna, R-El Toro, a computer sales manager; John W. Black, D-Newport Beach, a lawyer; Thomas W. Lenhart, D-Tustin, a businessman; and Loren L. Loudon, D-Costa Mesa, a liquor salesman.

Congressman Richard T. Hanna, D-Fullerton, of the west county's 34th District, lost his "home ground" of La Palma, almost all of Anaheim, the north parts of Garden Grove and Buena Park and portions of Fullerton. His district now extends to include all of Hawaiian Gardens, most of Lakewood, and parts of Long Beach.

Hanna will be opposed by John D. Ratteree, R-Santa Ana, a businessman; Lee R. Rayburn, AIP-Huntington Beach, an electronics technician; Bernard D. Klitzner, Peace and Freedom Party. Lakewood, a student; and Donald Hayhurst, R-Garden Grove, a public relations consultant.

THE NEW 42nd Congressional District, mostly in San Diego County, takes the coastal areas of both Orange and San Diego counties from Schmitz and puts them in the new district.

State Sen. Clair W. Burgener, R-Rancho Santa Fe; Norman J. Ream, R-San Clemente, a certified public accountant, and Joseph Tomchak, D-Laguna Beach, an anthropology professor, are candidates.

New to Orange County is the 23rd Congressional District, now represented by Del Clawson, R-Compton. It includes the north half of Buena Park, west Anaheim, the north part of Garden Grove, and most of Fullerton.

Clawson will be opposed by Conrad Tuohey, D-Fullerton, a lawyer; and Louis Velasquez, D-Fullerton, a teacher.

Congressman Charles E. Wiggins, R-El Monte, loses most of his Orange County constituency; he retains only La Habra, as part of his 25th Congressional District.

OPPOSING Wiggins are teacher Leslie Craven, a Democrat; sales manager Nelson Flack, a Republican; Jerry Olivet, Democrat, a medical doctor; and Alfred Ramirez of La Habra, AIP.

Veteran Congressman Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach, finds his 32nd District cut in his home town, but extended into Orange County.

He retains about half of Long Beach and half of Lakewood, and in Orange County the district now includes Seal Beach, Rossmoor, Huntington Beach and Fountain Valley.

Opposing Hosmer are Walter L. Mallonee, D-Long Beach, an educator; John S. Donahue, PF-Long Beach; and Dennis Murray, D-Lakewood, administrative assistant.

RETIRED

Mrs. Jean Eustice, head librarian at the Burnett branch, 560 E. Hill St., checked out her last book to a little schoolgirl last week and then retired after 15 years in the city library system. She was honored with gifts at a tea attended by some 200 friends.

Bus study for Orange County

A study detailing what year, how extensively they intended to go into the bus business.

Fielding conceded that it will be "tough" to market a bus system, because most people in Orange County are not used to riding buses.

He said, however, that the transit district intends to launch a full-scale program to "sell" such a system to potential riders.

"Developing rapid transit systems is one matter, but marketing them is damned difficult," Fielding explained, adding that the district plans to "use the marketing approach" to popularize bus transportation "as the way to go."

A study detailing what Orange County should do to supply mass transit for its citizens will be filed Monday with directors of the new Orange County Transit District.

It will outline an intercounty bus system plus intracity arterial transit routes, according to Dr. Gordon J. Fielding, manager of the district.

The presentation Monday will be the first before the transit district directors — who authorized the study less than two months ago. It is, therefore, not a complete outline, Fielding said.

He expects the directors to decide by July 1, the start of the new fiscal

Bentley pledges to press for change

Jack W. Bentley, 44, director of the local political polling firm, Western View-Point, is a candidate for Long Beach City Council, 5th District.

Bentley said he felt compelled to enter local politics in the aftermath of his firm's research early this year for the Pacific Coast Freeway opposition. He said he told the group the research "will tell you how the people, not how the local political leaders feel."

RESEARCH showed, he said, that more than 65 per cent of people throughout the city — more than 70 per cent in the 5th District — opposed the proposed freeway. "Pressure was brought and the will of the people prevailed."

Bentley said he would dedicate himself toward improving council responsiveness by working for night council meetings. "then all of the people could be heard, not just special groups."

He said he feels there should be a mandatory retirement at age 65 for all elected officials since "the ordinary citizen must retire at 65."

"I vehemently favor the proposed City Charter amendment, Proposition 7, which would provide that vacancies on the local Board of Education be filled by special election rather than by appointment by the remaining members of the board.

"I am especially opposed to Dr. James Crawford, who when first seeking a seat on the board expressed his opposition to the policy of appointing and now, as an incumbent, favors this policy."

Bentley said he would render dedicated service to the city "as have other members of my family: My mother, Maragaret Hammons, served as a juvenile officer prior to her retirement; my uncle, Joe Kennick, has an enviable record in the state capital, and my brother, Bill, has served as a police officer, now lieutenant, in Long Beach for over 25 years."

THE CANDIDATE was born, raised and educated in Long Beach. After seven years' service in the Marine Corps in World War II and the Korean conflict he returned to Long Beach and attended Southwestern Law School in Los Angeles.

Bentley and his wife, Jeannette (Crenshaw, Wilson 1946), have lived at 4606 Greenmeadow Road for more than 14 years. Their son, Jon, attends Long Beach City College; daughter, Jan, will graduate from Lakewood High School in June and son, Jay, is an eighth-grade student. Bentley said he welcomes phone calls from concerned citizens.

Raw sewage overflows into Lagoon

Hundreds of gallons of raw sewage flowed into Colorado Lagoon Saturday morning following a pump breakdown at a sewage pumping station.

Lifeguards closed the salt water area to swimming after the pump breakdown sent overflow sewage into a storm drain which emptes into the lagoon.

County Sanitation Department spokesmen said gates have been closed on the tunnel connecting the lagoon with Marine Stadium, and water in the lagoon will be chlorinated heavily.

Consumer can make waves now

One of the main reasons for National Consumer Week—May 1-6—is to give the little guy a chance to speak up to business and give business the opportunity to listen.

"The Big Check-Up," a national referendum-questionnaire designed to provide insights into consumer complaints and attitudes, has been prepared by the Council of Better Business Bureau Inc. (BBB) and will appear in Monday's Independent, Press-Telegram.

Using the referendum, the consumer may make his complaints known, indicate his preferences and informational needs and then clip out the questionnaire and mail it to the local BBB office 130 Pine Ave.

ADDITIONAL questionnaires are also available at the Bureau office.

"These consumer responses can serve as guidelines for business in its efforts to reshape and revitalize its policies on consumer affairs," said Ben Paris, manager of the Long Beach BBB.

Results of the questionnaire will be tabulated by the local BBB office and made available to the public about June 1.

Paris said all information relating to the questionnaire will also be routed to the national Council of Better Business Bureaus, Inc., making nationwide results available sometime in June.

Consumer Information Week is coordinated on a national basis and focuses on the consumer's needs for informational and educational service.

"BOTH THE number of marketable items available and the impersonal nature of mass marketing have led to confusion among consumers," Paris said.

"We hope the consumer referendum will open new channels of communication between the public and the businessman and help restore a measure of confidence and understanding to the market place," he added.

Using the questionnaire, the consumer will be asked to check off marketing practices he finds annoying and frustrating, such as misleading labels, misunderstandings over warranties and products that fail to perform as advertised.

The referendum also provides for consumer response on informational needs and the types of programs he finds helpful, such as toll-free telephone lines to service departments and owner's manuals on use and care.

REPRESENTATIVES from local business clubs and civic organizations will attend a special briefing Monday designed to acquaint them with the operation of the BBB.

Persons interested in obtaining booklets and pamphlets published by the organization may do so from the "Consumer Van" which will be parked outside the Long Beach offices throughout the week. All materials are free.

The Better Business Bureau began in 1912 as a vigilante committee dedicated to exposing fraudulent and deceptive advertising.

Although the organization has no legal powers, it urges business to practice "free enterprise and self-regulation."

Father hears case involving 2 sons

CARTERSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Bartow Superior Court Judge J. L. Davis presided over a civil case in which his son Ronald represented the plaintiff and his son Jeff represented the defense.

Judge Davis said he usually disqualifies himself when a son is involved in a case, but with a son on each side, he didn't feel anyone could accuse him of showing partiality.

To aid visually impaired students

20-mile bicycle rally due Saturday

A 20-mile bicycle rally to raise scholarship funds for visually impaired students will begin at the Liberal Arts Campus of Long Beach City College Saturday at 10 a.m.

Participants including blind and vusually impaired students will ride from the campus through East Long Beach to El Dorado Park and return.

During the two-hour trip, the cyclists will pass seven checkpoints where poker cards stamped in braille will be picked up. The cyclists with best poker hands will be awarded prizes at the end of the rally.

Local merchants have donated rally prizes to be awarded to contestants.

The rally is sponsored by the Long Beach City College Delta Beta Omega Chapter of the National Federation of the Blind of California.

Open to the public with or without visual impairment, the rally will include three bike categories: ten-speed, other multiple-geared and conventional bicycles. Tandems will be entered in respective gear categoris.

Three winning poker hands in each category will receive prizes.

Legally blind persons may compete as members of tandem bike teams. Time and speed are not factors in the competition.

Rally publicity chairman John D. Currie, of 4509 Bellflower Blvd., said, "The Bicycle Poker Rally is being sponsored by the blind and visually impaired students to give handicapped people a chance to participate fully.

"It provides another opportunity for blind people to realize their full potential in community activities. Bicycling has become one of the best ways for visually handicapped persons to exercise and to maintain physical fitness," he said.

Registration for the rally will start at 9 a.m. at the campus on Clark Ave. and Carson. Registration fees will be $1 per person.

Kohn schools help fit pupil to process

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

It's a fascinating philosophy for a private school:

"We're trying to help 'square peg in round hole' youngsters return to the mainstream of public and parochial education," says Dr. Gerhard Kohn, founding director of twin schools in Long Beach and Huntington Beach that bear his name.

More formally these together are the "Gerhard Kohn School of Educational Therapy" — with heavy emphasis on that last word.

CORRECTIVE psychological treatment for educationally handicapped and poorly motivated students is integral to the curriculum, the doctor of philosophy, licensed psychologist and friend-disciple of the late Viennese therapist Frtiz Perls declared during a recent interview.

It was psychiatrist Perls, in fact, who originated an existentially-oriented Gestalt therapy which Kohn and his associates use with their youthful students-patients.

Perls, dead since 1970, was a colleague in Emperor Franz Josef's Vienna of Dr. Sigmund Freud. He later was to break with this sexually-centered father of modern psychoanalysis, going on to found his own school, repeating a pattern seen time and again in the splintered 20th Century history of psychiatry.

BY APPLYING Perlsian concepts, the area schools become — in Kohn's judgment — "places where children learn to learn."

Problems, barriers to learning, are resolved "in the here and now" — the essence of existentialism. Coequal in importance is a humanistic approach, one which Kohn said would make a child more aware — of himself and the world around.

Since Gestalt therapy theory holds that human personality often may be fragmented or split, "Our goal is to help a child — or adult — bring these fragments together . . . so that an individual can find his own way in life," said Kohn.

In today's high pressurized world, "A vast majority of kids need to be turned on to the joys of living, of life, to develop the self-concept of 'I can do it,'" he added.

Kohn's targets, of course, are educationally handicapped elementary-through-secondary school-age youngsters. And in a time when EH has become in school circles a catch-all phrase of many meanings, he, refreshingly, offered a precise definition.

SPECIFICALLY ruled out in that definition is mental retardation, a condition his schools do not attempt to treat. Concentrated on are five areas where Kohn believes cures or improvements can be achieved. These involve:

Problems such as aphasia, in which speech and language patterns are affected; dyxlexia, or reading difficulties; behavioral difficulties; slowness in reaching more mature physical, neurological, emotional or social levels; and brain damage.

Some 84 students currently attend day-long sessions in which regular classwork—reading, math, social studies — is augmented by individual and group therapy. Another 100 who remain in "mainstream" schools participate in late-afternoon corrective sessions.

Working with the director and another psychologist, three therapists and 15 educational specialists.

THERE ARE non-perlsian techniques used in the school environment that fascinate the educationally-minded observer; an "over-learning" approach designed to dam a rapid runoff of newly-acquired knowledge ranks high among these innovations.

It was in the therapy area where this spectator was most intrigued.

Here there are only a few "rules," and even more "games" to be played.

In the former category, there is constant striving by therapist and student to keep all communications in the present tense, today, now. "The past and future are important," Kohn observed, "but we must live in the here and now."

ALWAYS encouraged by those simple guidelines is the development of a stronger, more independent "I individual." No ordinary ego trip this, the purpose is to assist a student in assuming greater responsibility for his behavior.

Ordinary gossip even is ruled out, since Gestalt theory holds that idle talk about others may be a device to irresponsibly avoid reality, weakening the "I" factor.

3 high school girls get tour of SAMSO

Three harbor area high school girls visited the Air Force Space and Missile Systems Organization (SAMSO) in El Segundo last week as part of Girls' Career Day.

The girls, Susan Soto, 333 Island Ave., Wilmington, a senior at Banning High School; Marie Herr, 1768 Chandelier, and Melody Minas, 1160 W. 2nd St., San Pedro, both seniors at San Pedro High School, were sponsored by Women in the Air Force (WAF) during their one-day visit.

Welcomed to SAMSO by Lt. Col. Arminta Harness, WAF adviser and deputy chief of the programs budget division, the girls learned about career opportunities for women in the military and civil service.

S-Sgt. Chris Militzer, USAF recruiter from Hawthorne, showed the girls two films on Air Force opportunities and answered questions.

Girls' Career Day, a county-wide event held this year for the first time in several years, now is planned as an annual event. Senior girls from 50 Los Angeles County high schools took part, visiting professional women, area businesses and government installations to learn about career opportunities for women.

Required to have a high scholastic average, the girls were recommended by teachers and guidance counselors to participate in career day.

Ex-Councilman List to be 'hailed' in Bellflower

A committee of friends, golfing and business associates of former Bellflower Councilman Gene List have scheduled a "Roast Gene List Night" dinner program to honor the veteran councilman. He retired from city office earlier after he did not seek re-election.

The event will be held at Rochelle's Restaurant, 3333 Lakewood Blvd., Long Beach, on May 23. Dr. Earle Hoggard and Howard Schug will serve as masters of ceremonies. The meeting will open with a social hour at 6:30 p.m.

List, an insurance broker, served more years on the Bellflower council than any other person. He took office for his first three-year term by appointment on Dec. 22, 1958 to fill the unexpired term of Vincent Dalismer. Dalismer, an original member of the council, resigned to accept a state appointment. List was later elected for two four year terms having served a total of 11 years on the council. The city was incorporated on Sept. 3, 1957.

Entertainment for the evening, in addition to "Roasting List" will be provided by the Peter B. Feenstra musical family.

The program chairman is former Chamber of Commerce president, Al Schwab. Those serving on the committee include John Maulding, Claire Thompson, John Thompson, Lester Taylor, Don Harter, Jack Day, George Miller, Patrick Stewart, Cecil Clough and Ed Camou.

Tickets are available from each of the committeemen, at the Bellflower City Hall or the Chamber of Commerce office.

NERVE CENTER FOR U.S. MILITARY

The Pentagon—largest office building in world

By WARREN L. NELSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon, world's largest office building and a city in itself, now has served three decades as nerve center for the nation's military.

It has 6,546,360 square feet of floor space, double that of the next-largest such building, the Merchandise Mart in Chicago. It has four postal zipcodes; 17½ miles of corridors; 309,276 square feet of glass — but only one passenger elevator, a private one for the defense secretary.

THE EMPIRE State Building could be tipped over inside the place with room to spare.

There are problems of matching magnitude, not the least of which is disposing of 9,000 pounds of coffee grounds a week. ("You don't just leave 4½ tons of coffee grounds on the back porch," said Frank T. Martin, a civilian who manages the building for the General Services Administration.)

The Pentagon's population, which swelled to 30,000 during World War II, has leveled off now at about 25,000, only half of them military. For their convenience, there is an enclosed shopping center bigger than the concourse of New York City's Pennsylvania Station.

It was on April 29, 1942, just over four months after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, that the first personnel began moving into the fortress-like structure, although it would not be completed for another nine months.

The fact that the five-sided, five-floor building was made available so quickly rates as remarkable.

AS THE peacetime army grew during 1940 and 1941, about 24,000 personnel flooded building space in and around the nation's capital.

On July 14, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt asked Congress for money to construct a big new building to consolidate all army headquarters offices. It was a mere 16 months later that the last form was pulled away to reveal what came to be known by such nicknames as the Cement Sanatorium, the Squirrel Cage, the Puzzle Palace, Ft. Fumble, Disneyland East and Pandemonium Palace on the Potomac.

Planners looking for a site first settled on an odd-sized plot on the Virginia side of the Potomac near Arlington National Cemetery, where John F. Kennedy now lies buried.

That tract originally was a rectangle, but a road had cropped off one corner and made it five-sided. The area soon was dropped in favor of a more spacious site just to the south — but decided to stay with the pentagonal shape.

Only 34 days passed from the time the design was first considered until ground was broken — a process normally taking a year and a half.

THERE was a great deal of opposition to the building at first.

The National Association of Building Owners and managers testified before a congressional committee that the Pentagon would be a white elephant after the war "unless we are to look forward to a permanent military establishment vastly greater than we have hitherto maintained; and no one, we believe, would be disposed to advance such a reason at this time."

Roosevelt said not to worry; half the building could be used later as storage space for the national archives. Others suggested it could be converted into a veterans hospital.

The decision made, 15,000 workers poured onto the site. To support the building, they sank 41,492 concrete piles.

(One evening one of the workers failed to check out, didn't show up at home, and didn't report for work the next day. Colleagues feared the worst and found it — the man's body imbedded in concrete poured the previous day.)

The shopping center? That was included primarily because of the building's comparative isolation, and because many of the women who flooded the work force at the time worked until well after their own neighborhood stores would be closed.

WHILE the Pentagon has fewer residents now, it is actually more crowded. As in most government buildings, there is a trend away from huge offices accommodating dozens of workers. The new walls to provide smaller cubicles, and the inner corridors needed to reach them eat up space.

Every day, new walls are going up and old ones being moved around to rearrange space and there are mixups.

Recently a painter was putting the finishing touches on a new wall when a crowbar smashed through from the other side just missing his head. The painter hurried into the next office to find a surprised workman who produced a written directive calling on him to tear down that wall.

JUST KEEPING the inch-thick Pentagon telephone book updated is a major proposition. With the military's penchant for switching its people about, there are an average of 370 changes in the telephone list every day. New phone books are issued every three months.

Despite its fascination for gadgetry, the Pentagon has turned thumbs down on the push-button phone — a switchover which would cost $1 million a year. The only one in the place is in the defense secretary's office.

Properly patriotic, the main Pentagon phone number is Liberty 5-6700.

The Pentagon has a 14-doctor clinic with two specially built miniambulances. First Lt. Glenn Marshall has charge of the ambulances, but doesn't let them go full speed in the crowded corridors. "People are allergic to moving" he said. "We're afraid we'll come back with more patients than we went out for."

THE PENTAGON looks deceptively small from the outside, with its low profile at the foot of a gentle rise. Inside, for the unitiitiated, it is just plain deceptive.

Probably the oldest of the apocryphal stories to which this confusion has given rise is the one about the uniformed Western Union messenger who went in to deliver a telegram and had been made a general by the time he found his way out.

The Pentagon corridors are straight, but on 20 different axes — enough to disorient a homing pigeon.

WHEN THE Pentagon was planned, its estimated cost was $35 million. After an overrun of 42 per cent, the bill was $49.6 million for the building plus another $33.4 million for access roads, parking lots, land fill and other items.

Every year, $8.1 million is spent just to keep the roof from leaking, make sure the air conditioners condition the air — and move all those walls around.

The building has only 13 elevators, all for freight except for the secretary's. This was a specific feature of the design, the architects realizing that no number of elevators could possible handle the morning and evening glut of people.

They relied on escalators, stairs and ramps to move people about.

TO MANY ousiders the Pentagon is a cold, stone tomb, the epitome of impersonal government. Actually, there probably is more camaraderie there than in most big office buildings. People shop together, relax in the five-acre courtyard, pause to chat in the hallways.

Largely because there are relatively few enlisted men in the building, the officer corps is less formal than on the average base. A lieutenant colonel who might reign like a feudal lord in the field is just one of the boys there. Even a general is just one among many.

Price rollbacks among conflicting signs of nation's economic health

By DAVID BURKE

NEW YORK (AP) — The prospect of hundreds of millions of dollars in price rollbacks dominated the economic newsfront this past week as the Price Commission promised to crack down on firms with excessive profit margins.

C. Jackson Grayson Jr., chairman, said the Price Commission was reviewing the quarterly earnings reports from major companies and indicated that large price reductions and refunds were in the offing.

LATER IN the week, Ford Motor Co. voluntarily announced an average $13 price cut for its cars and trucks after reporting a 49 per cent leap in first-quarter earnings to $252 million.

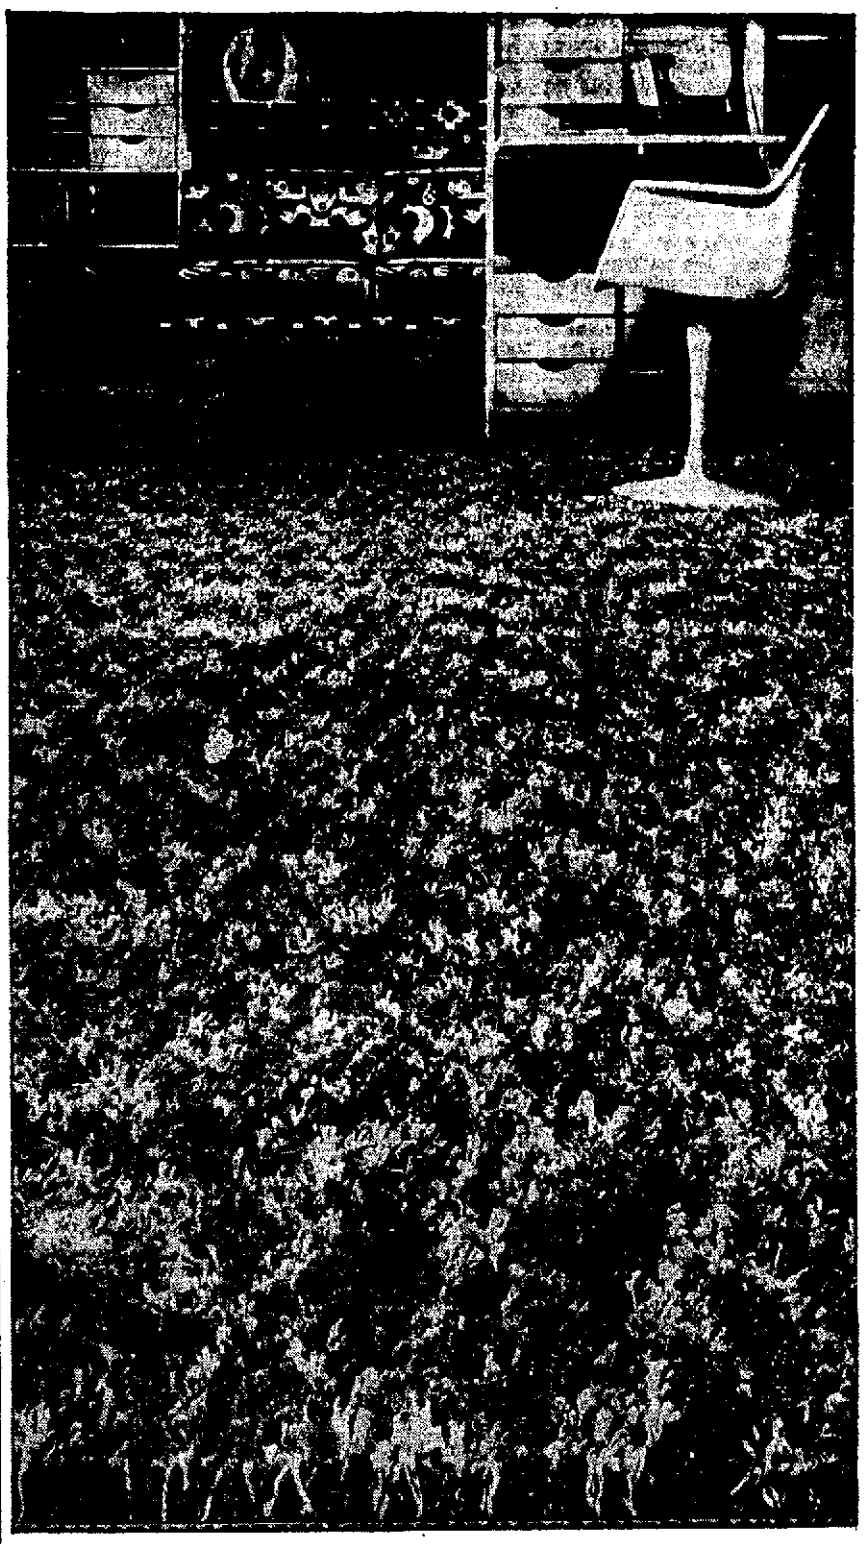

The commission ordered rollbacks at six large companies, including Eckerd Drugs Inc., a Charlotte, N.C.-based chain of 123 stores, and F. W. Woolworth Co., which was told to rescind recent increases in lunch counter operations at its five-and-dime outlets.

Other news during the week gave conflicting signs of the nation's economic health. The government reported a worsening of the U.S. trade deficit in March and a slackening of productivity gains during the first quarter. On the plus side, leading economic indicators showed gains last month.

The Commerce Department said the $584.3-million deficit in the nation's trade account last month, which was slightly lower than the February deficit, brought the first-quarter deficit to a record $1.5 billion.

ARMY ENGINEERS CORPS READIES MODEL

Canal bringing water to S. Calif. facing test

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD

SAUSALITO (UPI) — The proposed peripheral canal, the controversial waterway designed to take fresh Sacramento River water to Southern California, will soon be put to the test.

The Army Corps of Engineers has been readying its huge model of San Francisco Bay and the delta regions for a month-long series of tests to gather data on the canal.

The model covers 47 000 square feet housed in a warehouse in this Marin county tourist town.

Precise instruments on the model, one of the largest hydraulic working models of any harbor in the world, measure elevations of water, its velocity and salt content. When the model is adjusted, so the measurements agree with similar ones from the bay itself, it acts to scale the same as in nature.

ENGINEERS at the warehouse, working like so many Gullivers, have been adjusting the instruments and installing a model of the canal for the tests scheduled to start May 1.

"If we didn't have this model we'd just have to build a project and see what happens," said Col. Charles R. Roberts, the corps' district engineer.

"We expect we'll come up with some answers but these tests usually also provide us with many questions we didn't know even existed," the officer said.

At present there are plenty of questions regarding the canal, which would redirect the Sacramento's fresh water that now eventually flows into the bay.

THE STATE SEES the system, running 43 miles from Hood to Tracy, as a key link in the California Water Project.

Conservationists feel it would be a threat to the ecology of the bay with withholding sufficient fresh water to support everything from recreation to industry.

Designers envision a series of release stations to surge fresh water from the canal into bay tributaries to take care of the area's needs.

The tests will determine the effect of the 11 stations on the salinity, tides and currents.

The salinity tests will undoubtedly be most keenly watched by such conservation groups as the powerful Sierra Club, the Save the Delta Association, and Friends of the Earth.

Opponents of the canal claim numerous fish would be killed and lack of fresh water would upset the ecology of the Suisun Bay marshes, part of the Pacific Flyway.

DAN ROSENBERG, a staff member of the Sierra Club, estimates the pumps alone on the canal will kill "thousands of smaller fish."

As early as 1969 a subcommittee of the club reported the model would "facilitate the determination of an adequate minimum outflow, providing agreement is reached on the maximum salt water intrusion to be permitted."

Rosenberg says that currently the amount of salt water the state sees as permissible is "the main reason for our opposition."

There are stacks of salt bags in one corner of the warehouse. They'll be used in the tests, emptied by degrees into the model's water that's circulated by powerful pumps.

"What we find out will be strictly informational," says Ed Schultz, in charge of the model. "The interpretation of the facts we gather will be up to other disciplines, such as biology."

THE MODEL, the main portion built in 1957 and the delta added in 1969, already has an impressive record of aiding man in solving problems.

There were big plans a few years back to build a barrier to create a ship canal along the east rim of the bay.

The model showed this would interrupt a number of the natural conditions in the bay.

Engineers for the Bay Area Rapid Transit System wanted to know the best time to drop the tube under the bay linking San Francisco and Oakland. They studied the tides and currents on the model and lowering the tube came off later without a hitch.

During a huge oil spill in the bay, resulting from the collision of two tankers, the model enabled authorities to estimate where the slick would be at a given time. Armed with this knowledge, they concentrated cleaning equipment at the most vital spots.

EVEN THE FBI has used the facility. When a prisoner escaped from Alcatraz, agents estimated the current strength and direction during and after the escape.

They concluded he was swept out to sea.

The tests next month will have a far more important role than any of these.

William Gianelli, water resources director, says the canal is "urgently needed" to assure that water deliveries of the state water project can be "made with deficiency in quantity or quality."

He said studies by his department show there's a risk of not meeting deliveries "during dry years commencing in 1976 if the peripheral canal is not operational."

When Gov. Ronald Reagan started the pumps at the dedication ceremonies last October for the California Water Project he had a few words to say about the future.

THE PUMPS BROUGHT the first water from Northern California over the Tehachapi Mountains to the southern part of the state.

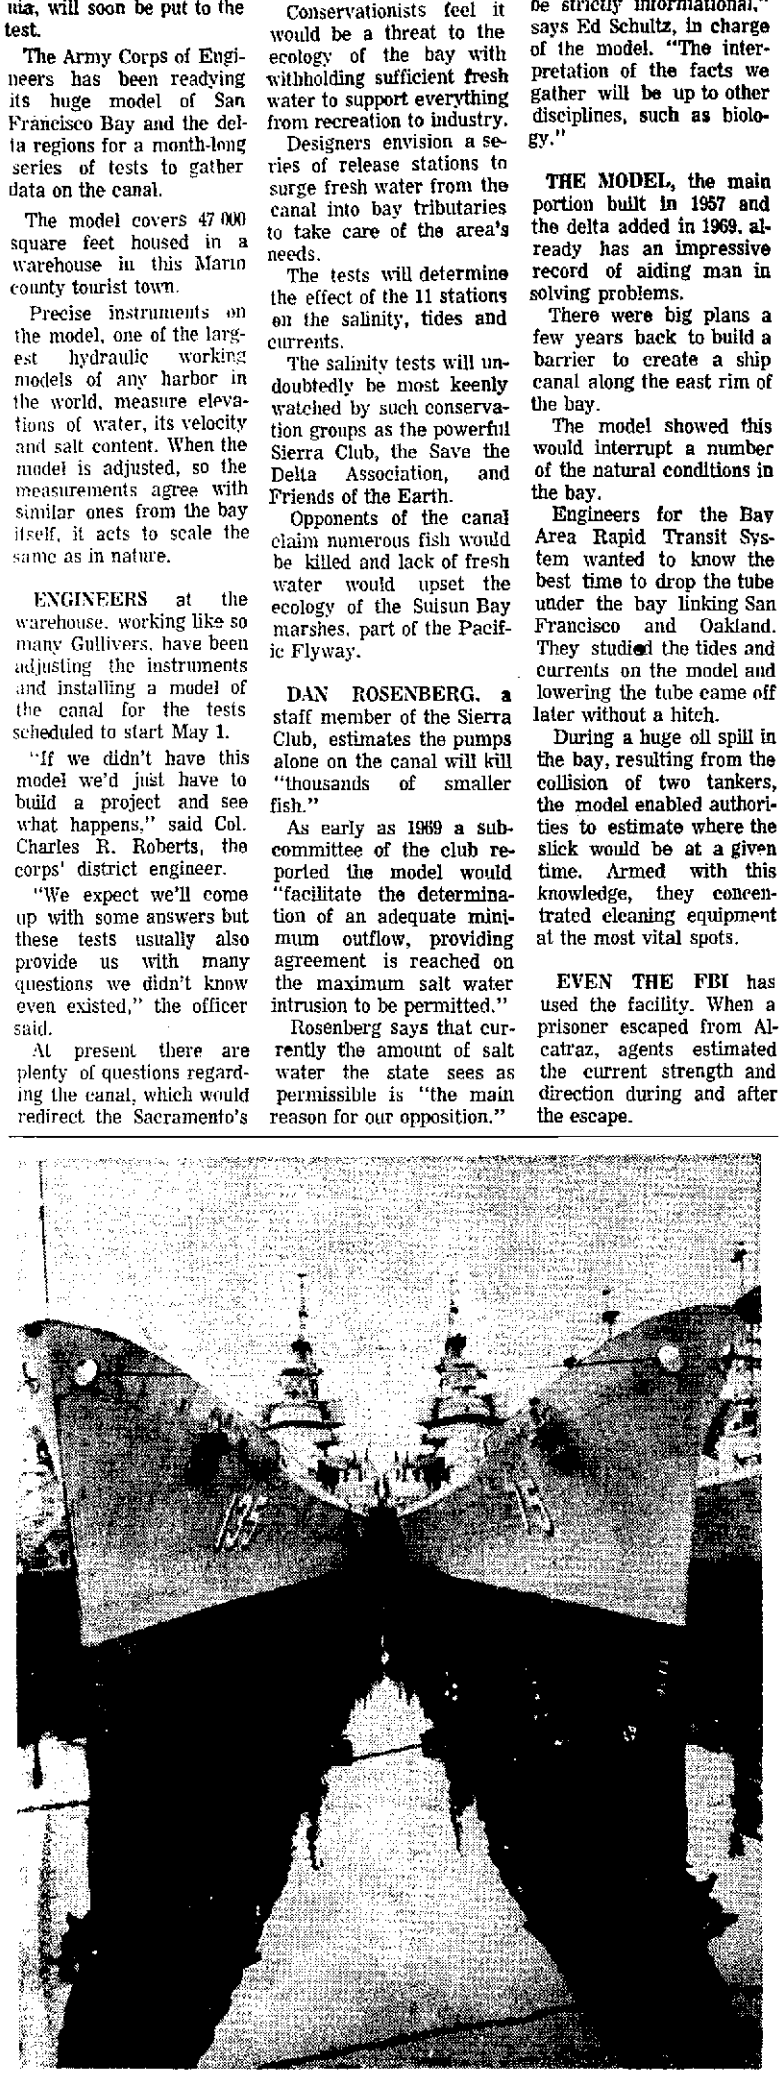

"There are no valid arguments to justify halting or delaying the state water project," the governor said. He said stopping it, when it was more than 90 per cent complete, would "create a financial catastrophe."

While Reagan spoke the Sierra Club held a "wake" in San Francisco to bid "farewell to the first Northern California water pumped across the Tehachapi Mountains."

'Conservative' Austria has no drug problem

By PHILIP J. TILL

VIENNA (UPI) — Austria has a claim to fame almost unique in the western world today — it has no drug problem and virtually no addicts.

"We're much too conservative," explains Erwin Roeck, drug squad chief at the ministry of the interior.

There isn't a single registered addict in the country, Roeck said. "Of course," he added, "there are a few odd addicts not reported to us by the doctors, but not enough to make trouble."

Roeck believes Austria's location helps keep down drug addiction. "We've got a bit of an East European mentality and things that catch on in most western countries only trickle along to us. For instance, we don't have pronography trouble, either."

He said Austrian police had never carried out a drug raid. "raids are unnecessary," he said. "Nobody passes drugs around. There are some places we keep an eye on but we've never had to move in on any."

Hard drugs such as heroin are virtually unobtainable, and Austria has never had a known cause of heroin addiction. In student circles there is some smoking of hashish, the North African equivalent of marijuana. But it is poor grade — "very weak," one student said — and sells, when it can be found, for the equivalent of about $1.20 a "roll."

In all of 1970, the last year for which figures are available, 1,040 persons were prosecuted under anti-drug laws. They included a few peddlers of hashish, Roeck said, but were mostly persons caught smoking it. In the same span, two youths injured themselves by jumping from windows while under the influence of LSD.

In addition to the Austrian temperament cited by Roeck as a reason for the country's lack of a drug problem, authorities also maintain strict anti-smuggling vigilance at airports with the help of drug-sniffing dogs.

Punishment for use of drugs recently has been eased. "First users" are fined and required to undergo medical treatment. In the past the offense carried a possible jail sentence.

Somoza dynasty strong

By LEONARDO LACAYO OCAMPO

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Gen. Anastasio (Tachito) Somoza steps down from the presidency of Nicaragua Monday after a five-year tearm, but observers aren't writing his political obituary yet.

No one will be surprised to see Somoza back in the president's chair in a couple of years.

The Somoza family has ruled the Central American republic of 1.9 million people either directly or indirectly since 1933 and a great-grandfather of Somoza even held the presidency briefly in 1893 before being overthrown by a military coup.

Somoza belongs to the Liberal Party, which has held power since 1928, when U.S. Marines supervised an election. The first member of the Somoza family came to power in 1933 when Somoza's granduncle, Juan Bautista Sacasa, took office.

OTHER MEMBERS of the Somoza family who have been president of Nicaragua are his father, Anastasio (Tacho) (1937-1947 and 1951-1956) and his elder brother Luis (1956-1963). "Tachito" himself was elected for a five-year term in 1967.

Other presidents in between were interim presidents. Another interim government will take office Monday, this time a triumvirate consisting of two liberals of Somoza's party and one man of the opposition Conservative Party. It will make the first time that a Conservative has formed part of any Nicaraguan government since 1929.

The men ruling the republic in Roman style for 30 months are liberals Gen. Roberto Martinez Lacazo, 72, and Alfonso Lovo Cordero, 45. The Conservative is party leader Fernando Aguero, 48.

Somoza remains chief of the armed forces during the interim government by the triumvirate, an important indication that he has no intentions of retiring from public life.

SOMOZA WILL be able to be a candidate again for a new term when the next presidential elections are held in September, 1974. If he wins, as he is expected to do, he'll be president of Nicaragua again on Dec. 1, 1974.

A West Point graduate, Somoza, now 47, got the cooperation of Aguero's Conservatives in his poltical plans to shape the destiny of Nicaragua.

He and Aguero agreed to replace Nicaragua's constitution with a new one, the country's 16th since independence. Thus, Somoza was no longer bound by the reelection prohibition contained in the old constitution.

In return, Somoza gave important concessions in the constitution for the "democratization" of the country.

Somoza set the complicated political machinery of the political pact in motion by dissolving Congress and assuming all legislative powers himself in addition to his executive powers late last year.

On Feb. 6 of this year nationwide elections were held with only Somoza's Liberals and Aguero's Conservatives participating. Christian Democrats and splinter groups were ruled off the ballot by an electoral tribunal.

N.Y. birth rate shows big drop

NEW YORK (UPI) — The birth rate in New York City dropped 14.4 per cent for white women and 19.5 per cent for black women between 1960 and 1970, Health Services Administrator Gordon Chase reported Saturday.

The total number of births in the city declined from 166,300 in 1960 to 149,192 in 1970, Chase said, attributing at least part of the decline to the infamily planning and abortion services.

Legal tangle snarls Riverside old maid's will

CORONA (UPI) — When Leilamae Harlow died last December at the age of 76, she left a 27-room house on 120 acres just south of this Riverside County community called Cajalco Rancho.

She also left a complicated legal tangle over her estate, which has been estimated from $500,000 to $3 million depending on whom you talk to.

On one side is Mrs. Sarah Gilliam, a 56-year-old grade school teacher at Memphis, Tex., a niece of Miss Harlow.

LINED UP against her are nine other relatives spread throughout the country.

Miss Harlow, who came here 40 years ago with her mother and a brother from Texas, now both dead, named Mrs. Gilliam as her sole beneficiary in a will.

Joseph Choate, a Los Angeles attorney, was employed by the nine discontented relatives to represent them in a suit contesting the will. Mrs. Gilliam hired Larry Reynolds of Riverside to handle her legal matters.

Choate calls the will "so one-sided it invited what has happened." His clients' legal statement contesting the Harlow document said there was "undue influence" from Mrs. Gilliam and questioned the mental competency of Miss Harlow.

MRS. GILLIAM will not speak on the subject but Reynolds says:

"I see the point of their lawsuit. I can't say I'd take a different position if I were them. But their charges are a bunch of hogwash."

Reynolds claims the estate is worth between $500,000 and $750,000, "probably closer to $500,000." Choate put an estimate of between $2 million and $3 million on its value.

"You have to remember," said Reynolds, "that we are a little closer to the picture than they are."

An interesting sidelight to the case was the disclosure of Miss Harlow's personal possessions. They could be described as an antique collector's dream.

ROBERT CLARK, owner of Clark's Galleries in Riverside, was called on to auction off the dead woman's possessions and the auction brought $10,000.

Minus Clark's 30 per cent commission, the money was turned over to the Harlow estate.

"The total worth of the personal effects," Clark said, "was really not that significant. The significance to me was the unusual quality of the antiques.

"It was so unique in that I'd never seen so many items in their original state in one place at one time."

H. M. Geyer, a Riverside car wash owner, paid the top price for the Harlow items — $700 for a Regina music box. A black ebony French cabinet brought $625.

AMONG THE items was a diary dated 1845 which started out with an entry about a trip with four yoke of oxen.

Also in Miss Harlow's collection were 40 old phonographs, some dating back before the turn of the century, complete with scratchy cylinders and giant cone-shaped morning glory horns, a pair of zithers, a set of hand-painted china and an old rifle collection.

Reynolds said Choate had "talked about a settlement."

"But I think," he continued, "we have a very strong case and I'm not interested in settling. Let's put it this way, I haven't seen anything that puts any pressure on us to settle."

Harvesting of sea urchin may be basis for new commercial fishery

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Harvesting the sea urchin, those spiny-backed kelp-killers and enemy of abalone, may be the basis of a new commercial fishery now being encouraged by the National Marine Fisheries Service (MNFS).

The sea animal, until now considered in this country, particularly in California, to be a destroyer of productive fish-haven kelp beds, a needled-backed menace to unwary ocean waders and a repeated victor over the abalone for both food and dwelling space, produces roe which is a highly sought-after delicacy in foreign lands.

WITH THE AID of marine scientists from the NMFS laboratory at Tiburon, Calif., two firms recently began processing red sea urchins on a trial basis seeking to establish a sales potential for the roe.

California's coastal waters, including those off Palos Verdes Peninsula and along the Orange County shoreline, have tremendous sea urchin populations. The urchins devour seaweed, particularly kelp, on which many fish depend for food and shelter. Some areas once supported thick kelp beds and offered protective shelter for a wide vareity of sea life. Now many kelp beds, because of the ravages of a sea urchin invasion, have disappeared.

In an attempt to protect the once thick stands of kelp off Palos Verdes, scores of scuba divers periodically attack the urchins with hammers and quick lime. Previous kelp conservation efforts were devoted to destroying the urchins rather than utilizing them.

HARVESTING the urchins as a food source offers promise of help for the abalone, a marine animal enjoyed by many Americans as a sea food.

Marine biologists report the sea urchin is usually more successful in competing with the abalone for food and space.

Bottom areas dense with urchins usually are devoid of "abs." Where abalone do manage to get a shell-hold among urchins, they appear stunted.

NMFS biologists are working with California Department of Fish and Game scientists to study the sea urchin-abalone relationship in the Avila Beach area, north of Pismo Beach. Marine biologists believe a monitoring program may show whether urchin removal is beneficial to the abalone populations, and provide a comparison of growth rates of abalone in urchin-free areas.

WHILE THE massacre of thousands upon thousands of urchins by divers was hailed as a victory, the slaughter was mourned by scores of San Pedro's Italian colony, by Gardena's colony of Japanese, by Wilmington's Samoan colony.

Most Americans are repulsed at the suggestion they try urchin roe, dipped in vinegar and garnished with onion, (or any other recipe). They regard the lowly, ugly, spiny creature in the same class with octopus, eel, squid, and sea snails.

But in France, Italy, Japan, Chile, Hawaii, and elsewhere hostesses who offer their guests urchin roe earn the compliments of their appreciative guests.

Facts You Should Know About Watches

by Arch Shindler of Lawson's Jewelers,
Downtown Long Beach

This is the fourth article in our series about watches, excerpted from the Better Business Bureau Educational Division's Booklet "Facts You Should Know About Jewelry."

What is accuracy in a watch? Built-in accuracy cannot be assured at a cheap price; nor can built-in accuracy be maintained without care. The movements, shocks, and other effects to which a wrist watch may be subjected do not promote accuracy. On the other hand, motions of the wrist promote accuracy of an automatic wrist watch by keeping the spring wound.

Even in excellent watches, lots or gain up to a few minutes per week would not be unusual, considering that use and care affect time-keeping. Obviously, there could be more loss or gain in the less precision construction of less expensive watches and up to several minutes per day in the least expensive. Accuracy decreases with wear of the parts in a watch and with lack of care, and it apt to decrease according to size of the watch. For example, women's tiny wrist watches cannot compare in accuracy with a pocket watch or a good size wrist watch.

Care — A watch wound regularly will keep better time, because it is not then dependent on the last feeble efforts of the mainspring. Wind a watch at the same time each day, preferably in the morning or when daily activity starts. Keeping a watch wound even when it is not in use, is good policy. Lint, dust, and perspiration are enemies of a watch. Excessive body or external heat affect and may even stop a watch. Extreme cold temperature, or quick change in temperature, affect operation. Change from a warm wrist all day to a cold room all night does not promote accuracy. Humidity, moisture, and condensation, caused by changes in temperature, are damaging. Moisture of the breath or fingers will affect a watch movement. Opening a watch case also subjects the movement to specks of dust.

Copies of this booklet may be obtained free of charge at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., downtown Long Beach only.

Bellflower's DMV office dedication set Friday

Bellflower's new $700,000 branch office of the California Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) at 9520 E. Artesia Blvd., will be dedicated in ceremonies at 10:30 a.m. Friday, Charles Creighton, Officer manager, said Saturday

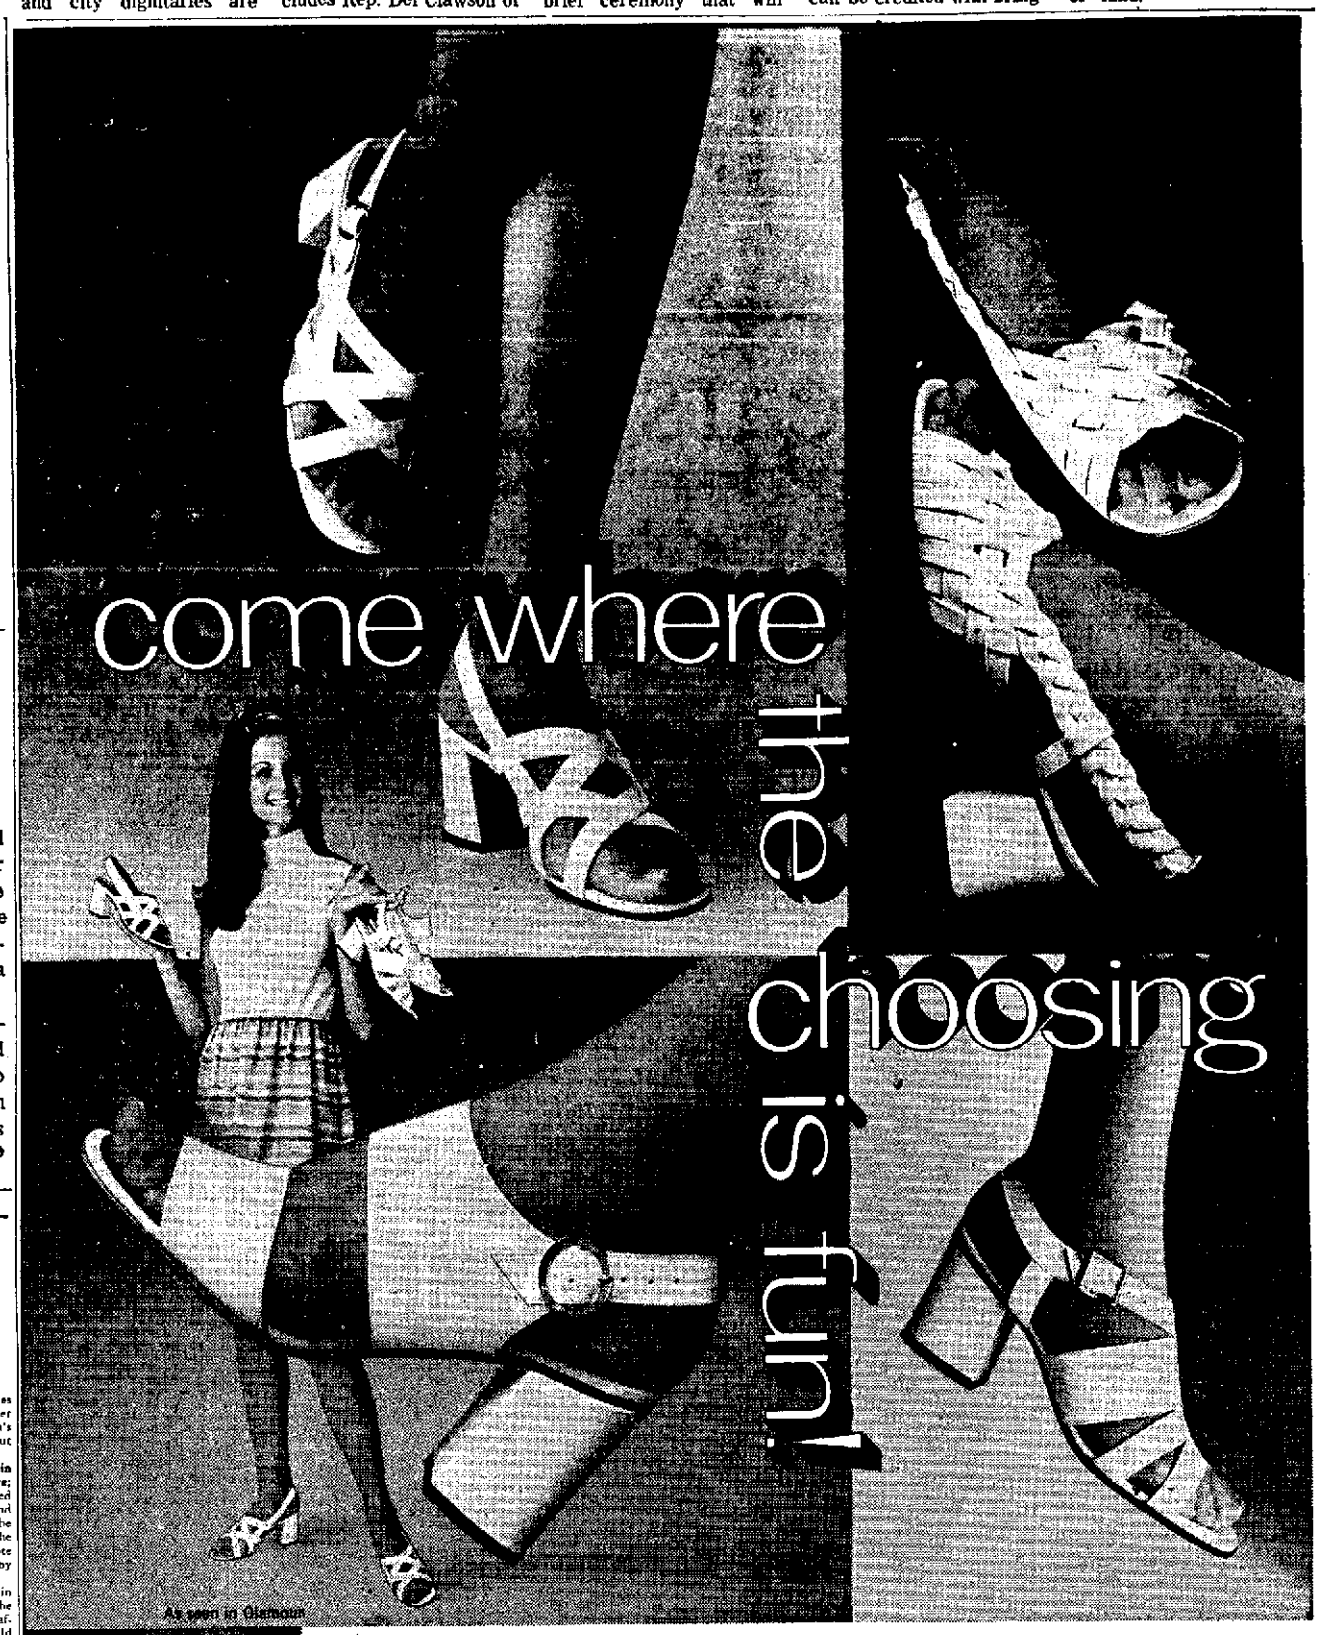

National, state, county and city dignitaries are scheduled to attend the formal public opening of the branch office. It has grown from part-time two-man office in the late 1940's to an office that is now the 12th largest in the state in the issuance of drivers licenses.

The list of dignitaries includes Rep. Del Clawson of the 23rd Congressional District, Senator Joseph Kennedy, Assemblyman Carley V. Porter, Capt. Paul Zeltner, commanding officer of the Lakewood area sheriff's station, Mayor Kenneth Cleveland and others.

Principal speaker in the brief ceremony that will be followed by an inspection tour of the facility will be Douglas Romney, deputy director of the DMV of Sacramento. He will represent Robert C. Cozens, state director.

The Bellflower Chamber of Commerce, the city's booster organization that can be credited with bringing the first DMV service to Bellflower nearly a quarter century ago, will be represented by president Jim Carnevale and members of the Chamber's board of directors.

The Bellflower DMV office and off-street parking facilities covers 2.96 acres of land.

Record marijuana seizures along U.S.-Mexican border

By K. MACK SISK

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The Nixon administration's crackdown on narcotics smugglers is resulting in record marijuana confiscations this spring along the U.S.-Mexican border.

William F. Hughes, a Boston native heading a U.S. Custom Agency team that patrols 450 miles of the border, said the loads of weed being brought from a "bumper crop" of marijuana in Mexico are getting larger and the smugglers are getting more cunning.

"THE PEOPLE we're dealing with now are well organized, well financed," he said. "A guy working on a master's degree during the week is liable to kill you if you catch him on the weekend with a thousand pounds of grass."

"We're trying to stop mountains of marijuana coming into this country," Hughes said. "We're dealing with organized crime by so-called 'nice kids.' A nice looking guy who looks like a college professor may be moving a thousand pounds of grass. It's far more sophisticated and a hell of a lot more people are involved."

Since 1970, when the Nixon administration instituted the first expansion of customs since the Calvin Coolidge era, the number of investigators has been tripled nationally to about 1,000 — a large number of which are operating along the U.S.-Mexican border where most smuggled marijuana crosses.

HUGHES' district — running from Sullivan City, Tex., in the lower Rio Grande Valley to above Amistad Dam in the Big Bend area of Texas — seized nearly seven tons of marijuana the first three and a half months this year. This compares with 10 tons of the illegal weed confiscated in the district in all of 1971, a record year when 88 tons of marijuana were seized by customs nationally.

"There definitely has been an increase in traffic," he said. "There's a bumper crop of weed in Mexico this year and everybody and his goat is getting into the act.

"Air smuggling right now is the major problem we have. It is very difficult to stop it without information. Unless you've got intelligence, there's not much you can do about it."

HUGHES said starting in 1965-66, airplanes became important to smugglers for transporting contraband narcotics into the country. Before that, he said, most of the sales were made along the border and the pickup men sent to make the buy were easily seen.

Hughes said the lust for quick profits — marijuana can be bought in Mexico for $10 a pound in the interior and sold in the united States for $100 a pound bulk — has brought hordes of parttime smugglers into the act.

"Some say they get rich in a year and retire," Hughes said. And he said the fear of losing large investments is causing smugglers to resist arrest even more.

"THEY'RE shooting more now. All these bloody smugglers have two-way radios and guns," Hughes said.

To combat the problem, Hughes' force covering the Texas points of Del Rio, Eagle Pass, Falcon Heights, Laredo, Lubbock and San Antonio in the past year were linked with "sector communications." This latest communications development puts any customs agent traveling on land or in the air in contact immediately with any law enforcement agency or telephone in the country 24 hours a day and seven days a week.

Customs also is making good use of the "convoy," which it invented, to nab narcotics rings all over the country. The convoy involves catching the "mule," a pickup man, as he crosses the border with narcotics, then trailing him to his delivery point and arresting all involved. But seizures have been made in Detroit, Los Angeles, Chicago, San Francisco and other cities by using the method in his district, Hughes said.

"WE'VE MADE a number of controlled deliveries," he said. "It's the single most important tactic outside of undercover intelligence." Customs also has money to pay informers for information.

Throught April 17, District 7 agents had arrested 435 persons this year, compared with 866 in all of 1971, and confiscated 1,114 grams of cocaine and 889 grams of heroin besides the marijuana.

"There's no way of telling what percentage we are catching," Hughes said. "But we're sure putting a dent in it.'

Reservists aid the people

By United Press International

Teams of Army reservists walked through the Bronx in April rains to give blood tests to hundreds of small children for lead poisoning.

The 356th Civil Affairs Unit has worked with New York's Bureau of Lead Poisoning Control for over a month trying to locate and treat lead poisoning cases.

In Cleveland members of the 256th Dental Unit provide dental service to hundreds of inner city residents and other units provide hospital community service in six Cleveland area hospitals.

THE 356TH and 256th are two of scores of Army Reserve units across the country pushing out into the community. Now celebrating its 64th anniversary, the U.S. Army Reserve has initiated various kinds of assistance in many areas.

April has been "Community Month" for the reservists and a unit in Denver is offering free medical services in an overcrowded community. Another unit is building an artificial reef off the Atlantic coast to preserve a shoreline.

In Ann Arbor, Mich., the 381st Medical Detachment in coordination with the Chamber of Commerce is conducting a diabetes screening clinic. Its maintenance battalion will hold a "Happiness Fair" for all handicapped children in Washtenaw County featuring hot dogs, games and rides in Army jeeps and helicopters.

The 564th garrison will take 40 children from the Lutheran Home for the Deaf to a Detroit zoo and has refurbished a Catholic home for orphans in Detroit.

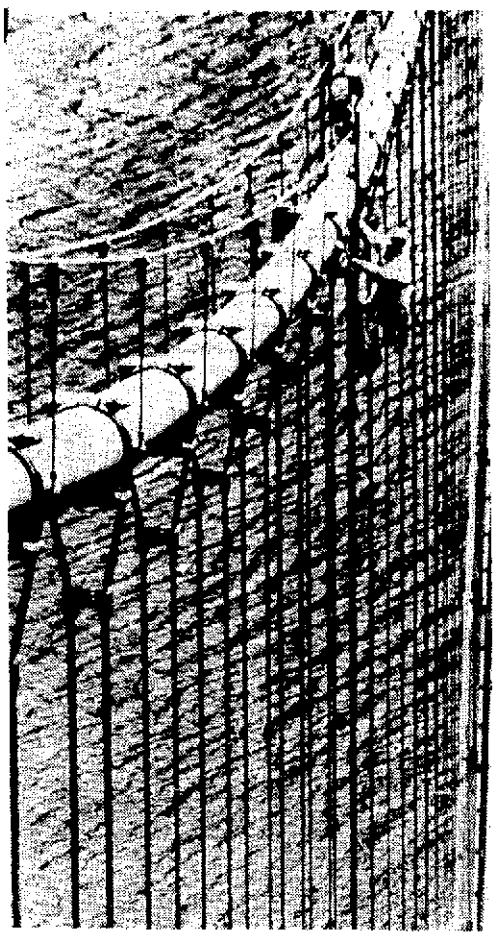

AT FT. LINCOLN, N.D., the 96th Army Reserve Command headquartered in Salt Lake City gave free chest x-rays to Indians to check for tuberculosis.

"Our people are part of the communities they are helping. When the military gets out and does a little extra for the community, the local people usually chip in and help the reservists," Col. Lee Johnson, Chief of staff, said.

He said the programs are many and varied and so far things have gone well. The projects are "restricted to truly helping a community . . . we have to make sure we are not just helping a single group but doing something that benefits everyone," he said.

The units have collected trash and cleaned up streams, painted youth camps and civic buildings, hauled recyclable waste materials, sponsored fishing trips for orphans and taught youths survival and first aid techniques.

Col. Richard Glove, commander of the 256 General Hospital Reserve, Cleveland, said "this kind of thing goes on all year but there is traditionally little notice."

Jailed lawyer freed by court

OAKLAND (UPI) — An attorney sentenced to jail for five days for alleged contempt was free Saturday after his law partner obtained a court order to have him released.

Attorney James Giller, 44, was sent to jail Friday by Superior Court Judge John Sparrow when the lawyer persisted in a line of argument which had been overruled by the judge in a drug case.

Giller's law partner, Herman Mintz, got Giller freed on an order from the District Court of Appeal and filed a writ of habeas corpus to keep him out of prison.

Arsonist torches school gymnasium in San Diego

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Fire set by an arsonist charred one wall and damaged the roof and ceiling of the Marston Junior High School boys' gymnasium early Saturday, firemen said.

Two fires were set in the Clairemont area school but one went out, Battalion Chief Hal Seelig said.

The major blaze caused extensive damage to a locker area on the outside wall of the gym, burned through the overhang covering the lockers and went through transom windows to char the wall extensively from the inside, Seelig said.

Smoke damage will require replacement of the acoustical ceiling in the gym, the chief added. He declined to estimate damage but said it would exceed $15,000.

New Vitamin D aids bone disease

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A newly discovered form of Vitamin D shows promise as a possible treatment for the rickets-like bone weakness which often accompanies severe kidney disease, researchers disclosed Saturday.

Evaluation of tests at the Wadsworth Veterans Administration Hospital and at the UCLA school of medicine showed that the Vitamin D derivative significantly aids the human body's ability to absorb calcium and maintain normal levels of calcium in the blood.

The new form of Vitamin D, which occurs naturally in the body, was isolated by biochemist Anthony W. Norman of the University of California at Riverside. It was tested on uremic patients by Drs. Jack Coburn of UCLA and Arnold S. Brickman of the VA hospital.

"Our preliminary results indicate that the new form of Vitamin D significantly stimulated calcium absorption in the intestine and elevated serum calcium in the blood," the researchers reported.

Although much more testing will be necessary, they said, they believe that "ultimately the Vitamin D will be of great use to individuals who suffer calcium metabolism disorders because of uremic conditions."

The new form of Vitamin D is known technically as 1.25 dihydroxy Vitamin D3. It is thought to be as much as 13 times as active as other known forms of the vitamin. It was isolated last year by Norman's research team. Other forms of Vitamin D have proven of little use in combatting calcium deficiency in kidney disease victims, the researchers said.

Norman said in the human body the new form of Vitamin D is naturally produced in the kidneys. The researchers theorized that advanced kidney disease curtailed its production in the body and thus caused the calcium deficiencies.

Minor traffic accident leads to marijuana arrest

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — A minor accident led to the arrest of a Rochester, N.Y., man on a charge of possession of about 250 pounds of what is believed to be Mexican-grown marijuana, according to Polk County sheriff's deputies.

Held under $10,000 bond was Thomas H. Loughlin, 29, of Rochester, N.Y. He was arrested after his car ran off a road Friday.

Al Kurtz, a spokesman for the sheriff's office, said the substance was discovered in the trunk of Loughlin's car.

"The trunk was just packed solid with five bales. You just can't believe it," Kurtz said.

Kurtz said the marijuana would have a street value of about $60,000 based on a selling price of $15 for each of the 4,000 ounces in the bales. He said based on items found in the car, officers believe Loughlin was traveling from Arizona to Rochester with the marijuana.

USED VEHICLE OK CARS DEALER WARRANTY

STATEMENT OF WARRANTY

Subject to the provisions and conditions stated below in the event of mechanical failure of the Vehicle the Selling Dealer agrees as follows: (1) For a period of 30 days beginning ——— 19. ——— or 2,000 miles after delivery (whichever occurs first), the Selling Dealer agrees to repair or replace the engine, transmission, rear axle, brake system, or electrical system — without charge — to the extent necessary to keep the Vehicle in serviceable condition under normal use.

PROVISIONS

(a) Mechanical failures resulting from collision, accident, abuse or lack of maintenance are expressly excluded from the above coverage.
(b) Repairs are to be made in the Selling Dealer's Service facilities.
(c) Such repairs do not qualify under any new vehicle warranty still applicable to the Vehicle.
(2.) Upon the expiration of the warranty period specified in (1) above and for a period ending 24 months from the date the warranty period specified.
(1.) above commenced, the Selling Dealer, or any other participating, franchised Chevrolet Dealer, will allow a discount of 15% off the normal retail charges for parts and labor repair necessary to keep the Vehicle in serviceable condition under normal use.

PROVISIONS

(1) Repairs are to be made in the Service facilities of the Selling Dealer or other participating, franchised Chevrolet Dealers at the Chevrolet Dealer's regular retail price.

(b) 85% of the parts and labor repair bills are to be paid by the Purchaser in cash on delivery of the repaired Vehicle.

(c) Expressly excluded from Warranty coverage are damage from collision accident or abuse, or normal maintenance services such as lubrication of changes, tune-up, etc.

GENERAL CONDITIONS

This Warranty is issued by the Selling Dealer only, and not by the manufacturer of the Vehicle. This Warranty is expressly in lieu of any other warranties, expressed or implied, including any implied warranty of merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose, and any other obligations of liabilities on the Selling Dealer's part, and the Selling Dealer neither assumes nor authorizes any other person to assume for it any other liability in connection with the sale of the vehicle. This Warranty must be available with the Vehicle at the time of application for any repairs or adjustments, and is not transferable or assignable.

Beach units open today

Harbour Pacific, a new community of 234 condominiums in Huntington Harbour, begins its grand opening today, according to Donald L. Byrnes, vice president of Huntington Harbour Sales Corporation.

Priced from $19,900, these beach-oriented studio and one-bedroom units were constructed by Christiana Community Builders, a wholly owned subsidiary of The Christiana Companies, Inc., and the builder of many of the homes in Huntington Harbour.

"In addition to its location in Huntington Harbour, just one block from the beach," said Byrnes, "we feel that Harbour Pacific offers the single person or married couple just about everything they can find in a luxury apartment complex — plus the important ownership advantages of equity and tax benefits."

HARBOUR Pacific's recreational facilities include therapy pools, sand volleyball courts, bicycle paths and landscaped parkways. Ownership in Harbour Pacific also includes a choice of social or full membership in Huntingoin Harbour's Beach and Tennis Club.

Club facilities include tennis and paddle tennis courts, swimming pool, private bathing beach and lagoon, sauna baths, and a clubhouse with dining room/party rooms and cocktail lounge.

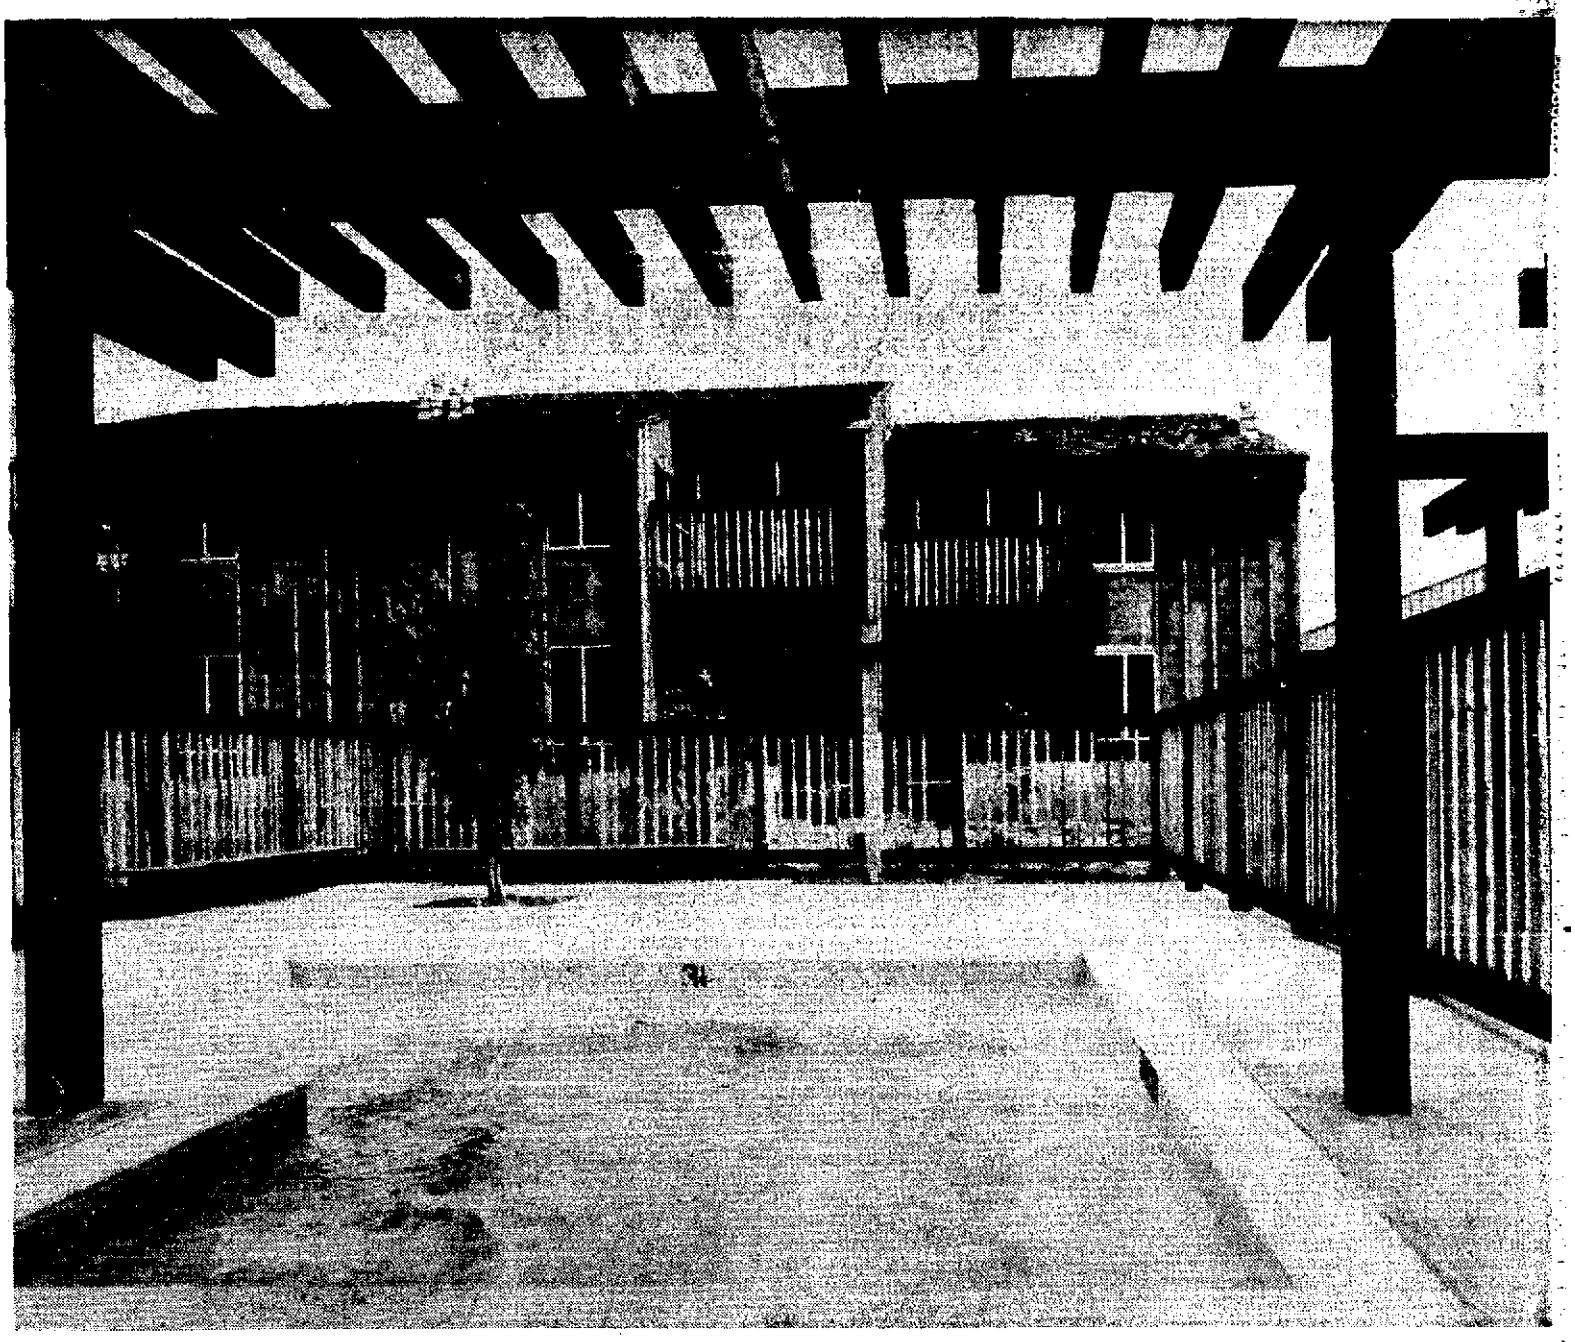

The studio and one bedroom plans in Harbour Pacific offer a variety of convenience and design features, all included in the purchase price.

The plans include built-in dishwashers, oven, range and disposals, wall-to-wall carpeting in the living room, dining area and hallway, draperies throughout, a fireplace in every studio plan, and large balconies, many with an ocean view.

A cross section of the country's professional people are reserving homesites in the dramatic view community of Presidential Heights, overlooking the San Clemente Golf Course and the ocean from Dana Point to the Western White House.

Charles P. Day, executive vice president of Tiffany Realty, Inc., sales agents for the developer, Douglass-Pacific Corporation of San Clemente, enumerated some of the occupations of the people who have purchased the $25,990 to $39,990 townhomes.

"We have three vice presidents of banks, a federal commissioner, several doctors and lawyers, three school teachers and four real estate brokers among our purchasers," Day said.

"We're very pleased that all of those have found Presidential Heights to be just what they were looking for in a home; but especially pleased that four real estate people, who would know the value and the area, agree with us that Presidential Heights offers one of the best home purchases on Orange County's south coast."

THE FIRST UNIT of 66 one and two-level, two and three-bedroom townhomes has been completely reserved and reservations in the second unit are being accepted. Constructed in units of six homes to be a garden court, each unit will be erected on stepped plateaus so that each will have an unobstructed view of the panorama below.

An Information Center is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 2313 S. El Camino Real in San Clemente. A scale model of the first phase as well as artist's conceptions and drawings of the overall community of 308 homes are available for inspection.

FNMA to expand its sales program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) announced it would expand its sales program to include FHA "project mortgages" including those on apartment houses.

The enlarged program will begin Monday and will be incorporated into FNMA's "open window" sales program which currently deals in government-backed home mortgages. FNMA opens and closes the program depending on market conditions.

The association said project mortgages would carry coupon rates from 4.5 to 7.5 per cent and that yields would vary according to the average maturity for each type of project and each interest rate category. The term project mortgages refers to other than home mortgages.

Fannie Mae's board of directors also declared a quarterly divided of 7 and ½ cents a share on the association's common stock. The rate is the same paid during the last quarter and will be payable on June 26 to stockholders of record on June 1.

THE BAYLOR AT COLLEGE PARK . . . has distinctive exterior styling

Select lot of choice at College Park-Cypress

Now is an excellent time to buy an S&S home at College Park in Cypress, move in with time to enjoy the summer months ahead, and be settled in time for school in the fall, says Mark Bader, S&S general sales manager.

Construction is at the stage which allows buyers to select the lot of their choice and enjoy the personalized service which gives them the opportunity to choose colors and many interior design features.

"During this phase of construction visitors can check the quality construction of our homes, which are built like they should be with no short cuts or inferior materials." Bader points out.

College Park homes have three to seven bedrooms and sell for as low as $36,950. Prices include genuine lath and plaster throughout, exceptional quality carpeting in all bedrooms, dressing rooms, closets, hallway, dining and living rooms.

Custom exteriors have brick and natural stonework and cedar shingle roofs. Block wall fencing and concrete driveways are also included.

There are plans with optional bonus rooms, Wet bars, private parents' retreats and inside laundry areas are provided in some of the homes.

All electric kitchens have built-in ranges, self-cleaning ovens, automatic dishwashers, garbage disposers, luminous ceilings, breakfast nooks and eating areas.

Trash compactors, spacious pantries, hand finished natural wood cabinets and ceramic tile countertops make the homemaker's chores easier.

There are six furnished and decorated model homes and a sales center open daily on Valley View Street, between the Garden Grove Freeway and Katella Avenue.

They may be visited by taking the San Diego-Garden Grove Freeway to Valley View and driving north. The homes are south of the Santa Ana Freeway on Valley View.

Compton industrial development begins

Construction has been completed on the first building in a 15-acre Compton industrial development, located on the southwest corner of Artesia Boulevard and Susana Road in the Dominguez-Carson area.

Edwin Bechler, owner and developer of the property, said the building contains 57,600 square feet and is available for single-tenant use or multiple occupancy.

It is the first facility in the industrial development which will eventually contain seven other structures, with a total of 300,000 square feet of industrial space.

General contractor for the project is Millie Seversen, Long Beach.

Coldwell, Banker & Co. is exclusive leasing agent for the project, with George H. Fox Jr. and Gary Smith, both of the firm's South Bay office, handling the leasing program.

Ray Watt, Borstein team up

W & B Builders, Inc., a newly formed Los Angeles-based building company headed by Ray A. Watt and Alan S. Borstein, has acquired Boise Cascade Company's Southern California residential subdivisions which have a capacity of more than 1100 dwelling units.

The sale, which included existing unsold homes, improved lots and acreage, involved: two different communities at Lake Lindero in the West San Fernando Valley where 90 per cent of the planned 500 homes are unbuilt; Lookout Point in Saugus where 190 low-priced homes are under construction, and Concept 80 in Diamond Bar which is nearly sold out.

Borstein said initially the company will concentrate on low to moderate-priced single family homes and condominiums, noting: "We have already acquired land in the Orange County and South Bay areas for that purpose.

"Furthermore, an active and aggressive land acquisition program is currently underway for properties that will be suitable for that type of construction."

WATT WILL SERVE as chairman of the board and Borstein as president of W & B Builders.

Watt, who formerly headed a building company bearing his name, entered into a real estate development joint venture with Boise Cascade in 1966 after more than 20 years as an independent builder of 20,000 homes.

He sold out his remaining interests to the Idaho-based company in 1967.

Since then, he has served as chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of San Francisco and chairman of the executive committee of National Corporation for Housing Partnerships and the American Mobilehome Corp.

BORSTEIN, IN 1969, became president of Boise Cascade Building Company which had developed more than 40 residential communities in 11 states across the nation.

In addition, he had been active in the development of industrial and mobile home parks for the parent company.

He joined Boise Cascade in 1967 when it first entered into the joint venture with Watt and directed the varied and diverse real estate operations until this time.

"I've always been deeply involved with the Southern California housing market and have been on the periphery since selling to Boise. This move, however, has afforded me the opportunity to get back into the operational end of the business I really enjoy," Watt said.

Corporate headquarters for W & B Builders is at 9841 Airport Blvd., Suite 716.

Much of L.A. County housing demand shifts eastward

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Real Estate Editor

Even when it has a dull year, Los Angeles County ranks among the nation's largest housing markets.

It was number one in 1970, I dropped to fourth in 1971.

In the second half of 1971, housing activity in the county was the strongest since the boom years of 1962-64.

But for 1971 as a whole, this was one of only two major markets in the nation which showed a decline in total permits from a year ago. (The other was Seattle.)

Much of the Los Angeles County demand funneled into Orange County which was one of the nation's hottest markets in 1971, as in 1970.

These are some of the findings of Advance Mortgage Corporation's current "U.S. Housing Markets," a semi-annual survey. It compares housing activity in Los Angeles and Orange County with 18 other markets nationwide.

Home permits in Los Angeles County increased 36 per cent in 1971, to a figure of 13,870. But apartment permits declined 14 per cent to 31,380. Total permits in 1971 were 45,250, compared with 46,550 in 1970, a 3 per cent decline.

In contrast, home permits in Orange County more than doubled — from 8,530 in 1970 to 18,520 in 1971.

"Starts are now about even with local demand," reports Advance area manager James Unger.

"First-home buyers are the strongest sector for the new home market," says Unger. "But because of the high cost of land in Los Angeles County, with homes from the mid-$20s to the high $30s, Townhouses in those price ranges are doing extremely well.

"Even high-priced home builders are turning to PUDs and cluster building to make better use of the land.

"Condominiums ranging from low-priced quadrominiums to large projects are going very strong. Some existing apartments are being converted to condos. But in some areas, large condominiums are still so new they're meeting zoning resistance."

In the apartment market, the survey notes, there is talk of overbuilding, some landlords are offering concessions of a month's free rent and some lenders are becoming cautious. But the overall picture doesn't justify such a gloomy note. Rental vacancies for the entire County are around 7 per cent. (They're up to 9 per cent in Orange County and due to go higher.)

"Where there's overbuilding," says Unger, "it's on a spot basis. There are eight apartments of 100 units or more under construction or recently completed on a single street. Apartment builders are bunching up because good locations are so hard to find.

"Three of the hottest markets, Atlanta, Houston and Denver, will be at the 15 per cent rental vacancy mark or over by midyear. But in most other markets, the danger of overbuilding appears overstated.

"In some, like Los Angeles and San Diego, activity has tapered off to a level the market seems capable of absorbing. In others, vacancies are heavy, it is true, but they're concentrated in older neighborhoods that don't compete in the apartment market. Apartment demand remains strong in these markets because the vacancies are in the central cities and the apartment construction is in the far-out suburbs," the survey tells.

"The greatest danger of overbuilding is in condominiums — simply because they're now so hot everywhere and builders are rushing in so enthusiastically."

The honeymoon with labor supply that builders enjoyed in 1971 will end in 1972, is the prediction. There'll be more competition for labor from an expanding non-residential construction market and most of the units started in 1971 will be nearing completion, the stage at which more scarce craftsmen are required.

Carmel Valley retreat estates announced

Plans have been announced to create secluded retreat estates on a 626 acre parcel of scenic wilderness which is part of 2,528 acre Featherbow Ranch in Monterey County's Carmel Valley.

It will be the first such development in the popular resort area.

According to Hal Lederman, vice president-marketing of Feather Bow Corp. of Los Angeles and Carmel Valley, the hilly, tree-covered land will be turned into 15 estates of approximately 40 acres each.

Lederman said it is anticipated that some buyers will establish year-round residence and others build vacation homes on property which is near the well known retreat, Tassajara.

THE DEVELOPER added that every care will be taken to preserve the natural beauty of the land and to ensure that residents live in close harmony with nature.

Deed restrictions will contain strict architectural and environmental standards, he said, and will assure minimal disturbance of surrounding wildlife.

Feather Bow Ranch, 14 miles southeast of Carmel Valley Center and 27 miles from Carmel-by-the-sea, borders Los Padres National Forest, where a wide variety of animals and game birds abound.

LEDERMAN noted that a number of the wild species make their home on Feather Bow Ranch property.

"We think the land is perhaps the most ideal in California for its proposed use," the developer said. "In more than a century as a ranch it has remained largely untouched wilderness.

"Nature was extremely kind. Foliage is abundant, with the lovely white oak tree dominant. The land rolls charmingly, ranging in elevation from 1,200 to 3,200 feet. Skies are clear and protected from coastal fog, chill and dampness.

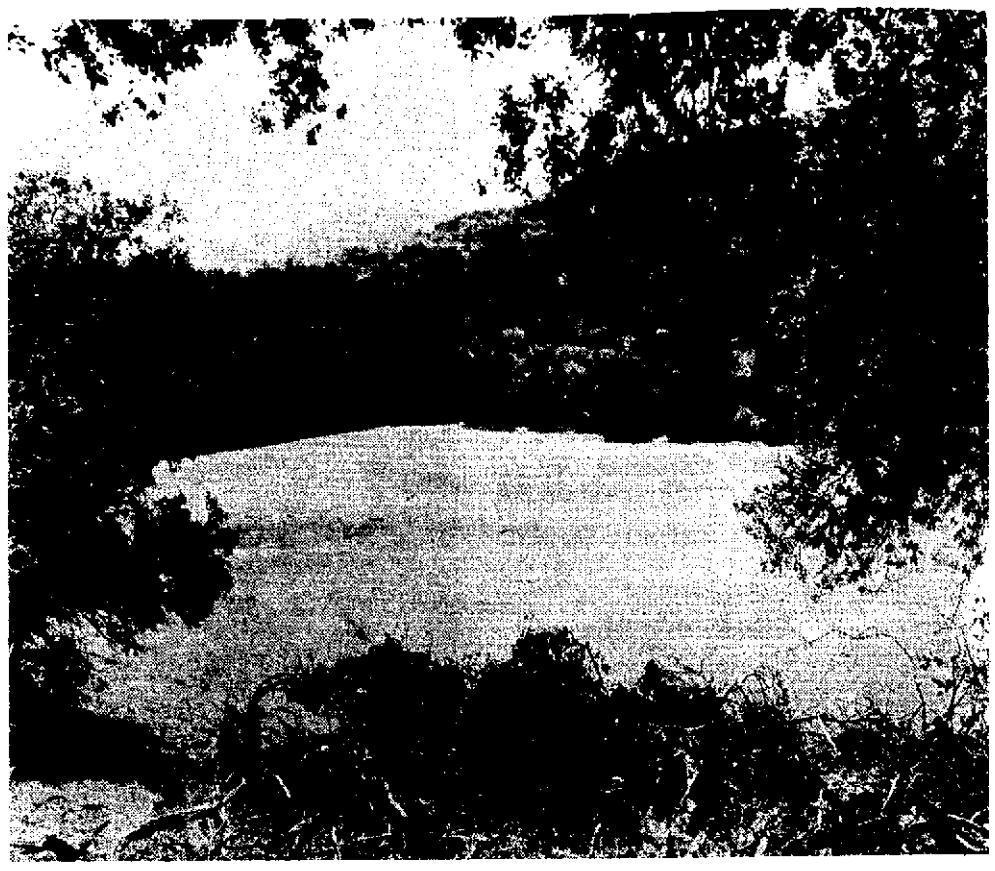

"Nothing in the state offers the same psychologically enriching seclusion without being caught in isolation."

LEDERMAN pointed out that nearby Carmel Valley Center contains a modern shopping plaza, professional facilities, restaurants, schools and churches. And he emphasized that a world renown resort and cultural center is only 27 miles distant.

"No one has ever failed to be captivated by Carmel-by-the-Sea," he said, "with its dozens of art galleries, varied literary, theatrical and musical pursuits, gourmet restaurants and quaint shops of high quality."

Development plans for the retreat estates call for construction of private roads to be communally owned. Equestrian and hiking trails already exist on the property.

Estate sites will sell for $975 to $1,975 an acre.

Maier-Williams building in La Mirada's best area

La Mirada on the Orange County border in Los Angeles County is one of the finest "bedroom" communities in the metropolitan area. It also enjoys one of the highest per capita incomes in the area.

So it is that Don Maier, of Maier-Williams Construction Co. and former marketing director for the huge Transamerica Corporation, decided to build three custom homes in La Mirada's best neighborhood.

The three, priced from $52,950 to $55,950, are located at the corner of Imperial Highway and Oxford Drive, two blocks west of Santa Gretrudes in the exclusive northern area of La Mirada.

The four-bedroom, two-and-a-half bath homes, with 2,300 square feet, are built on 93x115 foot estate-sized lots, leaving a rear yard large enough for an extensive family entertainment area: pool, cabana, patio and so on.

The custom homes are open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

From the Long Beach — eastern Los Angeles area, take the Artesia (91) Freeway to the Valley View exit. Turn left (north) on Valley View to Imperial Highway. Turn right (east) on Imperial 1.7 miles to the custom homes.

REFERRING TO SAN LEANDRO

Here's distinguished community: it cut property tax

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (UPI) — This city of 68,000 on the shores of San Francisco Bay is celebrating its 100th birthday in a manner typical of any proud community, recalling early pioneers and their exploits.

But the greatest chapter in San Leandro history dates back only 24 years and is probably unique in the United States. The property tax rate here has been reduced continually since 1947 and, unlike most cities that go begging for federal funds, San Leandro has been known to turn them down.

Local historians are recalling the days when San Leandro was famed for its cherries and vast oyster beds, often pirated by young Jack London who later joined the law and cracked down on such skullduggery.

The land that once was covered with fruit trees and vegetables is long gone, taken over by buildings with familiar names like Singer, International Harvester, and General Electric.

THIS VAST influx of industry is responsible for keeping the tax rate going down, down, down.

"We had 2,200 acres of cheap land in 1947 and pushed a successful bond issue for a sewage plant in that area to get industry to come in," said Frank M. King, executive vice president of the San Leandro Chamber of Commerce.

"Now we have everything going for us to continue to attract industry plus the low tax rate," he said.

King said more than 800 industrial firms have been brought here since 1947 and they have invested $500 million, creating at least 26,000 new jobs.

The tax rate has been reduced more than 50 per cent since 1947, from $1.98 to 86 cents.

King said 50 per cent of the city's use and sales tax comes from this industrial area.

"This goes to pay for streets, libraries, marinas and things like that," he said. Industry also pays about 45 per cent of the property tax.

SAN LEANDRO has had only one city bond issue since 1947 which was necessary to construct a library.

And none of this luring of business has involved direct financial aid, resorted to by some cities.

The city government itself is one reason some firms moved here.

"We moved our plant to San Leandro in 1963 because we needed some room for expansion and didn't have it where we were before," said a spokesman for International Harvester, which employs more than 1,000 persons at the West Coast's largest heavy-duty truck plant.

"But we've found other benefits," he said. "Besides lower tax rates than any other city that could provide utilities, San Leandro has a city government that really works with industry."

THE CITY fathers have also helped to keep the tax rate down by cutting corners. When the public safety building was completed in the late 1960s the dispatching teams for police and fire were combined.

The city made a deal with a rubbish disposal firm about the same time, allowing the company to dump without charge on bayside tideland. The result was a public golf course.

This rugged civic spirit accounted for the turning down in 1960 of $2.5 million in federal aid for a 14 block downtown redevelopment area.

"We just wanted to do it ourselves," said King.

Some observers say the good times will end for San Leandro when the land for industry runs out and the city encounters the difficulties her counterparts face.

KING ADMITS that last year "was different as far as the taxes went. We just barely held the line."

And he says the remaining land is not suitable for large industry.

"But there's still 25 per cent of it left and large industry is not what we want. We want white collar industry, clean middle-sized and beneficial to the economy."

There are only 83 blacks living in San Leandro and its critics call it a "walled city."

The National Committee against Discrimination in Housing (NCDH) once threatened suit against the city.

City officials have been concerned over such accusations.

In 1968 the City Council said in a policy statement that "That every man, within his abilities and means, is entitled to freedom of choice as to where he shall live and work."

Last year Mayor Jack D. Maltester appointed an advisory committee to "hear any complaints concerning the refusal to sell or rent to a minority person who meets all the other qualifications."

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Never-never land is promoter's promise

By DON CAMPBELL

Somewhere over the rainbow . . . somewhere in Never-Never Land.

Everybody knows that this is where both wealth and eternal happiness are to be found.

We all keep looking for it, and no one knows this better than the real estate promoter-developer, who trades on this human craving in the way that coyotes track down rabbits.

MR. CAMPBELL:

We recently purchased land from a company for investment purposes. I would appreciate your opinion regarding this. We bought a one-fourth acre tract of pre-developed land with good growth potential, in a southwestern state.

At this point the land is desert. However, nearby communities are in the developing stage and some acreage is already occupied.

We paid $1,200 for the one-fourth acre. Our taxes should run $2.25 a year and as long as we do not plan to live on the property, we will have no special assessments.

The company seems to be a reputable one. Does this sound reasonable?

There is one point I am not too sure on. All land owners are required to put (at this time) $10 a year into a non-profit corporation whose purpose is to increase the desirability of living in this area.

Now I understand that this type of improvement can benefit us as property owners.

However, there was no mention of how long we would have to pay into it. We assumed it would be for the length of time we owned the property before selling.

Upon receiving and reading the property report we found out that this is payable for 37 years.

Now, at the present rate, that is not a great deal. But I am wondering if this seems reasonable and fair — considering we might sell the land in 10 years or so. — Mrs. R.K.B. (Des Moines, Ia.)

ANSWER: This sounds like a pretty good deal — for the developer, not the buyers.

You might almost think that, since the developer probably paid all of $100 an acre for this raw desert land, and is now selling it for $4,800 an acre, he might be clearing enough from the deal to pay his own promotional expenses.

I'll grant you that $10 a year doesn't sound like very much (although there is the implication in your leter that the, "contribution" might not remain at this figure,) but it still amounts to $10,000 a year if the developer sells 1,000 such lots. And over the 37-year life of the agreement, this comes to a tidy $370,000.

There's no way that the developer can keep sticking you with this $10-a-year payment once you have sold the lot. The new owner would simply pick up the obligation.

But the whole thing is a pretty dumb idea. You've paid a whopping price for a tiny piece of raw desert that you haven't even seen (is there any water available, incidentally?) and that will appreciate in value only if, and when, a whole series of happy things occur to this part of the country.

Please don't call it an "investment." You've got $1,200 (and $10 a year) riding on a crap game.

MR. CAMPBELL:

My home is held jointly, in my name and those of my son and daughter with right of survivorship. I have carried the house and paid off the mortage entirely on my own, with the exception of two years' taxes paid by my daughter.

I had hoped that this arrangement would eliminate taxes and trouble (I had plenty settling my parents' affairs) but now wonder if it is a good idea.

Just what procedures and expenses will be in order at my death? Will the value each receives be income, or will their respective shares be classified as income at the time their names were put on the deed?

Or what formalities will be needed to amend the deed? —Mrs. H. S. (Pearl River, N.Y.)

ANSWER: I wouldn't worry my head about it too much. The route you have taken is a perfectly sound one and is probably as uncomplicated as any you might have chosen.

When you die, the title to the property will pass, automatically, to your daughter and son jointly and they may then dispose of it any way they choose. Conceivably — but highly unlikely — they might be liable for a small estate tax.

Naturally, state laws will vary to some degree, so it might not be a bad idea to check the details out with a lawyer, but I see no great problem in your case. One word of warning: don't let the existence of the joint tenancy preclude all three of you from having your own individual wills. This is most important.

MR. CAMPBELL:

Last year I had a new home built by a local contractor. I had a basement built to be used for recreation. However, since we moved into the house last May we have been unable to use the basement because of the constant flooding.

The water is not coming through the walls. Is is excess water running into the sump pit from the perimeter tile that was put around the footings. Ever since we have been living here, there has been water running from this tile, even though there has been no rain for several weeks.

I have tried to talk to the builder about this problem and he insists the entire reason is that I do not as yet have my yard finish-graded and planted. It has been rough graded, and the closet, downspout to the basement wall is at least 25 feet away.

The water pressure is so great the floor has cracked in several places and water comes up through these cracks. Every time it rains I get at least 8 inches of water in the basement. The sump pump has run so much it has now quit and the basement is full of water again.

I never received any warranty with the house, but isn't there such a thing as an implied warranty? The builder refuses to do any thing about it. Do I have an out? Can he be made to correct this situation or is it my problem? — Mrs. T. N. F. (Indianapolis, Ind.)

ANSWER: Good grief! Get yourself a good lawyer at the first possible opportunity. There is an implied warranty of about a year on a new home and your time is rapidly running out.

Why people put up with this sort of shoddy work for so long, without dragging the architect into court, completely escapes me.

The expense? What is that compared to the hardship of living with this mess, and the financial beating that you are going to take when you try to sell this house that has 8 inches of water constantly standing in its basement?

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

Flat-proof tires may sound like the impossible dream, but experts predict that they'll be on the family car by 1984, eliminating the need for a spare.

They're already a reality in many tire torture jobs because of a cellular foam inflation material, called Permafoam, perfected by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company.

Using this substitute for air, thousands of tires are operating under conditions so severe that daily — and sometimes hourly — flats used to be commonplace, says L. H. Hutchinson, Goodyear industrial tire specialist.

No, Goodyear's new inflation material is not for the family car, but the family car doesn't run the risk of several flat tires every day. Permafoam, however, could be the forerunner of a material that by the mid-1980s, will enable automobile tires to shrug off punctures.

"Theoretically Permafoam can be used in any type of tire," Hutchinson says, "but at this stage we don't recommend it for use on vehicles operating at speeds that produce considerable heat buildup with tires — vehicles that operate at sustained speeds over 35 miles per hour."

But for short periods of time, a tire with Permafoam inflation can be run at speeds up to 50 mph.

GOODYEAR BEGAN MARKETING the unique inflation material two years ago and has sold more than 10,000 foam-inflated tires.

"Basically we let potential customers sell themselves," Hutchinson explains. "Permafoam is not an economy item — it's a custom service. But when a customer weighs the cost of Permafoam against the savings in downtime and equipment, it becomes a real bargain."

The operator of a parking lot sweeping company reports that Permafoam tires on a one-ton sweeper eliminated about $300 a month in repair costs, plus about 40 hours a month downtime.

A garage superintendent for a chemical company says Permafoam-inflated tires on a heavy-duty truck used in hauling refuse to a land-fill area saved an estimated $7,500 a year in tire repair costs.

And at an aluminum plant, flats have been eliminated on a lift truck that had been averaging about three punctures a day.

In the first 11 months the Permafoam tires were used, the company says more than 1,000 flats had been averted at a savings of over $10,000. In addition, conventional tires would have been replaced three times during that period because of puncture damage to the tire casing.

The cost of Permafoam inflation varies with the job. It depends on the type and size of tire and the inflation pressure desired. The cost of inflating a $100 tire for a refuse truck might be $250, Hutchinson says.

Moreno Valley in boom

Building permits recorded for residential, commercial and industrial construction in Riverside County's Moreno Valley for the month of March totalled $811,372.

During that period 161 building permits were recorded by the Riverside County Building and Safety Department.

The March construction figure does not include the $27,394,995 Perris Dam and Lake, a California Department of Water Resources construction project scheduled to be completed by May 1973.

Moreno Valley is located five miles southeast of the City of Riverside.

Constant shortage of housing in Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Britain is short of homes. Two years ago the average price of new housing was $16,900. Today it is $26,000. Six-room houses built in London 90 years ago sell briskly at $39,000, against $7,800 in 1960.

While everyone is astounded at the rising prices no one seems able to arrest the surge. During the first three months of this year the average cost of a house shot up more than 7 per cent, the Nationwide Building Society reports. This home-finance company says: "There is a constant shortage of houses, building land is being hoarded, credit is easier and there is intense speculation in property. "There also is hysteria in this market. Tenants are afraid of having their homes sold over their heads so they join the queues to buy."

LANDOWNERS are hanging on to their acres in hopes of yet more money from builders. Authorities are under pressure to release land by cutting into protective belts of greenery around cities.

Building societies, after years of attracting saving by offering high interest rates, have plenty of money to lend under eased credit restrictions. The societies build nothing — they lend money with the home as collateral.

Property companies are buying blocks of apartments and pushing up rents or telling to buy. One London man, who agreed under pressure to buy, found the price of his apartment whizzing up from $33,150 to $41,600 in less than two months.

TENANTS whose apartment rents are controlled by law are being offered sums to quit so the owners can sell the property or charge higher rents. Controls don't apply to new tenants.

Steel to rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Steel production rose 0.9 per cent last week to 2,722,000 net tons from 2,699,000 tons the previous week, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported.

Your second home takes good planning

NEW YORK (UPI) — About one in every 10 housing starts today is for a second home. About 3 per cent of all American families own a year-round second home.

"People are getting hemmed in," says Paul McGreevy, of Ausable Acres, Inc., in New York's Adirondack Mountains. "After World War II, they began their exodus from the cities to the suburbs to escape all the well-known ills of city living. But now the suburbs are becoming overcrowded and have many of the same ills.

"Add to this increased leisure time, the desire to 'return to nature,' the mounting expense of vacation travel and resort hotel living and the status appeal of a year-round vacation home, and you've got a combination that's hard to resist."

If you're thinking of joining the trek, however, be cautious: "Be sure you do your homework first." As more middle income Americans become prime prospects for the burgeoning second home market, many are bound to be disappointed, McGreevy said. "They don't know what they want from a vacation home, or they buy on impulse without investigating the homesite and its facilities, the financing arrangements and other key factors."

FOR THOSE considering a vacation home investment, he offers these pointers:

Environment — Be sure a second homesite has the kind of atmosphere you want as a counterpoint to your daily life. Some areas already are crowded with vacation bungalows, cabins, motels — and with vacationers and tourists. Others may be located in virtual wilderness, far from even the barest "civilization." It is likely most families will want something in between.

Location — Consider "enjoyment potential." What does your family like to do? Are facilities for these things going to be available? A strategically chosen homesite can be a base from which the whole family will be able to enjoy nearby public recreational facilities on a daily excursion basis — without the expense and bother of lodging and dining in a crowded public resort atmosphere. But a vacation homesite should be far enough away from resort areas to have privacy, peace and tranquility of its own.

TIME IN Use — Location also affects use potential. A second home in a four-season area such as the Adirondacks, McGreevy says, can bring additional benefits in terms of time in use. Such a home offers effective value virtually the year round. A second home in Florida, for example, is useful generally only part of the year. A hunting lodge in the wilds, too, in most cases is useful only on a seasonal basis. Likewise a ski lodge or a seashore bungalow. In determining where to buy, determine what you want from a second home in terms of year-round or seasonal use.

Financing — McGreevy stresses the importance of investigating different kinds of financial arrangements which are possible. There are alternatives and some have advantages over others depending upon the buyer's needs and circumstances. Where ownership is immediate on down payment, for example, the owner starts building equity in the property at once, even though the full purchase price may not yet be paid.

Holding talks

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Standard Oil Co. of California said major international oil companies plan to hold talks starting May 7 with Sheikh Yamani, the Saudi Arabian minister of mineral resources, to discuss implementation of the Arab government's desire to obtain a 20 per cent equity participation the companies' operations in the Arabian Gulf.

BUILDER WILLIAM KRUEGER'S HOMES . . . popular in Anaheim

Showcase homes sell quickly in East Anaheim

Showcase homes in east Anaheim are "showcases" of what today's family wants in new homes.

Open for only five weeks, 75 per cent of the four-bedroom, three-bath, one and two-story homes have already been spoken for, reports Dick Kurth of Kurth & Associates, exclusive sales agent for the builder, William J. Krueger.

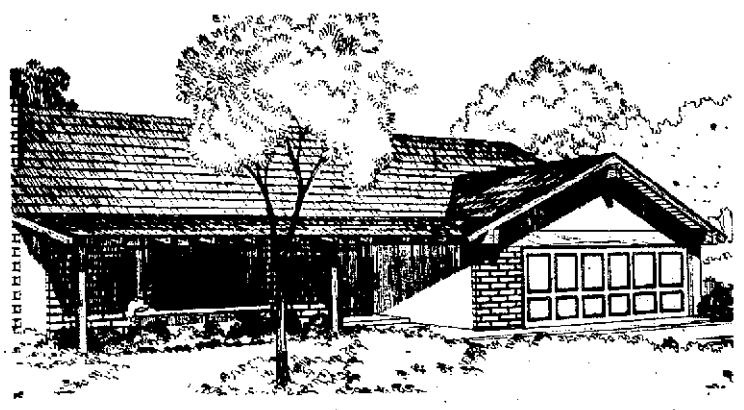

"Of course, Showcase homes offer the best in the three major categories of why families purchase homes: features, location and financing," Kurth pointed out.

"We have instant living with wall-to-wall carpeting, brick fireplaces, all electric kitchens with all the built-ins, large family rooms, dining areas, ample storage and cabinet space, three bathrooms in every home and to save the breadwinner extra work and money -- front yeard landscaping and sprinklers and rear yard block wall fencing are all included in the full sales price."

THE RIO VISTA area of Anaheim is one of the city's best residential neighborhoods with schools from grade through college, many parks (with one park scheduled to be developed adjacent to Showcase), shopping centers, churches and wide streets in the newly developed area.

Showcase homes are priced from only $31,950. Down payments are as low as $1,950.00. "But, best of all, we can tailormake a financial deal that will fit virtually anyone's pocketbook," Kurth stated.

Showcase homes' decorated and furnished models are open everyday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the corner of Rio Vista Street and Dutch Avenue, about one-quarter of a mile north of Lincoln Boulevard in east Anaheim.

CASA DEL AMO HOMES . . . have air conditioning, carpeting

Two model homes remain at Casa Del Amo-Cerritos

The Balboa is a two-story home with four bedrooms, two baths, kitchen, living and family rooms, and a two-car garage.

The Cortez is a single-story with four bedrooms, two baths, kitchen, living and family rooms and a two-car garage.

The Cabrillo has three bedrooms, two baths, kitchen, formal dining room, living and family rooms and a two-car garage.

THE MODELS are furnished and equipped with air conditioning, patios and landscaping, shag carpeting, draperies, panelling and wallpaper.

All three of the homes feature carpeting throughout, luminous kitchen ceiling, deluxe range with double oven, dishwasher and disposal, dramatic fireplace, completely fenced rear yard and concrete driveway.

Casa Del Amo is well known as the first major home development in the country to install electronic air cleaners on a large scale. They were built into each of the final 100 homes of the project, providing continuously clean and fresh air for the residents.

HOMEOWNERS can reach downtown Los Angeles in about 30 minutes and the beaches even more quickly. Major attractions such as Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, Anaheim Stadium and the Anaheim Convention Center are only a short drive away.

The Casa Del Amo models are located at 20002 Teresa Way, at the corner of Teresa and Bloomfield, one block north of Del Amo Boulevard in Cerritos.

La Linda home sales pass $7 million mark

La linda Homes in Fountain Valley have passed the 200 mark in sales with the sales volume now in excess of $7 million.

Mac Blankenship, Walker & Lee sales director for the homesite, noted that recent sales have reduced the number of available homes to 23 out of 228 built.

All five distinctive La Linda plans are available in the remaining homes, which include four of the five models.

The homes feature three to six bedrooms, up to three baths and three car garages. Prices range from $34,50 to $40,500 on fifth unit homes, which represent the bulk of the remaining selection.

THE LARGEST home is the popular Santa Barbara, which is a tri-level home with optional plans for up to six bedrooms. The basic plan has a master bedroom suite, two additional bedrooms and a large bonus room which can be divided into smaller rooms as needed.

The master bedroom suite has a dressing bath with walk-in closet, a sunken tub and large separate shower stall. The home also has two additional baths, an imaginatively designed five-sided kitchen, a family room with adjoining porch, a fireplace in the living room and a three car garage.

TWO-STORY homes in the project are the Coronado and the Catalina.

Schools in the area are excellent and range all the way up to the University of California at Irvine, which is less than a 30-minute drive from the homes. Other nearby schools include California State Colleges at Fullerton and Long Beach, Chapman College in Orange, and five junior colleges.

The La Linda homesite is located on Euclid Street just north of Warner Avenue in Fountain Valley, not far from the Garden Grove and San Diego Freeways.

Women, elderly get break

NEW YORK (UPI) — Traditional barriers which made it difficult, if not impossible, for a woman alone or the over-40 couple to obtain a home mortgage are giving way.

John P. Farry, president of the United States Savings and Loan League, says: "Financing for home-buyers nearing or at retirement age has become commonplace. And, while it still is not as easy for a woman to get a mortgage as it is for a man, the pendulum is swinging in that direction."

Savings associations are the nation's biggest mortgage lenders and the U.S. League, with nearly 5,000 member institutions, is the major trade association.

"It wasn't too long ago," Farry said, "that the rule of 65' prevailed. If you were 40 or over, your age, plus the term of the mortgage you were seeking, could not exceed the total of 65, the age at which people were expected to retire. But today many institutions are giving long-term mortgages to borrowers who already are 65 or older."

AT THE same time, he said, "the working woman or the divorcee or widow with her own financial resources has a far better chance of getting a mortgage today than she had even two or three years ago."

Changing economic factors, and changing attitudes are behind the liberalized lending trends.

Farry, who also is president of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Albert Lea, Minn., said that while there are differences in lending patterns from one area to another and even among different institutions within the same area, over-all change is evident when it comes to the would-be borrower who falls outside the main category of under-40 couples.

The woman alone who would purchase a home, he said, has going for her today the changing attitude toward women in the work force.

"AS MORE and more women work and move into positions of greater responsibility, it's becoming obvious their sex is no barrier to handling the obligations of a mortgage," Farry said.

"Contributing, too, are new birth control methods and changing attitudes toward family size, which mean unmarried young women are more likely to continue working if they marry later on. Women's liberation and consumer movements also are exerting influence on lenders.

"But probably the most important reason, is development of the condominium, and along with it the planned unit development. This is the logical type of housing for a woman because it provides the benefits of home ownership without the hard work involved in maintaining a single-family dwelling."

THE QUESTION now, Farry said, no longer revolves around a woman's ability to maintain a property. It becomes purely one of economics: Can she afford the home? Is her income sufficient and steady enough to make the payments?

The same criterion governs lending in the over-40 category. "More and more," Farry said, "the lender's only concern is whether the older borrower has an adequate ratio of retirement income to the debt he wants to carry — the same yardstick applied to borrowers in any other age bracket."

The older buyer may be expected to put up more than the minimum down payment on a home, and he may not be able to get the maximum 30-year term but if he can afford the home he wants to buy, the older borrower will be able to get a loan.

BEHIND this change, Farry said, are a number of factors:

—The growth of pension plans. Coupled with Social Security, they have led to greater stability in the incomes of many retirees.

—The fast turnover in home ownership. With people moving more often, the average life of a loan is only seven years or so.

—The development of "retirement villages," and the good lending experiences at many of these.

—Condominiums and planned unit developments, which give older buyers a maintenance-free alternative to apartment living.

—The growing use of private mortgage insurance, which reduces the lender's risk.

—The entry into the secondary market for conventional loans by the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation. This gives associations a market in which they can sell their mortgages if they wish.

LENDERS also have found, Farry said, that even if the head of the household dies, the widow often has the resources to keep up the mortgage. And even if both partners die, often an heir picks up the equity in the property.

"If a man makes a 25 per cent down payment, has plenty of life insurance and maintains a substantial savings account, the lender is unlikely to tell him his son must co-sign the note. In most cases, the father is in a lot better financial shape than the son anyhow."

Child development center at Tara Hill

A fresh and creative approach to early education is the concept behind the Tara Child Development Centers, now open for enrollment at two of Larwin's Tara Hill family apartment communities in Orange County.

Tara Child Development Centers provide an extensive curriculum for children two through six years of age, encompassing nursery school, kindergarten, and full day care programs.

Established by the Multiple Family Housing Division of The Larwin Group, Inc., the centers are located at the Tara Hill apartment communities in Anaheim and Cypress.

LARWIN developed and is property manager at each of the two communities.

"We're extremely pleased that we can offer our own day care program to Tara residents," stated Richard A. Berger, vice president of consumer marketing for the division.

"We feel that our Tara Child Development program will provide an important experience for its students through more individualized care and attention to the children's needs.

McCarthy first quarter sales, earnings in big jump

Sharply higher first quarter sales and earnings were reported by The McCarthy Company, California-based developer of single-family and multi-family housing.

"The momentum generated by The McCarthy Company in 1971 continued through the first quarter of 1972," W. N. Kennicott, president, announced at the annual shareholders meeting.

Net sales for the quarter rose to $4,521,000, almost a fivefold increase from sales of $953,000 in the first quarter of 1971.

Net income increased at an even more rapid rate, rising to $118,000, or eight cents per share fully diluted, from $17,000, or one cent per share, in the first quarter of 1971.

"ALTHOUGH this was a gratifying improvement, it is by no means indicative of our expectations for all of 1972," Kennicott said.

The McCarthy president pointed out that the first quarter increases were achieved with only two ongoing housing projects. During the balance of 1972, however, a number of other projects will get under way, including five already started or scheduled to start during the second quarter.

Kennicott further noted that the company has substantially broadened its product line in recent months and has expanded into two more major housing markets, Virginia-Maryland and the San Francisco bay area.

In still another significant first quarter development, Kennicott said, Constitution Mortgage Co. and Sentinel Escrow Co., two newly-established subsidiaries, began operations.

Covina project financed

A $2,050,000 mortgage loan has been approved for the Lagos De Covina Apartments, under construction at 18527 Arrow Highway, one-half mile north of the downtown area of Covina.

The financing was arranged by the Wallace Moir Company, Beverly Hills mortgage loan correspondent, with a pension trust fund client.

Borrowers are Lagos De Covina, a limited partnership consisting of Max H. Baril and Moses Lerner, general partners. Baril is a real estate developer with considerable experience in the construction of rental properties, and Lerner is owner of Lerner Building and Management Company.

THE 170-unit garden apartment project is to be completed by the end of 1972. The property consists of 14 two-story apartment buildings on a 246,764 square foot site.

Exterior design features a liberal use of wood paneling and parking in semi-subterranean facilities.

The development will have a central recreational area featuring a large recreation building, swimming pool and jacuzzi pool, putting greens, and a sand volleyball court.

Orange Hills on tradition-rich land

A new development of 103 view lot homes, Orange Hills, is planned for a tradition-rich hillside in the northeast section of Orange near the northern terminus of the Newport Freeway, Orange Hills president Tom Smith announced this week.

Smith, known to Orange homeowners as the creator of such tracts as Peralta Hills, St. James Estates and Washington Terrace, said the first increment of 36 homes is nearing completion and will sell for $36,000 to $37,550.

The three and four-bedroom homes are on a curved, terraced foothill that once was part of the famed Yorba family land grant, known to settlers of the 1800s as Santiago de Santa Ana Ranch.

The site lies west of Marywood High School for Girls and is located in the 2000 block of East Santiago Street, Orange.

ORANGE HILLS offers nine elevations in traditional English, Spanish and American ranch styles. Features include re-sawed beams, brick veneer trim, continuous cleaning ovens, fireproof tile roofs, two-car attached garages and concrete drives.

Each home has a fireplace, a patio and family room and one model includes a formal dining room. Lots average 10,500 square feet.

Orange Hills is reached by exiting at Nohl Ranch Road if traveling north on the Newport Freeway, while southbound travelers on the Newport Freeway exit at Lincoln Avenue.

The H. Adema Realty Company is celebrating it's 22nd anniversary.

Adema, owner of the oldest owner-operated real estate office in North Long Beach, chose the anniversary celebration to announce the addition to his staff of Robert Cunningham as sales manager.

Adema — in an era of growing branch operations — said he believes he can better serve his area by continuing to keep one main office.

"Thank you," Adema said in marking the firm's 22nd year, "Mr. and Mrs. Long Beach — and neighbors — for the opportunity of serving you."

Authors speak out

HOW TO PAINT ANYTHING, by Hubbard H. Cobb, Macmillan, $5.95.

This may well be the first easy-to-read layman's guide to painting and refinishing to appear since the advent of miracle paints.

It is a complete encyclopedia of how to do a professional-looking job on any surface — whether it be masonry, metal or wood.

The easy-to-understand details are here: the types of paint and which to choose for a particular job; the types of brushes, how to use and care for them.

And then Cobb tells of the different procedures, depending on whether one is painting outside or inside, in order to get the best and most professional results.

For the do-it-yourself fan, it's a book that should be handy for reference. — RLB

Lakers try different ploy--defense

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Bill Sharman has some "semi-secret" plans to curtail New York's offense today in the NBA playoffs, but mostly he thinks the key to the Lakers' success will be by mocking Avis — to try a little harder.

On the eve of today's matinee game (1:40 p.m.) against the Knicks at the Forum, Sharman was asked if the New Yorkers could shoot 72 per cent again, the first-half marksmanship that gave them Wednesday's opening game in the best-of-seven series.

"I don't expect them to shoot like that," said Sharman, "but I'm not counting on them shooting badly either. They are the best outside shooting team in the league and it's hard for us to matchup against them."

So what will you do?

"We had a team meeting

CHANNEL 7, 1:30 P.M.

and decided to try a few different things Sunday," Sharman asserted. "But there won't be any major adjustments nor any changes in the starting lineup. It's pretty obvious what we have to do."

How obvious?

"We have to get to their shooters faster . . . get in a hand in their faces," the coach elaborated. "To do this we must switch faster when they set their screens. In essence, we have to work a little harder on defense."

Sharman realizes that extra effort may not be the only answer, but that's his "strategy" today more than anything else.

"I still feel defense is more important than offense," he went on. "Good defense is what makes our offense go, what allows us to fast-break so successfully. I don't want to try and outgun the Knicks."

It appeared that the Lakers were attempting to do just that in Wednesday's opener. They matched baskets for about 10 minutes, then fell hopelessly behind because their defense was so lethargic.

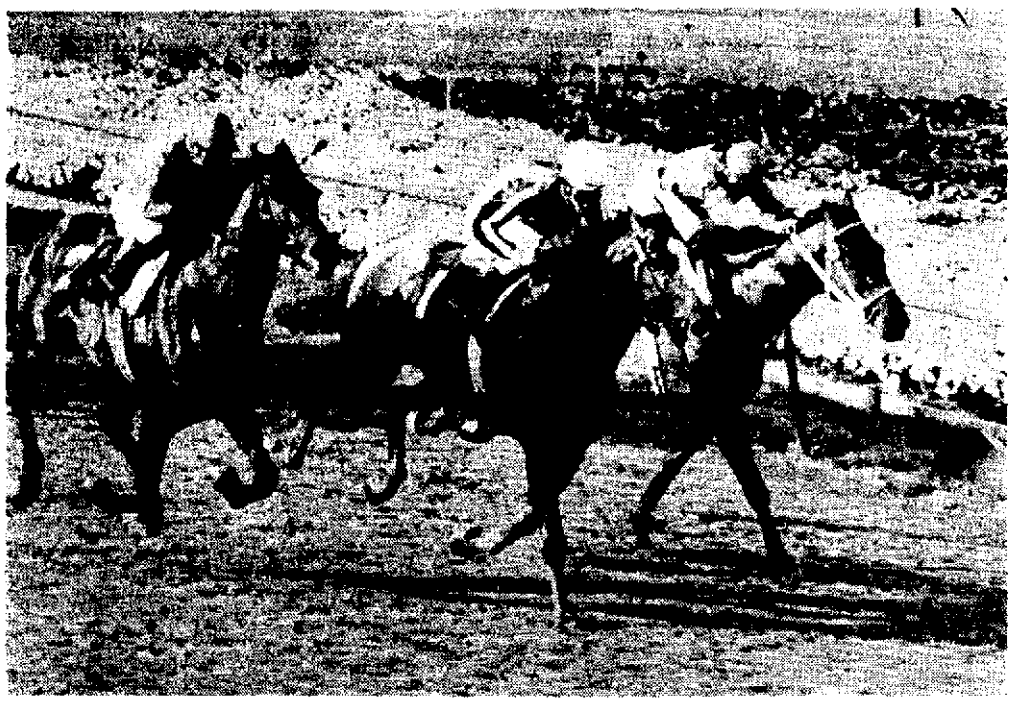

Sharman may substitute differently, although it won't mean his reserves will see action more than the usual 15 to 20 minutes.

"I think Pat Riley might matchup well on Bill Brad-

Chilean-bred Cougar II ended his 1972 drought in sensational fashion Saturday by sizzling to a smashing four and three-quarter length victory and setting an American record in the $106,500 Century Handicap at Hollywood Park.

Cougar roared down the stretch like a runaway locomotive to overhaul the pacesetters and win the classic's fifth running going away.

The crowd of 42,426 sent Cougar off the 4-5 favorite and the six-year-old's supporters were rewarded with a $3.80 return.

Unconscious, the second choice as an entry with Nor II, was second while Star Envoy, flown to California from New York after setting two track records in Florida, was third, nearly two lengths behind Unconscious.

Practicante, the Argentine-bred who had upset Cougar three weeks ago in the San Juan Capistrano at Santa Anita, never generated any steam and finished sixth in the eight-horse field. The field was trimmed when Big Shot II and Fair Test were scratched.

Cougar scorched the Hollypark grass course as he ran the mile and three-quarters in 2:11. He busted Quilche's record of 2:11⅗ which was set in this same race two years ago.

"Cougar was wanting to run all the way today, but he ran kind," said jockey Bill Shoemaker, who registered his 94th 100-grand victory and his 562nd stakes win.

"When I moved him out at the head of the stretch, he took off and didn't even do any of that lugging in that he's done before.

"Those other two horses (Unconscious and Star Envoy) set it up nice for me. They killed off each other with their hot pace and all I had to do was get racing room down the stretch to win it easy."

Jockey Eddie Belmonte shot Unconscious out of the gate to open a two-length lead by the time the horses passed in front of the stands for the first time.

Jacinto Vasquez, flown in from New York with Star Envoy, was second with his colt and the pair commenced their two-horse race.

Isaksson wins vault,

Seagren wins applause

By JOHN DIXON
Staff Writer

WALNUT — World record holder Kjell Isaksson of Sweden won the featured pole vault Saturday at the Mt. San Antonio Relays, but runnerup Bob Seagren was awarded most of the applause.

Seagren, Olympic Games champion in 1968, and Isaksson, favorite in 1972, vaulted 17 feet, 7½ inches. Isaksson won on fewer failures.

Seagren missed most of the 1971 season while recovering from surgery to repair cartilage in his right knee. He's been in a slump this season.

Although it was the first time Seagren had conquered 17-7½ since September, 1969, he was disappointed.

"I felt great warming up, but I seemed to lose some of my strength during the competition. I got over 17-7½ on my third attempt, and that took some of my strength. Anytime you have to make a height on your third attempt, you're in trouble."

He missed in three attempts at 18-feet.

"I really felt like 18 feet today. I know 18 is right there. Maybe next week."

Isaksson suffered a chest injury vaulting in the Drake Relays Friday night, and withdrew from competition Saturday after climbing over 17-7½—with a foot to spare. He had strained a groin muscle

"I don't think the injury is serious, but I think one more jump would have been unwise," he explained. "It's too bad. I felt like I could have done 18-3 today. This is my best meet so far."

Cal State Long Beach's 17-9½ vaulter, Steve Smith, also hobbled with a groin injury, did not compete.

Olympic Games 400-meter champion Lee Evans despises defeat. He had the narrowest escape of his career Saturday.

Rounding the far turn of the 400, Evans and Wayne Collett were dead even. Chests heaving, struggling for air and inches, they sprinted shoulder-to-shoulder down the entire straightaway.

Collett drew in front by a centimeter, but Evans lunged at the tape.

The winner?

Collett, concluded the standing, bellowing crowd of 11,000. Evans, said the officials.

Both were credited with 45.8 for 400 meters, 46.0 for 440 yards.

"All I could think about was fundamentals," puffed Evans. "You know, things to keep my momentum coming on, all the way to go faster without tightening up. I usually start looking for the tape about 10 yards from it, but today I started looking a little earlier."

Collett sounded more like a winner than a loser.

"This is the first time I lost a race and didn't feel bad about it. I did what I wanted to do."

His coach, Jim Bush, explained. "Wayne hasn't been aggressive enough in the last 100 yards. Today he was. He learned a lot. He's going to get a lot better."

Evans was selected track athlete of the meet.

F. Robby arrives as Dodgers breeze

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

For a guy who wasn't seeing his pitches too well, Frank Robinson still managed to do a commendable job.

But now the renowned Dodger slugger is seeing things he hasn't seen all season and he is rather excited about the prospects.

"Tonight," Frank said, a smile forming, "I saw every pitch. I hadn't been able to do that all year. But you saw the results."

If seeing is believing, the real Frank Robinson unveiled himself Saturday evening before 30,244 fans at Dodger Stadium.

He slugged his first homer as a Dodger and also drove two singles as the O'Malley's clubbed four New York pitchers for 18 hits en route to an 11-1 runaway to crumble the Mets' seven-game winning streak.

Until Saturay night Robinson, a .302 lifetime hitter, was batting a mere .237 although he did have nine runs batted in to lead the club.

"But I hadn't been seeing the ball well at all," he explained. "Then (coach) Danny Ozark spotted something I was doing. I worked on it during batting practice and, well, I saw every pitch tonight. In fact, I saw every pitch as well as you can except to see a pitch."

While Robinson's long-awaited arrival was greeted with enthusiasm, he was scarcely the whole show as the Dodgers slipped past Houston back into first place in the National League West by a half game.

Willie Davis slugged his third homer, also singling twice and driving in three runs. Jim Lefebvre had three hits and two RBIs and Dick Dietz and Bill Russell had two hits apiece. Russell hitting his first home run of the year in the sixth inning.

Naturally, with all that hitting, manager Walter Alston will juggle the lineup today for the final game of the three-game series.

With a righthanded pitcher, Buzz Capra, scheduled for New York, Alston will remove Manny Mota and Dietz, for Willie Crawford and Duke Sims.

The Dodgers now have collected 15 home runs, a startling sum considering the club is more noted for its pitch-and-putt offense. It's the best home run pace since the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers.

"I think it's because some of the guys who have played here are maturing as hitters," Robinson said, explaining the sudden show of power which has netted home runs in all but one game of the current home stand.

"Davis and Lefebvre know now which pitch they can drive," Robinson said. "This is what they couldn't do before when the club was relying solely on pitching and defense.

"This is the kind of club we have. We can hit. We just haven't been concen-

Bird reserves tougher than Halo regulars

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

BALTIMORE — Earl Weaver called out the reserves Saturday night but when you manage the Baltimore Orioles you can afford such luxury.

The reserves in this instance were identified as Don Baylor and Bobby Grich and they both made their presence felt as the Orioles stuck it to the Angels again. This time it was 6-1 if you're counting.

Baylor was the most prominent. A 22-year-old outfielder with brilliant minor league credentials, Baylor contributed a three-run homer — his first as a major leaguer — plus a double and single. Grich, the rookie from Long Beach who now resides in Fresno, had to content himself with a double, one of six the Orioles hammered off loser Andy Messersmith.

"Those two guys are every day players anywhere in the world except Baltimore," sighed an embattled and dejected Harry Dalton. Returning to the scene of his architectural triumph, Dalton has seen the Birds outscore his new team, 18-3, in two games.

Baylor was making his second start of the season. After two years at Rochester where he hit .327 and .313, it was his lustrous potential that was prominent in the Oriole decision to package Frank Robinson off to the Dodgers.

But Baylor does not regard himself as F. Robby's replacement.

"Not too many guys can walk out there and take No. 20's spot," Baylor said. "In fact, nobody can replace him. We're just going to have to win without him this year, that's all."

ANGEL OF DAY

None.

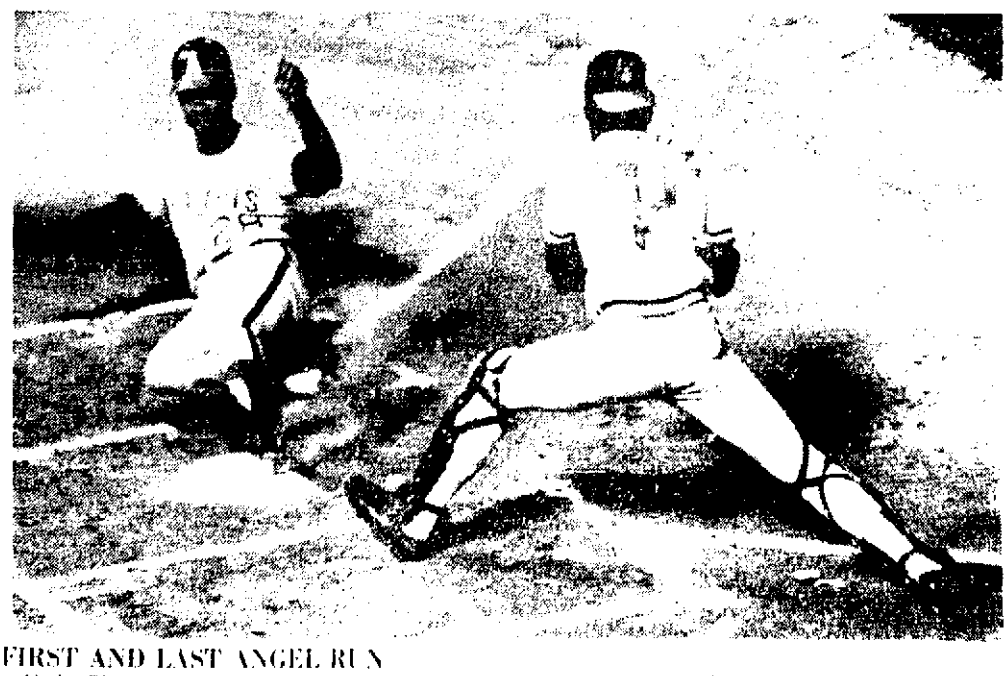

Actually, Baylor is Baltimore's No. 4 outfielder behind Merv Rettenmund, Paul Blair and Don Buford. It is a title he accepts realistically, if not enthusiastically.

"If I'm not playing tomorrow I won't go into the manager's office and demand that he play me or trade me," Baylor remarked. "I don't know how much I'll play this year and I don't think he (Weaver) knows, either."

Sitting on the bench in Baltimore, Baylor insists, is a decided improvement upon playing every day at Rochester.

"The toughest thing I've ever had to do was return to Rochester last year," he said. "It was discouraging

N.C. Central in relay record spree

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — North Carolina Central set national collegiate records in the sprint medley and mile relays and came within one-tenth of a second of a third national mark as it won the 880 relay in meet record time Saturday at the 78th annual Penn Relays.

The North Carolina runners accomplished their triple record feat without Coach Leroy Walker, who was at home because of the death of his mother.

There were seven records broken Saturday, in the final session of the two-day meet before 37,351 fans at Franklin Field.

On Friday's opening program, four meet marks were lowered and one equalled

North Carolina Central actually ran the fastest sprint medley in track history, but it won't be sanctioned as either a world or American record. It can't be listed as a world mark because the sprint medley isn't recognized in many countries, and falls short of an American record because two team members, Julius Sang and Robert Ouku, are Olympians from Kenya.

The Central quartet of Sang, Larry Black, Jeff Horsley and Ouku ran the 440, 220, 220, 880 medley in 3:14.8. The previous fastest spring medley was 3:15.2, by the University of Kansas at Austin, Tex. March 31, 1967.

Sang ran the opening 440 leg in 46.4, followed by a combined 40.7 for Black and Horsley in the two 220 legs. Ouku capped the record shattering performance with a 1:47.7 half mile.

Sang, Black and Horsley rested less than an hour, and then joined by Mel Bassett, set a meet record in the 880-yard relay of 1:21.8, only one-tenth of a second off the national collegiate record set in 1970 by Texas A&M. The meet mark, held by Texas El-Paso, second in Saturday's event, was 1:23.3 in 1970.

UTEP's runnerup time was 1:22.5, also bettering the old record.

The foursome of Bassett, Ouku, Sang and Black came back an hour later and zipped to a 3:03.1 mile, three-tenths of a second better than the national and collegiate record of 3:03.4, set by UCLA in 1969. The meet record was 3:06.1, by Villanova in 1968, while the world mark is 3:02.8, set by Trinidad-Tobago in 1966.

Bassett led off the mile with a 47.5 quarter and was followed by Ouku in 46.2, Sang in 45.6 and Black in 43.8, the fastest mile relay leg ever run. The previous fastest quarter was 43.9, by Villanova's Larry James in 1968.

Norfolk State won the 440-yard relay, breaking Texas-El Paso's one-day old meet record of 40.0 with 39.9. Texas-El Paso was second despite another 40.0 clocking.

Other meet-record breaking performances were turned in by Penn State's Greg Frederick as he won the three mile run in 13:36.1; Chris Dunn of Colgate in the high jump at 7 feet, 2 inches; Ray Robinson with a 9.3 in the 100-yard dash, and Joe Lucas of Georgetown with an 8:40.0 in the 3,000-meter steeplechase.

Championships also were won by James George of Maryland with a 245 foot, 10 inch javelin toss; Hans Hoglund of Texas-El Paso with a 62 foot, 11¼ inch shot put; Trevor Hall of Texas-El Paso, 50 feet 5¼ inches in the triple jump. Scott Hurley of Florida with a 16-foot pole vault, and Charlie Foster of N.C. Central with a 13.7 victory in the 120 high hurdles.

1-mile — Fredericks (Penn State) 13:31.5 (meet record, old mark 13:31.6 by Fredericks, 1971), Harris (Western Mich.) 13:31.6, Keough (Manhattan) 13:35.2, Haywood (Kentucky) 13:39.5, Fischer (Syracuse) 13:40.3.

Javelin — George (Maryland) 245-10, DePalma (Penn) 237-4, Hall (Norfolk St.) 236-1, Pezzke (Cornell) 226-9, Gill (Penn State) 226-8.

Shotput — Hoglund (UTEP) 62-11¼, Adams (Mich.) 60-8¾, Corlina (Notre Dame) 59-5½, Hill (Lehigh) 57-8¼, MacLachlen (Maryland) 57-1.

Triple jump — Hall (UTEP) 50-5¼, Coleman (Fla.) 50-4¾, Witherspoon (Va.) 50-3¼, Billmans (Maryland) 49-11, Watt (Toronto) 48-11¼.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Long Beach draws kudos from ABC

Today the American Bowling Congress will wrap up its big party after 65 days in Long Beach, so what is the big boss' opinion of it all?

Frank K. Baker, ABC executive secretary-treasurer, nutshells it in this fashion:

"Long Beach was a great drawing card. We had a real splendid response in this city.

"The treatment was wonderful. Win Hanssen gave us every conceivable accommodation in the Long Beach Arena and mayor Ed Wade was most considerate and helpful in every area.

"Holding the ABC in Long Beach was gratifying from every point of view. It was a colorful tournament and a most delightful one."

BAKER, WHO IS 65 years young and who will bow out from service after this season, taxed himself by commuting constantly from his temporary Long Beach apartment to ABC headquarters in Milwaukee during the past three months.

However, the commuting didn't seem to upset the ex-newsman, nor did this inevitable question:

How did the ABC Tourney in Long Beach compare with others?

"This was the biggest west of Des Moines," replied Baker.

"But you have to realize you can't draw from water areas, like the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans.

"We did have 2,000 teams from California alone, but you can't expect the East Coast to have a like turnout for a West Coast event. Money is the problem.

"Cities like Minneapolis, Milwaukee or Indianapolis are in the central part of the country. They're better for a natural draw. It simply doesn't cost the bowlers so much to travel there as it would from one coast to another.

"A 600-700 radius from the center of the country is easiest for every bowler's pocketbook."

A COUPLE THINGS written here earlier were sensitive to Baker. That would be about the southpaws' predominance in bowling and lane conditions.

"Southpaws aren't really a curse," laughed Baker. "Sometimes a comment is exaggerated in the heat of the moment.

"I'll take a philosophical point of view. I wouldn't say Lefty Grove or Lefty Gomez was unqualified because either was a lefthander. Sometimes they might have an advantage, but not every time. The same with bowlers.

"Lefthanders are a big subject in bowling today. On one occasion in Long Beach we had a five-man lefthanded team win. But such an array of stars! It was the Basch Advertising team of New York with Capt. Dick Battista, Bob Hood, Butch Gerhart, John Petraglia and Mike McGrath.

"On the other hand, the only lefthander we had in the finals was Gary Mage."

"YOU HAVE TO RECOGNIZE the ups and downs," continued Baker. "I'm inclined to think if the lane conditions were bad, then it'd be neutral for righthanders and southpaws alike.

"Put it this way. Lanes both in Long Beach this year and Detroit last year for the ABC were the same as we've tried to outline. Thus, both the lefthanders and the righthanders have an equal chance.

"Like in baseball or in golf, there are degrees of variability in bowling. The bowler thinks: 'How much play has there been ahead of me and how much dressing has there been on the floor?'"

"Dressing is the finish on the bowling lane.

"We coat the lanes with oil-based finish. It's a very light film to protect the basic coating of lanes. The coating intends to get rough without the dressing. There are problems in lane conditioning and every bowler is aware of that."

WHAT ABOUT the specially-constructed Long Beach Arena lanes?

"You've got to remember the Long Beach Arena lanes were new and were put there for a one-shot event," responded Baker. "But they were put up well.

"This is a point I'll make about the ABC itself. For us to put up new lanes is like establishing new putting greens on a golf course. It's an entire concept of foreign lanes.

"There's no familiarity. However, there's the charm and challenge. In fact, putting up lanes in a special place like Long Beach Arena is more difficult than placing putting greens on a golf course.

"Bowling lanes can change during a day's play. Any lane can get stiffer during the day. I don't think that holds true for the golf course."

THE REAL PRO has Baker's complete respect.

"That man or woman has to move around different lanes in different fashion," remarked Baker. "The good bowlers make adjustments, even if it's only an inch or two. The big stars move even a foot or two.

"The bowler is like the baseball pitcher. When his curve isn't working, he goes to the screwball or something else.

"Bowlers aren't machines as many people think.

"The top bowlers are the better than 185 average bowler. These are the ones, who, if somebody's doing better than they, will try something different. They'll change their grips and change their ball's balance, for example.

"Even the better ones change their grip if they think it could be some kind of improvement.

"For some, though, it's a fetish."

BACK TO THE LANES — and Baker's suggestion to every lane proprietor in the country:

"Housekeeping is the answer for the bowling lanes. Fundamentally, every day, the dressing (oil-based lacquer) is the answer.

"Good housekeeping is fundamental for good lane maintenance. Wherever lanes are in good condition, you have good housekeeping."

Back to Long Beach:

"There were more teams scoring in the 3,000's in Detroit last year, but there was a bigger entry there because of the middle America population center I mentioned.

"But, ratio-wise, we're right on the beam in Long Beach. We are exceedingly happy with everything."

Ryun sick, 7th at Drake (4:09)

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Kansas State's distance medley relay team raced to a world record, eight meet marks tumbled and Jim Ryun's 25th birthday soured in a fading mile run in Saturday's closing session of the 63rd Drake Relays.

A capacity crowd of 18,000 at Drake Stadium watched Ryun's disappointing effort to continue his Olympic year comeback after the Kansas State distance medley quartet reeled off a 9:31.8 victory, bettering the world best of 9:33.0 set in 1969 by Kansas, anchored by Ryun.

Ryun, suffering all week from a stomach disorder, started fast in the special mile run, but faded because of cramps after 600 yards and wound up seventh in the eight-man field with a time of 4:09.0. Last week, Ryun had run his 20th sub-four minute outdoor mile at the Kansas Relays, winning with a 3:57.1 clocking.

"I was determined to finish, even despite the stomach cramps when I tried to move ahead," said the unhappy Ryun. "I just hoped it wouldn't be too gross a finish."

The special mile was won in the meet record time of 4:00.4 by Bob Maplestone of Cardiff, Wales, and a student at Eastern Washington State.

The two-day meet produced an individual double winner in Fred DeBernardi, Texas-El Paso, who added the shot put title Saturday to the discus triumph he recorded Friday.

In the eight university and six college division relay events held over the two days, Texas Southern was the only double winner, grabbing the college sprint medley relay Saturday after taking the college 880 Friday.

Texas Southern's 3:15.9 triumph in the sprint medley was one of three Drake baton records set Saturday. Another was by Kansas with 3:16.5 in the university sprint medley.

The Drake pole vault record was shattered by five inches as defending champion Dave Roberts of Rice cleared 17-5.

The federation marathon was won by Lucian Rosa of Wisconsin-Parkside, a native of Ceylon, in the record time of 2:27:23.7, and had a farcial development.

The second and third-place finishers, Bob Wagner of the Rochester, Minn., Track Club and Ron Daws of the Twin Cities Track Club, reportedly hitchhiked an auto ride when they wandered off course, then resumed running with about four miles left.

A protest was lodged concerning the order of finish, but a decision was pending until officials could contact the driver of the car who allegedly gave the two a ride.

The two players, both No. 2 at their schools, beat the opposition's No. 1 men. Ramirez surprised top-seeded Roscoe Tanner of Stanford, 7-5, 6-2, and Mayer beat second-ranked Marcelo Lara of USC, 7-6, 6-1.

An all-Stanford final emerged in the doubles when Chico Hagey and Jim Delany of Stanford defeated Steve Stefanki and Peter Campbell of California, 7-5, 6-2, and teammates Rick Fisher and Gary Groslimond of Stanford dumped USC's Dick Bohrnstedt and Mike Machette, 6-3, 6-3.

TRACK HIGHLIGHTS

EUGENE, Ore. — Oregon's Steve Prefontaine set an American 5,000-meter record in warming up for the Olympic Games Saturday as the Ducks defeated Washington State, 99-63, in a Pac-8 meet. His time of 13:29.8 bettered his own American standard of 13:30.4 set in 1971. The Duck junior also broke the meet three-mile mark at 13:04, topping his old record of 13:12.8. Louvar Dave Rorem was the meet's only double winner, taking the 100-meters (10.3) and the 200-meters (21.1).

SEATTLE — Washington's Jim Johnson clipped 3.4 seconds off his school record and set a career best of 13:30 in the three-mile run at the Husky Open. No team scores kept, but Washington won 10 of the 18 events.

Buchanan whips Steyn

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — World lightweight champion Ken Buchanan of Scotland stopped Andries Steyn of South Africa in the third round of their scheduled 10-round non-title fight Saturday night to record his 43rd victory in 44 career bouts.

Buchanan dropped Steyn twice for nine counts before the South African's handlers threw in the towel, stopping the fight at 2 minutes, 59 seconds of the third round.

The champion scored easily with combinations from the start of the fight. He was only threatened briefly in the second round when Steyn reached him with several punishing hooks but was unable to follow up the blows as the cunning Scotsman moved away.

Buchanan, 26, weighed 137 pounds while the 27-year-old Steyn was 135½ pounds.

Laver nets another finals role

DENVER (AP) — Sixth-seeded Marty Riessen eliminated Australia's Roy Emerson, 7-6, 6-4, Saturday night and gained the finals of the United Bank Tennis Classic.

Riessen, of Evanston, Ill., will meet top-seeded Rod Laver, the 33-year-old Australian who ousted Tom Okker of the Netherlands, 6-3, 7-6. Laver will be playing for his eighth World Championship of Tennis title in today's nationally televised finals. The winner will get $10,000.

Roger Taylor of Britain and South Africa's Cliff Drysdale moved into the doubles finals with a 6-3, 7-5 verdict over Ismael El Shafei of the United Arab Republic and Brian Fairlie of New Zealand.

Riessen and Emerson appeared evenly matched and their battle was punctuated by only one service break.

Riessen won the tie-breaker, 8-6, to take the first set, then broke Emerson's service in the fifth game of the second set to wrap up the victory. Emerson, 35, double faulted to open that game and later fell behind, 15-40.

Lolich wins 'fat' battle

DETROIT (UPI) — The first round in this year's "battle of the fat left-handers" went to Mickey Lolich.

The Chicago White Sox dugout termed it the "battle of the bulge" last year when their chubby southpaw, knuckleballer Wilbur Wood, met up with Lolich. Wood won both meetings.

But Lolich took the first round of what he named the "battle of fat left-handers" Saturday when he pitched the Detroit Tigers to a 6-1 victory over Chicago.

Mickey Stanely, Bill Freehan and Willie Horton all hit their first home runs of the season to make it easy for Lolich to win his third game of the season against just one loss — the same mark Wood now has after making his wins consecutive shutouts.

Oakland outscores Brewers

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Dave Duncan's two-run single in the first inning and clutch ninth-inning relief pitching by Rollie Fingers carried the Oakland A's to a 2-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

Jim "Catfish" Hunter of the A's, who gave up a solo home run to Dave May in the sixth inning, had the Brewers checked on four hits until the ninth when John Briggs hit a one-out single to left center field.

And when Joe Rudi bobbled the ball and Bobby Brooks threw it wildly back to the infield, Briggs scooted to third on the two errors.

But Fingers came on to strike out Billy Conigliaro and get George Scott on a game-ending grounder, preserving Hunter's first victory.

Duncan's bases-loaded single off Skip Lockwood sent the Brewers down to their fourth successive defeat. It followed a one-out walk to Rudi, a single by Reggie Jackson and a walk to Mike Epstein.

DODGERS ROLL—

trating like we should the last few days."

Almost lost in the burst of hitting was an impressive pitching job by Tommy John who went the distance for his second win in three decisions.

Tommy scattered nine New York hits for his first complete game in the National League. But he almost failed to survive the fourth inning when New York loaded the bases with no one out and the Dodgers leading by only four, 5-1.

But he got Jim Beauchamp to bounce back to the mound, fanned Jerry Grote and got pinch hitter Don Hahn to pop out.

"He pitched Grote as well as he can pitch a guy," catcher Dietz said later of John's narrow escape.

The Dodgers jumped out early, nailing Jerry Kousman for four first inning runs as Davis and Robinson homered back-to-back and Lefebvre and Dietz stroked doubles.

Dietz singled in another run in the third, Russell homered in the sixth, Lefebvre got an RBI in the seventh and then the Dodgers mauled Chuck Taylor for four more runs on six hits, all of them singles in the eighth.

When informed Russell, who's subbing temporarily for the slumping Maury Wills at shortstop, is batting a hefty .714, Alston laughed and said, "If he hits .714 he can stay there. But Maury understands. We just can't take Russell out now, the way he's hitting."

DODGER DOPE: Preston Gomez, the deposed manager of the San Diego Padres, was a Dodger Stadium visitor Saturday night. He plans to move to Los Angeles. "That way I can see clubs in both leagues, he said when asked what his plans were for the future. "I've had some calls from various clubs but right now I'm going to relax and go back to school. I want to study public speaking." . . . Preston said Buzzie Bavasi's reason for firing him was "simply because the club isn't drawing and wasn't winning either. He was feeling the pressure. He had to do something. I think it hurt him more than it did me."

Pitching today's series finale will be Don Sutton, seeking his fourth consecutive victory without a loss, and Buzz Capra (1-0) for the Mets. . . . The Philadelphia Phillies arrive Monday night for a three-game set to close the home stand.

Rob Reiner, Archie Bunker's son-in-law on "All in the Family" worked out with the Dodgers before the game. He was the guy with the long hair who answered to "Meathead."

Chris Cannizzaro still is nursing a sore left arm, the result of a muscle pull in his bicep. . . .

ANGELS—

to go back to a place where I had already proved myself."

For Grich, it was his first start of the year.

"You feel a little more pressure when you finally get a chance and it's tough mentally to sit for any period of time," he confessed. "But I know the team has to go with it's front-liners just the same as I know my time is going to come."

Baylor's home run was a three-run job in the seventh and insured a third successive defeat for Messersmith, regarded as the ace of the Angel pitching staff. It is now a shell-shocked pitching staff, having surrendered an average of five runs per outing over the first 12 games.

That's a tough obstacle to overcome, especially if you are only averaging 2.5 runs per game like the Angels.

If Messersmith were bothered by a bone bruise on the middle finger of his pitching hand, he wasn't telling anyone.

"If he's hurting, it's news to me," said manager Del Rice.

ANGEL ANGLES: With the Milwaukee Brewers stumbling out of the starting gate there is increasing speculation that manager Dave Bristol may not survive much longer. . . . The word along Rumor Row is that Del Crandall will inherit Bristol's job if a change is forthcoming. . . . Crandall, who was a catcher during the glory days of the Milwaukee Braves, is presently managing the Brewers' Triple-A farm team at Evansville. . . . Angel announcer Dick Enberg will not go the route with the team this summer. . . . He has been granted a three-week leave of absence and plans to take in the summer Olympics at Munich with wife Jerri. . . . # Astros fall on wild toss

HOUSTON (UPI) — Pinch-runner Luis Melendez scored the winning run in the 11th inning on pitcher Ken Forsch's wild throw to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

The Astros loss, along with the Dodgers' 11-1 win over New York, boosted the Dodgers into the West Division leadership by half a game.

Melendez, running for Matty Alou, was on second base when Joe Hague laid down a sacrifice bunt. Forsch fielded it in time to force Melendez at third, but his throw sailed over the head of shortstop Roger Metzger in to the left field corner and Melendez scored.

Jerry McNertney singled to score Joe Torre with an added run.

Alou led off the 11th with his fourth consecutive hit and Torre moved him to second with his third hit of the game and his eighth hit in his last 11 times at bat.

Montreal continues Giant skid

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Righthander Mike Torrez, making his first start of the season, stopped the San Francisco Giants with a five-hitter to give the Montreal Expos a 2-1 victory Saturday.

Torrez, obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals last year, gave up all singles. The Giants, who have now lost seven of their last eight games, scored their only run in the third inning on a single by rookie Chris Arnold, a sacrifice by losing pitcher Steve Stone and a single by Chris Speier.

San Francisco only had two other runners as far as second base the rest of the day. Willie Mays hit into two double plays to wipe out scoring threats in the first and sixth innings.

Perez runs Reds past Cubs, 3-2

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tony Perez raced home from third base while Glenn Beckert was throwing out Dave Concepcion Saturday, capping a two-run ninth-inning rally and giving Cincinnati a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Perez scored the winning run when Beckert fielded Concepcion's grounder and apparently took his eye off the runner at third. Beckert's throw retired Concepcion but Perez beat first baseman Jim Hickman's throw to the plate.

Braves top Pittsburgh on 14 hits

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Marty Perez's two-run single climaxed a four-run third inning and Felix Millan ignited another four-run surge in the fifth with a two-run double Saturday to help the Atlanta Braves hand the Pittsburgh Pirates their fourth straight defeat, 9-5.

Ralph Garr contributed three hits to Atlanta's 14-hit attack as the Pirates failed for the 12th time in as many games to get a complete game from a starting pitcher.

Philadelphia loses slugger Johnson

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Deron Johnson, the Philadelphia Phillies' slugging first baseman, has a damaged nerve in his left leg that will sideline him for at least a week and perhaps much longer, the team disclosed Saturday.

Johnson complained about a numbness in his left leg Friday night before a game with the San Diego Padres. He was taken to Mercy Hospital where a neurosurgeon diagnosed the injured nerve.

Kuhn orders Finley about

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, criticized for the way he operated behind the scenes during the baseball strike, stepped forward publicly Saturday and ordered Oakland owner Charles Finley to leave his contract offer to pitcher Vida Blue on the table.

Kuhn returned to New York after sitting in during meetings in Chicago between Finley, Blue and the pitcher's attorney, Robert Gerst, that led to an agreement on contract terms before negotiations broke up over whether to make the terms public.

At that time, according to Kuhn, Finley said he was withdrawing his latest offer.

"I am ruling that the offer that has been made will remain in effect," Kuhn said. "We will have a deal if Vida is willing to accept as I an going to urge him to do I think a fair offer has been made and I am urging him to reflect on this."

Pressed as to how he could make Finley keep the $63,000 offer open despite the A's owner's announced withdrawal, Kuhn said:

"I'm ordering him."

"Suppose," Kuhn was asked, "he says no?"

"That," said the commissioner, "is too bad."

Blue, his attorney and Finley worked out a deal that would have given Blue $50,000 in salary, $8,000 for a four-year college scholarship and $5,000 as a bonus for last year's performance in which he posted a 24-8 record.

"But," said Kuhn, "they were unable to reach accord on whether the deal should be published in detail. Blue did not want the terms released. Finley wanted to release all the terms. On this point they could not reach agreement."

Finley said Saturday night in Milwaukee he had not decided whether to keep open his contract offer to Blue, although he had been ordered to do so by Kuhn.

"One would think the commissioner of baseball would at least extend me the courtesy and the consideration of inquiring whether I would keep my offer open before ordering me to do so in the press," Finley said.

Peterson now sixth in singles

Cecil Peterson picked his spot perfectly.

Bowling on the next-to-last day of competition in the American Bowling Congress Tournament at the Long Beach Arena Saturday, Peterson fired his first 700 series (227-249-234—710) to vault into sixth place in regular singles.

Peterson, a 46-year-old bricklayer from Garden Grove who was competing in his first ABC, still had a chance to beat Bill Pointer's 739 for the singles lead when he entered the game. But he left the No. 5 pin and spared out for his sixth-place finish, with 22 strikes and no open frames in the three-game set.

Christian Tandberg of Anaheim wasn't far off Peterson's pace, rolling games of 241, 208 and 246 for a 695 output as a late substitute. His series tied for 11th place.

Action concludes today in the 65-day affair.

Lakewood blanked in swim prelims

Moore League athletes or coaches won't look back upon Saturday's CIF swim prelims at Santa Monica High with pleasant memories.

Don Grant of Millikan High and Peter DeGolia of Wilson were the only individuals to advance and the Bruins' 200 medley relay team also had one of the top six times to qualify for Friday night's finals at Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool.

League champion Lakewood was shockingly shut out.

"We had better times in our league meets five weeks ago than we did Saturday," said a subdued Ken Hamdorf. Although not using it as an excuse, Hamdorf admitted the long layoff from competition may have hurt all the league schools.

Most notable Lancer casualty was Dan Green, second in the 100 breaststroke last year and champion the year before who was disqualified Saturday after two false starts.

Grant was a tenth of a second off the best time posted by Clay Evans in the 100 butterfly at 53.5; DeGolia just made the finals in the 100 backstroke.

In the Bee division, Russ Padia of Jordan qualified in the 200 freestyle at 1:52.0, the day's third best time. Phil Ross of Millikan made the 100 butterfly finals at 55.4. No Cee advanced.

Baseball rules get overhaul

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Major league baseball has made slight changes, because of the shortened 1972 season, in rules governing minimum performance standards to qualify for batting and pitching championships.

The changes, to apply to this season only, were announced jointly Thursday by American League President Joseph Cronin and National League President Charles S. Feeney.

To qualify for the batting title this year, a player will have to be credited with as many plate appearances as the number of games his team plays, multiplied by 3.1.

To qualify for the earned run average championship, a pitcher will have to work as many innings as the number of games scheduled for his club.

Because of games canceled by the players strike this year, the team schedules vary. Some will play as many as 156 games, some as few as 153.

Truckers take pair

Nick Hopkins and Tom Sacks each homered in the first game and Ed Klecker allowed only two hits and struck out 18 in the second to lead the V. B. Morgan Truckers of Lakewood to victory in a softball doubleheader with VIP, 4-3 and 2-0, at Mayfair Park Saturday night.

In the opener, VIP pitcher Bob Berstet and Lakewood hurler Gene Kiholm each threw four-hitters, but the pair of Lakewood homers decided the contest.

The second game saw each team manage only two hits, but Klecker's superb moundwork and RBI singles by Hopkins and Ralph Smith insured the win.

Mater Dei ambushes St. Anthony

Last-place Mater Dei High scored 15 runs and collected 12 hits off a quartet of St. Anthony pitchers Saturday to collar the Saints, 15-5, at Wardlow Park.

Bob Hill's single, the first of three hits, scored Bob Walker to give the Saints a 1-0 lead in the first. The Monarchs waited until the fourth to KO Dennis Lopez, scoring six times as Ray Najera slammed a bases-loaded triple.

The Saints came back with four runs of their own as Chris Mandich doubled in two runs, but didn't score again. Mater Dei is now 2-10, the Saints 5-7.

Troy loses vet McGirr in drills

Coach John McKay put his football squad through a hard-hitting 40-minute scrimmage Saturday and Mike McGirr, veteran offensive tackle, was sidelined with a knee injury.

McGirr, a 280-pound senior, suffered torn ligaments in his right knee and will undergo surgery. McKay said McGirr has a "fair chance" of returning to action in the fall.

"We're destitute at tackle now," said McKay. "We have only Pete Adams and Steve Riley who have played there and may have to move Allen Gallaher or Cliff Culbreath to that spot. But anyway you look at it we're short-handed there."

Otherwise, McKay was pleased with the scrimmage and said, "I think this can be as good a tackling team as we've ever had. It really hits."

Sophomore Pat Haden and senior Mike Rae alternated at quarterback. Haden hit on 10 of 20 passes for 108 yards while Rae connected on six of 11 for 49 yards.

The leading rusher was Manfred Moore, who gained 36 yards on seven carries including an 18-yard touchdown run. The leading receiver was Dave Boulware, who caught four for 43 yards.

Hannum reveals Wilt heart problem in '64

CINCINNATI (AP) — Alex Hannum, who coached Lakers center Wilt Chamberlain in two cities, says Chamberlain had a severe heart problem in 1964, and, "I didn't give him one chance in 10,000 of ever playing basketball again."

Hannum told Cincinnati Enquirer sports writer Tom Callahan that while Chamberlain was hospitalized for what was officially described as a pancreas problem, "they treated him just like he had a severe heart condition."

Hannum said Chamberlain's heart problems occurred just prior to the 1964 season, when he was with the San Francisco Warriors of the National Basketball Assn. Hannum later coached Chamberlain at Philadelphia, where the 76ers won the NBA title in 1966-67, but now coaches the American Basketball Assn.'s Denver Rockets.

Chamberlain and the Lakers currently are involved in the NBA championship playoffs against New York. They trail the Knicks 1-0 in the best-of-seven series, entering today's game at the Forum.

"Wilt reported late to camp, in 1964," Hannum said, "and arrived just in time for a game against the U.S. Olympic team before we were to go out on an exhibition trip. He was having severe chest pains and had a physical the day before we left."

Hannum told Callahan, "they got ahold of him right at the airport and called him back to the hospital. They treated him for a heart problem — thinned out his blood. He was really in a lot of pain."

Chamberlain was unavailable for comment Saturday.

Callahan said he had a conversation with the 7-foot-1 center two years ago. At that time Callahan says, Chamberlain recalled, "I was having attacks and sleeping under oxygen tents."

Hannum said he visited Chamberlain in the hospital and, "I remember one thing. I went into the hospital and here he is in bed, 'you know, Alex,' he said, 'I'm laying here and I've got all these problems. The question is whether I believe and in what I do. I believe. You've got to believe in something, and I do.'

"He didn't say anything about a particular religion, just belief in something. I told you what I thought the odds were. Wilt Chamberlain is one guy who can defy odds."

Celtics reported San Diego-bound

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Irving Levin, president of National General Corp. in Los Angeles, is the new — and only — owner of the Boston Celtics and intends to move the National Basketball Association franchise to San Diego, it was reported today.

The San Diego Union said in a copyright story that an attorney representing Levin has been negotiating rental terms with the operator and the manager of the San Diego Sports Arena. An agreement has not been reached.

Before the newspaper published its story, arena manager Harry Ornest denied that any negotiations had taken place. However, he did say that "the Sports Arena has and will and can make excellent dates available for any major league basketball team which has the sanction of its league to establish San Diego as the home site of its franchise."

Sam Schulman, owner of the NBA's Seattle SuperSonics, told the Union after meeting with NBA commissioner Walter Kennedy in Los Angeles Friday that such sanction could be expected.

"I don't think he (Kennedy) would interfere," Schulman was quoted as saying. He told me that he didn't know if, in today's atmosphere, the league would have the power to restrict the movement of any team."

Hawks have nightmare in Sub-Flot 1 tourney

By CHUCK MEDICK
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — The Long Beach Nitehawks, after setting down Phoenix, 3-0, Saturday morning, made nine hits count for only one run and dropped a 3-1 decision to Oceanside in the Sub-Flot 1 Invitational softball tournament Saturday night.

Bob Todd pitched a masterful three-hitter in the morning contest, though he suffered from bursitis and a badly swollen left hand. Hice Styles doubled and scored on Don Sears' double and that was enough for Todd.

However, the nightcap was a Nitehawk nightmare. With one away in the first inning, Daryl Kamm singled, his first of four consecutive hits. Styles singled to right, Kamm advancing to third, but the play was nullified when Kamm was called out for leaving first base too soon. Styles went on to register his first of four strikeouts.

In the second after the Hawks had tallied on a walk, sacrifice and error, Oceanside scored twice without benefit of a hit as the Hawks committed two errors.

In the fourth frame, with runners at first and second, Hawks' catcher Milt Stark singled, but Sears and Oceanside shortstop Pete Goedert collided and Sears was ruled out for interference.

John Wilson, on first base, had passed Sears and scored, but he was called out for passing another baserunner. Then the umpires, tournament director and several other notables deliberated for 45 minutes.

They ultimately ruled Sears safe, but Wilson retired. The next two batters struck out. The Hawks must win four games today, beginning at 9 a.m. for a tournament title.

Bobby Hunter wins semifinal

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Favored heavyweights Nick Wells of the Air Force and Leroy Jones, Brooklyn, won their bouts in the semifinals of the national AAU boxing championships Saturday night and will meet today in the finals.

In other bouts, defending champion Bobby Lee Hunter, a South Carolina prison inmate, and Richard Deane of the Navy won semifinals in the 112-pound division to meet in the finals.

Other semifinals winners included Claurio Rivera, Air Force, who will fight Davey Armstrong, Tacoma, Wash., in the 106 pound class.

In the 119-pound class John David, Navy, is scheduled to meet Fred Bryant, Middle Atlantic region. Herman Artis Philadelphia, will meet Greg Whaley, Ohio, in the 125-pound division.

Washington St. still in first

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State held on to first place in the Pacific-8's Northern Division with 4-3 and 9-3 baseball victories Saturday over Oregon State.

Indy opens for practice

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Four race cars took practice laps Saturday as the Indianapolis Motor Speedway opened on schedule, but light rain washed away hopes for a full day's session.

Denny Zimmerman, last year's speedway "Rookie of the Year," was the first driver on the famed 2½-mile oval, but rolled into the pits after only one lap.

Time trials are slated for May 13-14 and May 20-21, with the million dollar race to be held May 27.

The 33 open slots are up for grabs among 81 cars.

Drake passing sharp in 49ers' scrimmage

Randy Drake's passing highlighted a Cal State Long Beach football scrimmage Saturday as the 49ers concluded their second week of spring practice.

Drake, a two-year starter, completed 14 of 21 passes for 193 yards, including a touchdown strike to tight end Terry Logue.

Wide receiver Ken Matthews caught eight passes for 98 yards and Logue latched onto six for 95 yards.

The defensive unit, sparked by tackle Daryl Checknita, shut off the 49ers' running attack. However, four of the squads top running backs, all-America Terry Metcalf, Lynn Hughes, Tom Fitzpatrick and Val Fobbs, were held out of practice.

BUD TUCKER

Matinee good for ABC, bad for JKC

At halftime of the first game of the world championship series J. Walter Kennedy, the super brain behind the operation of the National Basketball Association, announced the location, date and time of the second contest.

This, of course, was no more out of the ordinary than Bowie Kuhn appearing after the fourth inning of the first World Series game to reveal details as to where and when the second event will take place. Or, for that matter, Pete Rozelle rising to his feet at the intermission of the Super Bowl to announce that the second half will be moved from New Orleans to Los Angeles.

As it turned out, the delay in deciding about the second Lakers-Knicks contest was simply explained. A minor disagreement had existed between Mr. Jack Kent Cooke, owner of the Lakers, and executives of the television network responsible for sending pictures of the games through the air to various sections of the land.

The TV people wished the second game to take place Sunday afternoon in Inglewood while Mr. Cooke was in favor of Sunday evening. The point of the network was that when it is 8 p.m. on the west coast, it is 11 p.m. in the east and this is not what is known in the TV trade as prime time.

MR. COOKE'S RELUCTANCE to play in the afternoon was largely due to the fact his team does not perform in the least artistically before sundown. History reveals that the last time the Lakers played on Sunday afternoon, the Milwaukee Bucks defeated them by 21 points.

Clearly, the two points were well taken and you understand the dedication of both sides. However, after considerable grappling and rolling around in the dirt the network was declared the winner and the second game subsequently scheduled for 1:40 p.m. Sunday afternoon.

But Mr. Cooke suffered no disgrace in defeat. Larger figures than he have engaged the networks in combat and the record always shows them finishing second.

You see, television pays through the nostrils for exclusive rights to sporting events and therefore is in complete charge of what goes on in the world of fun and games. Starting and finishing times are dictated by the TV operators who also call the timeouts.

IF YOU WILL TAKE careful note, you will see where the astronauts landed on the moon and back on earth during prime time. Political conventions, ribbon cuttings and riots always commence earlier on the Pacific coast.

So it is, then, you place your right palm over your left breast out of respect for Jack Kent Cooke's gallant efforts against overwhelming opposition. At that, Cooke did not wilt under the pressure until after he had been thrown a bone. He emerged from the debate with the assurance that if a fifth series game is necessary, it will be played at the "fabulous" Forum Sunday, May 7 at 7:10 p.m.

Even at that, the May 7 date is not without its complications. The Myron Floren Extravaganza is scheduled for that Sunday at 2 p.m. Assuming the show lasts at least two hours, Cooke has very little time to get the last wheelchair out before the basketball clients start coming in.

Of course, there is no guarantee there will be a fifth game. If the Lakers flounder henceforth in the manner of the first game, the Knicks will require no more than the minimum.

SCIENTISTS OF BASKETBALL explained the 114-92 humiliation as a matter of strategy and style. The New York team remained at a distance and took artillery shots, thereby destroying the Lakers who prefer inside hand-to-hand combat.

Asked if the Knicks could continue such remarkable long-range accuracy, Laker coach Bill Sharman replied, "I hope not, but New York is the best outside shooting team in this business."

If the Knicks persist and upset the heavily favored Lakers, your heart will go out to Jack Kent Cooke who has suffered more playoff pain that one man should have to endure. Since he purchased the Lakers in 1964, he has tearfully watched his clods blow the final championship series on five occasions.

If it happens a sixth time, you envision Cooke climbing to the roof of the Forum and preparing to jump.

The exact time of the leap to be announced by the network.

Byron Nelson Classic

Casper moves to the front

DALLAS (UPI) — Billy Casper, who said his game has "turned around" since his on-course squabble with his caddy last week, drilled home an 18-foot birdie putt on the final green Saturday to move out in front at the 36-hole mark of the Byron Nelson Golf Classic with a seven-under-par 133.

Casper's bristling 32-33—65 over the 7,086-yard, par 35-35—70 Preston Trail Golf Club was full of birdies, including one string of four in a row in the front nine, but he had to get the benefit of a final hole lapse of concentration by former funny man Juan Rodriguez to gain the undispute lead.

Rodriguez, who says he has turned completely serious in contrast to his one-time clowning acts, rolled into the final hole also seven under par, but drove into the trees and had to settle for a bogey which gave him a 33-35—68 and dropped him into a tie for second with early finishers Lee Trevino and Wilf Homenuik at six-under-par 134.

Homenuik, who blew the first round lead with a bogey-bogey finish, wound up birdie-birdie Saturday for a 33-34—67, while Trevino put together a string of three birdies to get a 36-32—68.

John Schlee slipped home in the shadows to grab fourth place with a 33-34—67 to stand at 135, while a four-way deadlock developed for sixth place with Charles Coody, Miller Barber, Tom Weiskopf and Butch Baird all at four-under-par 136. Baird matched Casper's five-under 65.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, who double bogeyed a par-5 hole when his tee shot strayed out of bounds, would up with a 36-35—71 and was far back at even par 140.

Casper, whose last 65 and last tour victory was in the Kaiser Open last October, bounced back from a bogey on the first hole when he three-putted from 25 feet. From there on, his putter was red hot.

Starting at the third hole, he canned birdies of 8, 8, 30 and 20 feet and pickup up another one of 15 feet at the 12th hole in addition to the finishing 18-footer.

Casper said the turnabout in his golf game came last Sunday when his caddy of nine years, Del Taylor, dropped Casper's bag and walked off on the 10th hole of the final round of the Tournament of Champions.

"I got three birdies right after that and my game, especially my putting, has changed for the better," Casper said.

The disagreement with his caddy, Casper said, "had been building for months," but he said that after the final round at Rancho La Costa he and Taylor sat down and talked about 35 or 40 minutes.

"We cleared the air and we're even closer now than ever. When two people are as close as we were you're bound to have a few words. It was just unfortunate it had to come out in the open on the course."

Rodriguez, who said he is playing with a new determination to concentrate on his golf after missing the low 60 exempt list last year, said he "missed my concentration only twice today and one of the times was on that last hole . . . I don't even remember driving the ball."

Rodriguez had birdie putts of 10, 17 and 2 feet and one from 18 inches, but also bogeyed the 10th hole when he caught a trap.

Homenuik, who has hit every fairway and 35 of 36 greens in his first two rounds, sank birdie putts of 10, 3, 8 and 25 feet — the last two on the finishing holes — Saturday. He bogeyed the 12th by three-putting from 15 feet.

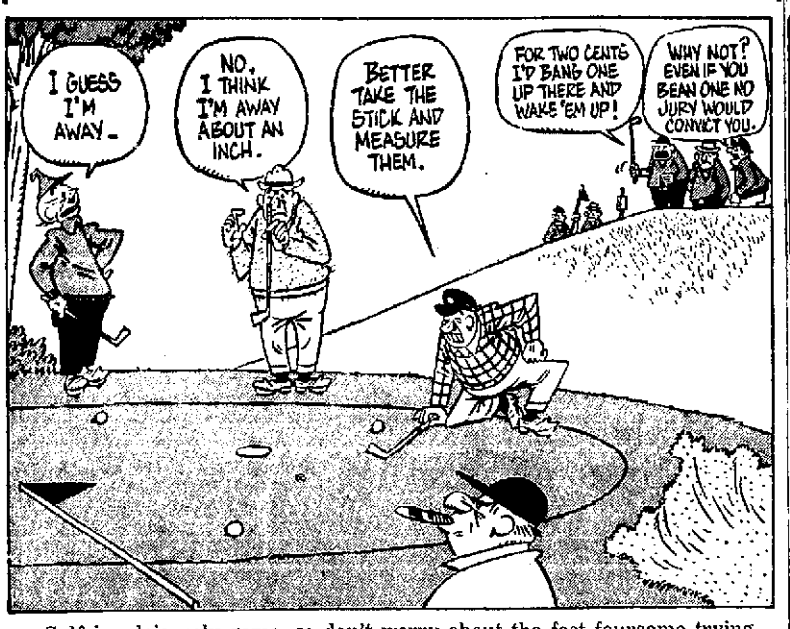

Trevino strung together birdie putts of 12, 15 and 18 feet starting with the 13th hole and got another from 6 feet, but a trap and trees cost him bogeys on nos. 8 and 9.

It took a score of 144 to make the cut for the final two rounds. Among the prominent casualties were Tommy Aaron and Homero Blancas, winner of the Phoenix Open earlier this year.

Thursday's scheduled opening round was rained out and delayed the tournament for a full day. It now is slated to end Monday.

Golf is a leisurely game, so don't worry about the fast foursome trying to go through. This is your foursome's opportunity to set the pace for other groups on the course. Whatever you do, don't wave them up on the three-pars.

A competitive game

My golf game thrives on competition. So will yours. All I know is you can't play till you pay. Some of those sharks I know back at Tennison Park in Dallas still take their cuts at me when I'm in town. But I play their best ball — it keeps me sharp and I have to bear down every shot — and that way I seldom lose my competitive edge.

I've played golf every way you can play it—from standing on one leg to busting balls with Dr. Pepper bottles. There have been times when it cost me because the cats I played with — Dandy Dick Martin, Arnold Salinas, Titanic Thompson and that gang — threw them dimes around like they were manhole covers.

A kid doesn't have to bet to play this game. But he has to compete. I mean in junior tournaments and against caddies who're the future pros. You learn to win from losing. Competition teaches you about golf strategy. There's more to this game than hitting balls.

Spartans nip 49ers twice

SAN JOSE (Special) — Cal State Long Beach flexed its batting muscle Saturday.

Unfortunately, so did San Jose State, which went on to capture a Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. double header with 6-4 and 3-2 wins over the 49ers.

Bill Baker and Mark Fishback blasted a home run in each game but Dennis Smith and Pete Jensen hit round trippers in the first game to drop the 49ers.

The Spartans jumped to an early 2-0 lead in the first game when Al Ariza singled; moved to second on a single by John Urzi. A walk to Brian Nakamoto loaded the bases and Smith singled home Ariza. John Keisler wild pitched Urz home.

San Jose scored its three runs in the first inning to win the second game.

Ariza singled, stole second (one of three in the two games) and went to third on a bad throw by the 49ers' catcher Bill Baker. Nakamoto singled home Ariza and Smith doubled to put runners on second and third. Fishback, CSLB's shortstop, threw away a ground ball allowing the two Spartans to score.

The loss dropped Cal State's record to 2-10 in PCAA play.

Vikes post win over Renegades

BAKERSFIELD (Special) — Steve Derian knocked in one run and made a game saving diving catch in the seventh inning to help Long Beach City College whip the Bakersfield Renegades 6-2 Saturday in Metropolitan Conference play.

With two out and two on in the seventh inning and the Vikings holding a 4-2 lead, Derian made a diving catch of a sinking fly ball to save at least one run from scoring.

In the eighth inning, Derian knocked in one of the two Viking insurance runs.

CSLB lands FJC guard Aberegg

Rick Aberegg, a 5-foot-11, 160-pound all-state guard from Fullerton Junior College, has signed a national letter-of-intent with Cal State Long Beach.

Aberegg, known as a scorer in high school and as a freshman at Fullerton, turned passer last season and had 362 assists while the Hornets rode to a 34-3 record and third-place finish in the state tournament.

"In all the years I've been watching junior college basketball, Rick is the best playmaker I have ever seen," 49er coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "I'm sure he's going to be a tremendous asset to our program."

Aberegg gave two reasons — the 49ers' national schedule and Ed Ratleff — for choosing Cal State over from "15 to 20" schools, including USF, USC, UC Riverside and Fresno State.

"I want to play pro ball," Aberegg said in explanation of his decision, "and with the schedule Long Beach plays and the exposure it receives, I'm going to have a lot of people watching me play."

"Also, I'll be playing with Ratleff and I think he will help me a lot. That was a big reason why I chose Long Beach. I know he'll help me and I hope that I can help him."

Aberegg, who was a starting guard on the junior college's entry in the recent National AAU tournament, was an all-CIF selection at Katella High as a senior after averaging an Orange County record 27.5 points per game.

He averaged nearly 20 points a game as a freshman before turning playmaker this year and seeing his total slip to 14 per contest.

Wally Kincaid: the sorcerer of Cerritos

By GARY ELLIS
Staff Writer

Let Westwood keep its wizard. Cerritos has a sorcerer.

Wally Kincaid doesn't wear a pointed hat, mumble secret sayings or add toad's legs to a special formula. He doesn't have to. Winning is becoming a way of life to the Falcon baseball team.

Since 1958, when Cerritos College fielded its first baseball team, Kincaid and winning have become synonymous. In 14-plus years, Kincaid's teams have won 445 games while losing 103 contests for a winning percentage of .820. Even more amazing was a team that was 40-0 in 1966 and a team that lost in the ninth inning to post a 40-1 mark.

WALLY KINCAID

"It was sort of like a dream," said Kincaid, probably the most respected junior college coach in the Southland. "It should never have happened in this game."

Obviously, the Cerritos record has reaped benefits. The Falcons have won seven outright conference titles and tied for one more while winning the state title twice.

Despite the success story, Kincaid is not overwhelmed with himself. "I don't think my coaching is a real factor," he said. "I have two excellent young assistants — Tim Reins (Warren High, Cerritos and Cal State Long Beach), who handles the pitchers and Roger Cannon (Downey High, Cerritos, Whittier College), who has been working with the outfielders and hitters."

Kincaid admits he has no coaching magic — no special coaching tools. He's thankful for the good high school talent that arrives at Cerritos every year, the school's facilities and administrators. Yet some other coaches have enjoyed the same ingredients and have not been nearly as successful.

Maybe, then, Kincaid's philosophy affects every player. "I want the players to do their best each day. You have to strive each day when you walk on the field. You must give maximum mental and physical effort. If we are always striving for that, it carries over. It's like life in a way. You have to get up each day and give a good effort."

Every day means baseball to Kincaid. "I start thinking about it from the moment I wake up until I go to sleep, from September through September. If I give that good mental and physical effort the players respond and understand."

Evidently it's carried over to this year's ball club. Cerritos is 33-6 on the year, No. 1-rated in the state and Friday clinched the South Coast Conference title. "They're a very hard working group," says Kincaid. "The crux of the club is that there is no individual star and I know that sounds corny. We don't have any real stars, no really great hitters. The players have taken what tools they have and put it to good use."

Kincaid admits that the hardest coaching technique is getting the team to play together. "We try to get across to the players that the team is more important than the individual. We drill and talk about what we're doing. Then, after working hard, we go out and give it our best shot."

In the past it seems that he "best show" is much better than anyone else's. "When you're winning a lot, everyone is out to beat you. When you have new people you try to keep the winning tradition together. That is the real challenge. The longer you stay on top, the longer everyone is trying to shoot at you."

Scott, Erving spark Squires

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Reserve Ray Scott scored 26 points and rookie Julius Erving added 24 and grabbed 32 rebounds Saturday as the Virginia Squires defeated the New York Nets, 116-107, and took a 3-2 lead in the ABA Eastern Division finals.

The sixth game of the best-of-7 series will be played Monday night in Uniondale, N.Y., and a seventh game, if needed, will be played Thursday at Norfolk, Va.

It was nip and tuck Saturday until the last two minutes of the third period when the Squires ran off 10 successive points to take an 88-77 margin into the final 12 minutes.

With veteran Adrian Smith pouring in 10 points over the first 3:25 of the fourth quarter, the Squires opened up a 100-82 bulge and were never in trouble again.

Scott, who averaged only 15 minutes a game during regular season, played 30 minutes and delivered 26 points. He scored 14 in the second period when Virginia took a 34-33 lead at 8:33. The Squires never trailed again.

ley and that John Trapp could muscle with Dave DeBusschere," he revealed.

How about Wilt Chamberlain roaming 25 feet out to pick up Jerry Lucas.

"I haven't decided exactly what I want Wilt to do yet," said the coach, ignoring what may be his most strategic move in the series.

Sharman was asked if his team could outlast the Knicks if Jerry West continues to shoot poorly.

"Jerry is not playing up to his own standard as a shooter," Sharman retaliated, "but he has helped us more in the playoffs than any other man except Wilt. He has given us steals, good passes, solid defense and leadership.

"I want Jerry to shoot better, but we have enough offense to win this series if we play good defense."

The Lakers lost the home-court advantage in the first game against Milwaukee, then bounced back, and Sharman still feels Milwaukee is superior to New York.

"The Bucks are a better team," he said emphatically, "although New York, as I've said before, causes us a matchup problem. But if we can beat Milwaukee, we can beat New York."

Only three times in NBA history has the team with the home court edge in the final series lost the title.

This is comforting to Sharman, except that no team has ever lost the first two games at home and come back to win the championship.

What this means is that today's game has monumental significance, if you believe in trends. Sharman does. He knows his team must win today.

SHORT SHOTS: If fifth and seventh games are necessary, they probably would be on local TV, channel 7, just like today. But channel 7 (ABC) may not televise at all next Sunday night because it wouldn't begin in the East until 10:10 p.m. The reason the blackout was lifted today was because the Lakers had already darkened five post-season games, which is the NBA limit. Presumably, the same rule would allow ABC to televise all the remaining games. The games in New York are Wednesday and Friday, both at 5:40 p.m. (PDT) and, if necessary, May 10, also at 5:40. Only the 1950 Syracuse Nats, 1948 Philadelphia team and the 1969 Boston Celtics (against the Lakers) won the title without having the home-court advantage.

Record holders meet at Marine Stadium

A host of world record holders will be on hand at the Long Beach Marine Stadium when the National Drag Boat Assn. holds its Western Regionals, Saturday and Sunday.

Heading the long list of boats that currently hold records in their categories are Mr. Ed, Crucifier and Jokers Wild. Mr. Ed, driven by Larry Hill of Fresno, has not been in competition this year.

Korkie Woolen scores again

Korkie Woollen, the one-time plater turned superstar, scored his third consecutive victory Saturday night at Los Alamitos in the featured $12,500 Invitational Pace.

Driven by veteran Russel Valles Key and owned by Golden West Stables, Inc., of Los Angeles, Korkie Woollen rallied out of third at the half mile pole and then held off Yankee Creed to win by one head. The eight-year-old son of Trubabe Jr. covered the mile in 2.01 1-5 and paid $5.40 straight as the 8-to-5 choice.

The victory by the meeting's "Cinderella" horse saw Korkie boost his record to seven wins in 14 starts and his 1972 earnings to $40,250.

Bramble Hall, bet down to the 3-to-2 favorite, rallied out from behind the breaking Russ Butler coming off the final turn to win the secondary featured $6,500 sixth race for pacers. Bramble Hall, owned by Richard Staley of Los Angeles, came the final half in 59 2-5 for a mile clocking of 2.01 4-5 to win by four lengths. The winner paid $5.00.

Inca Queen captures Top Flight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inca Queen, Polly Piper and Aladancer dominated the action in the $56,500 Top Flight Handicap at Aqueduct Saturday and after an exciting stretch run Inca Queen had the victory by a nose.

Polly Piper, with only two victories in her last 23 starts, made a game attempt for the lead after going into the final 1-8 mile in fifth position, far behind the leader for the entire race to that point. Aladancer, Inca Queen, second at the head of the stretch, battled the two other leaders down to the wire and just barely eked out the win over Polly Piper, with Aladancer finishing third, a neck farther back.

The triumph was the second in a row for Inca Queen, who captured the Columbian Handicap at Hialeah April 15. With her $33,900 winners share for the Top Flight, the four-year-old filly by Hail To Reason-Silver Spoon has won $80,165 in only five outings this year.

Inca Queen's time for the 1 1-8 mile distance was 1:50, far off the track record. The bettors made Sea Saga the favorite but the four-year-old filly finished fifth.

Inca Queen returned $11.00, $6.80 and $4.60. Polly Piper paid $36.60 and $15.60 and Aladanrer paid $4.20.

Wimbledon in N. Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Wimbledon" will be played at Forest Hills this year.

Of course, there will be a tournament at Wimbledon, but the prestige that the all England championships have always commanded will be overshadowed by Forest Hills, because peace in the tennis war came too late.

The contract professionals of Lamar Hunt's world championship tennis brigade cannot play on the famed centre court at Wimbledon since ratification of the truce between Hunt and the International Lawn Tennis Federation can not come about in time.

So it will be at Forest Hills that the Lavers, Rosewalls and Newcombes will tangle with the Smiths, Nastases and Kodeses for a title that will be, for this year at least, the most important in the world.

The peace pact which Hunt and Allen Heyman of the ILTF finally hammered out certainly is to the benefit of the tennis-going public. It is a relief to tennis promoters. It saves money for millionaire Hunt. It helps rival TV networks plan their coverage, and also probably salvages for CBS the sponsorship which it may have lost had Hunt's group not played at Forest Hills.

When the ILTF and Hunt were slugging it out, Hunt's contracts were lucrative, and his prize money lavish. To fight him, ILTF promoters had to come up with rich events and proper expense to hold pens away from Lamar's contracts. The players, both independent and contract, had the best of both worlds.

Now it is all changed, save for the few members of WCT whose contracts will not run out in the near future. There will be no more contracts, no guarantees, so that a player can earn only what he wins on the court, and should injury strike — isn't that too bad?

Preakness hopeful in easy score

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Bee Bee Bee, a Triple Crown nominee with definite designs on the May 20 running of the Preakness, turned in an impressive performance Saturday as he easily won the $36,700 Survivor Stakes at Pimlico.

Meeting six other Maryland-bred 3-year-olds, son of Better Bee came within three-fifths of a second of the track record for 1⅛ miles while carrying 122 pounds. He was clocked in 1:50 as veteran Eldon Nelson rode him across the finish line seven lengths in front.

Right Judex, another triple crown nominee, was second with Explodent, the favorite, only a neck back in third place. Explodent, nominted for only the Preakness, went into the Survivor with a record of three stakes triumphs this year.

H. Filion keeps busy

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Canadian harness driver Herve Filion completed a 1,500-mile venture to three race tracks in two countries Saturday by finishing fourth with Isle of Wight in the $40,000 Daniel C. Parish Pace at Liberty Bell.

Albatross, driven by Stanley Dancer, won the race in a track record time of 1:56 2-5. It was the first victory for Albatross in four tries this year against Isle of Wight and increased his lifetime earnings to $839,161, according to the latest U.S. Trotting Assn. figures.

Filion, who set records of 543 winning drives and purse winnings of $1,915,945 in 1971, started his long day in Pittsburgh, after having driven at The Meadows the previous night, and flew to Freehold, N.J., where he won two races on an afternoon card.

He then flew to Toronto, where he won with Deac Worthy at Greenwood in another of the series of the world driving championship tournament sponsored by the Harness Tracks of America. Deac Worthy paid $45.40 to win. Following this race, Filion continued on to Liberty Bell.

COUGAR ROARS—

the lead with Star Envoy getting to the front briefly on the final turn. But by then Shoemaker had Cougar rolling and brought him to the outside and that's all she wrote.

Finding the winner's circle had been a frustrating exercise for Cougar this year. He was the choice in all four of his Santa Anita starts, but the popular Chilean — he was given the loudest winner's circle ovation heard in several years Saturday — had to settle for three seconds and a third.

Asked by someone with tongue-in-cheek what brought out the cougar in his "Big Cat" Saturday, trainer Charlie Whittingham roared

"I've said all the time that Cougar hasn't been running badly all winter. He's missed the winner's circle by the narrowest of margins.

"He ran a big race today. It was one of his best. Whenever you set a record it's a big race. But he's run others just about as good.

"I agree with Shoemaker that the race broke perfectly for us. Unconscious and Star Envoy gave us a big break and Shoe took it.

"Star Envoy ran well today, considering he had just been flown in from the East. But when he was setting those records in Florida, he wasn't beating horses like he faced today in California.

"The race wasn't long enough for Practicante (note: Whittingham also trains the Argentine-bred). He just gets started at a mile and one-half and this race wasn't even that long."

Belmonte said "Unconscious ran game, but he just got beat by a good horse. He was rank turning into the stretch the first time and I was practically standing up on him trying to get him slowed down. He finally relaxed going into the backstretch.

"He ran a big race considering that he ran fast early and then hung in there while the winner was finishing in fast time."

"My horse ran all right," laughed Vasquez, "but they run a little, too fast around here. Star Envoy rated right off that other horse (Unconscious) a lot nicer than he did in the Hialeah Turf Cap, but they just went too fast for him. We got the third money anyway."

Cougar's owner, Mary F. Jones of Del Mar, said she felt Cougar's defeats this year were because of the heavy weight he was assigned. Cougar was weighted with 126 Saturday.

"I never like the weight," said Miss Jones. "I was getting discouraged at the weights he had been assigned the last several months."

Cougar's victory was worth $56,500, which upped his career earnings to $617,891. Cougar thus is the No. 1 active equine breadwinner in the United States.

That knowledge should make Miss Jones a little less discouraged this morning.

COUGAR II stayed on the rail while racing blocked on the far turn, eased out for a clear path into the stretch, rallied steadily under stern hand urging to challenge the leaders in mid-stretch and outraced UNCONSCIOUS nearing the sixteenth pole to win going away in full stride. UNCONSCIOUS went to a clear early lead, volleyed with STAR ENVOY at the mile and into the final furlong, discouraged that one while in the middle of the track then could not match strides with the winner. STAR ENVOY forced the early pace, slipped through along the rail on the backstretch to share the lead to the stretch then weakened in the closing stages. NOR II could make little headway until late. # Riva Ridge bucks Derby tradition

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Can Riva Ridge become the first top-rated horse on the Experimental Free Handicap in 22 years to win the Kentucky Derby?

The Meadow Stable color bearer, only the second colt in history to win more than half a million dollars as a 2-year-old, is favored to do just that Saturday at Churchill Downs.

With seven stakes victories in his last eight starts, the long striding son of First Landing is the probable favorite of the more than 100,000 fans who will be on hand for the 98th running of racing's most prized race.

However, more than a dozen challengers, some of them with blue chip credentials, are expected to try to burst the hopes for the blanket of roses that eluded the past 21 Free Handicap leaders.

The Experimental weights are apportioned annually to the leading 3-year-old thoroughbreds at the beginning of every season. It constitutes a type of handicapping the horses. At one time there was an actual race using the weighting system but that was discontinued.

No Le Hace, the son of Candy Spots that Joseph R. Straus picked up for $10,000 as a yearling, is undefeated this season going into his final Derby tune-up Tuesday in the one-mile Derby Trial.

THE COLT whose name in Spanish means "It Doesn't Matter", counts the Le Compte Handicap and the Louisiana and Arkansas derbies among his four triumphs this year.

Maribel Blum's Hold Your Peace, a strong contender in the winter Florida stakes, also is bound to draw some attention off his 10-length victory in the Flamingo, at 1⅛ miles just a furlong shorter than the Derby.

Hold Your Peace, bought for $26,000 as a yearling, missed by only a head when New Prospect set a track record in the Bahamas and made his move too late to finish second also in the Everglades.

Mrs. Wallace Gilroy's New Prospect, after his seven-furlong dash in 1:21 2-5 in the Bahamas, was in the Everglades, spotting the winning Head of the River 10 pounds.

Head of the River, joined just recently by the recuperated Key To The Mint as the color bearers for Paul Mellon's Rokeby Stable, also is expected in the Derby field.

KEY TO THE MINT, fourth in the Bahamas after winning the Remsen last year, developed leg troubles in an allowance race March 15 at Hialeah, but trainer Elliott Burch took him north and said the cooler weather helped him recover.

So desired is the Kentucky Derby trophy that others with less impressive records but just as big a dream will answer the call to the post Saturday.

Among these are Middleton Stable's Freetex, winner of the Gotham Mile after a poor showing in Florida; Preston Madden's Kentuckian, the hope of the West Coast; Bruno Ferrari's Puerto Rican import, Pacallo, and Forrest Lindsay's Sensitive Music, second to Riva Ridge last Thursday in the Blue Grass Stakes.

Their hopes — and those of others — are buoyed by the victories of then-unknown Canonero II last year and the upstart Dust Commander in 1970.

In fact, only five Derbies in the last 20 went to the post time favorite.

Missing from the 1972 lineup, however, will be a representative of Calumet Farms, which has a record seven victories to its credit and just last Friday was awarded first money in the contested 1968 Derby.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals held that the racing commission was correct in denying Peter Fuller's Dancer's Image the $122,600 after a forbidden drug was found in the horse's urine after the race.

The money will go, instead, to Calumet's Forward Pass, the court said.

RIVA RIDGE dominated his division last year, suffering only two defeats and finishing the season with consecutive victories in five stakes races while rolling up a $503,263 bankroll.

His defeat in the Everglades, when jockey Ron Turcotte couldn't find room over the sloppy track, interrupted his march toward stardom, but he got back on target Thursday.

With Turcotte just going along for the ride, Riva Ridge galloped to a four-length victory in the Blue Grass Stakes, which has produced seven of the past dozen Derby winners.

Hold Your Peace takes Derby prep

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Marihet Blum's Hold Your Peace coasted to an easy five-length victory Saturday in the Stepping Stone Purse at Churchill Downs, boasting his stock for next week's 98th Kentucky Derby.

With jockey Carlos Marquez dealing no punishment, Hold Your Peace took the lead from the pace-setting Brick Door at the quarter pole and drew away easily.

Combat Ready, Alaray Stable's nominee for next Saturday's $125,000-added classic, charged up for second money over the tiring Brick Door.

Fast Irishman finished fourth.

However, the rider aboard Fast Irishman claimed foul against Combat Ready and the Churchill Downs stewards disqualified the Alaray colt, placing him fourth and moving Brick Door to second and Fast Irishman to third.

Hold Your Peace, winner of the Flamingo and second in both the Bahamas and the Everglades stakes, was timed in 1:24 for the seven furlongs. This was more than two seconds slower than the race's record set three years ago when Majestic Prince used the Stepping Stone to vault to a Derby victory a week later.

Two non-eligibles for the Derby, Snow Cat and Brick Door, went to the lead early in the Stepping Stone while Marquez held Hold Your Peace just off the leaders and out of any possible danger.

He began his move with half a mile to go and was in front of the stubborn Brick Door at the quarter pole.

Behind Fast Irishman, in order were U Pos Ent, Three Nine Farm's Kentucky Derby hopeful; Pacello, recently-purchased in Puerto Rico by Bruno Ferrari for a Derby try; Amber Prey and Snow Cat.

'Rozelle Rule' faces court challenge

Monday 'freedom day' in NFL--or is it?

MUNSON KILMER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Barring a last-minute rash of signings this weekend, there will be about 30 National Football League players who will become free agents on Monday because they haven't signed their 1971 contracts.

But the question of just how "free" the free agents are may lead to another sports court battle.

Edward Garvey, the executive director of the NFL Players Association, says the NFLPA is considering filing a "class action" in federal district court to challenge the so-called "Rozelle Rule."

Although the number of players who are playing out their option has increased this year, Garvey says, "Playing out your option has become an empty threat because no other team will sign a player until some kind of lead is worked out."

If a suit is filed by the NFLPA, it will leave the NFL defending its current contract system on two fronts. Joe Kapp has filed a multimillion dollar anti-trust suit against the league, claiming he was forced out of pro football because he refused to sign a standard player contract.

A combination of a tough bargaining position by the owners and the wage freeze last August has resulted in the high number of players who haven't signed. Last year, for example, only nine players played out their options and five players wound up signing for their old clubs.

"Rozelle would like everyone to believe that the wage freeze is the sole reason for all this," Garvey says, "but there were about 150 unsigned players in training camps last July before the wage freeze started and there are normally only about 50."

He adds, "Many of the owners seemed to think the players didn't deserve much of a raise because of the gains we made in the pension plan in collective bargaining in 1970. Actually, salaries have remained somewhat constant since 1968."

Garvey says there were about 75 players still unsigned before the owners meeting in Hawaii in March. "But since then the owners have really been putting a lot of pressure on the players to sign," he says. "Obviously, they didn't spend all that time in Honolulu talking about the hash marks. They wanted to cut down on the number of free agents."

Two players who played out their option, Gary Cuozzo of Minnesota and Fred Dryer of New England, were traded this week and Cuozzo signed with his new club Saturday. Cuozzo went to St. Louis while Dryer, who was originally traded from the Giants to the Patriots but wanted to play on a winning club, got his wish when he was dealt to the Rams.

Some players who haven't signed, like Mac-Arthur Lane of Green Bay, were traded earlier in the off-season and also are expected to sign with their new clubs.

Although some clubs, like Green Bay, won't list the names of their unsigned players, the majority of teams do. Among the players reported as unsigned are Gene Washington, John Henderson, Bob Brown, Charlie West, Nate Wright and Al Denson of Minnesota; Mike McGill, Rolf Krueger and Joe O'Donnell of St. Louis; George Seals, Jack Concannon, Dick Gordon and Jimmy Gunn of Chicago; Jethro Pugh of Dallas; Jack Gregory of Cleveland; Larry Walton and Bill Munson of Detroit; John Williams and Charlie Stukes of Baltimore; Doug Van Horn of the Giants; Alvin Reed, John Charles and Pat Holmes of Houston; George Nock of the Jets; Russ Washington and Bob Bruggers of San Diego, and Bill Kilmer of Washington.

Of those players, the only two who are a cinch not to sign with their old clubs are Gordon and Munson. Gordon, currently serving a 15-day jail sentence for failing to file income tax, has had his differences with Bear management. Munson wants a chance to start and has been critical of Detroit head coach Joe Schmidt.

Under the provisions of the so-called "Rozelle Rule," the commissioner can intervene when two clubs cannot agree on terms for the signing of a free agent. For example, when New Orleans signed Dave Parks in 1967, Rozelle awarded San Francisco the Saints' No. 1 draft choice and Kevin Hardy.

Because Rozelle's compensation is usually so stiff, clubs have become reluctant to sign a free agent unless they can first make a deal with his old team. The players insist this means the players aren't really free agents.

What it all adds up to is more court action for pro football. But since the Curt Flood case has been in the courts 2½ years, don't expect any quick results.

Ali says he'll drop Chuvalo

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — Muhammad Ali rips uppercuts at his sparring partners because he feels those punches on Monday night can knock Canada's George Chuvalo off his feet for the first time ever.

The former heavyweight boxing champion, favored to win, continues a busy campaign and looks in top shape for the 12-rounder at the Pacific Coliseum against the durable Canadian.

Chuvalo went the full 15 rounds in a losing title match against Ali on March 29, 1966, and vows this time he can win because "he's lost a lot of speed."

Ali readily admits he has put more emphasis than ever on uppercuts because, "I'm getting ready for Chuvalo. He comes in low all the time, and I'm aiming to knock him down."

The ex-champ, gunning for a return match against heavyweight king Joe Frazier, termed Chuvalo "the dirtiest fighter I've ever faced. He hit me low so many times."

Then, on a second thought, Ali added, "I think a lot of those punches were unintentional. His arms are short and he comes in low with hooking shots. He even hits his sparring partners low and that can't be intentional."

On April 1, Ali outpointed Mac Foster of Los Angeles in Tokyo, Japan, so this Canadian bout makes it two fights in a month and Ali also has a date in June against Jerry Quarry. For Foster, the ex-champ weighed 226 pounds, but this time he plans to come into the ring at a trimmer 215.

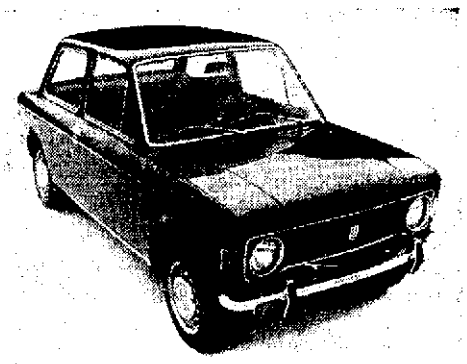

Working against sparring partners Vernon McIntosh of Miami, Fla., and Charlie James of Los Angeles, Ali showed none of the midriff bulge he carried in Tokyo.

"I just haven't stopped training," he declared. "I knew I was too heavy in Japan. Now I am in better shape. When I fight Frazier again, it should draw as much attention as this last moon trip. For something that great, I want to be ready."

Ali has been guaranteed $200,000 and Chuvalo $65,000 for their second meeting.

The Pacific Coliseum, which seats 17,000, was scaled for a gross of $466,000 ranging from a top of $100 down to $10 seats.

THE CAR THAT WON MORE EUROPEAN CAR OF THE YEAR AWARDS THAN ANY OTHER CAR HAS JUST BEEN ELECTED AMERICA'S ECONOMY CAR OF THE YEAR.

Not surprisingly, many American car buyers are confused these days as to which small economy car is best. After all, the small car is a fairly recent arrival to these shores. And there are a lot of different kinds.

So we thought you should know that some gentlemen who've made comparing small cars their business, the experts at Motor Trend Magazine, have just elected the Fiat 128 "Economy Car of the Year."

This, mind you, is on top of an unprecedented number of honors that include "Car of the Year" awards in Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Great Britain, Holland and Sweden, plus the Italian "Body work of the Year" award and the German "Oscar of the Automobile."

And when you consider what the Fiat 128 offers you that most small cars don't—such as front wheel drive for superior handling and traction, self-adjusting front disc brakes, the same kind of steering found on Porsches and Jaguars, standard radial tires, more people room than an Olds Cutlass, and a price tag of just $1,992—the logic behind this accolade is not hard to follow. (This is the manufacturer's suggested retail price POE West Coast. Of course, transportation, state and local taxes, optional equipment and dealer preparation charges, if any, are additional, as with any other new automobile.)

The Fiat 128. Available in 2-door, 4-door and station wagon models.

If you're considering an economy car this year, why not consider the economy car of the year?

The Fiat 128 2-door sedan. $1,992.

Crowley crowded on opening day

JUNE LAKE - California's general trout season in this area produced some unusual incidents such as the second largest brown trout ever taken out of Crowley Lake, also a record crowd for Crowley and also a possible record number of trout caught although not in weight.

Dan Majuta, Bakersfield landscape architect, walked around to Aligator Point on Lake Crowley at 5 a.m. Saturday, picked out a spot, sat down bundled up in his heavy clothes, baited a big hook with night crawlers and threw it out.

Within just a few minutes his reel began to sing, the line went out 80 yards and he started to fight with a trout that lasted 25 minutes. He landed successfully and took it to a weighing station where it tipped the scales at 15 pounds, 12 ounces. It was the first time he had ever fished Crowley and the big brown was the only fish he had caught this year.

As for the Crowley crowds, 10,270 persons fished there Saturday plus 1,926 boats from shore. In 1971, 16,000 fished and 1,800 were in boats. Shore anglers Saturday totaled 3,150. The temperature at dawn was 38 degrees with a slight wind. The mercury rose to 70 at noon and so did the wind, driving most of the boats off the lake. Water temperature was a cool 50 degrees.

Warren Bahm, general manager of Crowley for the L.A. Dept. of Parks and Recreation, which operates the lake, estimated the average take of fish per angler was five which would have made a total of 51,350 fish. However, the fish only weighed about 10-12 ounces as compared with the usual one-pounders. Bahm said that the anglers took 16 tons of trout out of Crowley on the opening day.

The Bishop chamber of commerce estimated that 40,000 visitors from Southern California came through Saturday enroute to Crowley and various streams in Inyo and Mono counties. Weather everywhere was bright, clear but so breezy by noon that most boaters sought the shelter of docks or the beaches.

OTHER HIGHLIGHTS of the opening day —

Some weight claims of Kamloops trout were taken in the West Walker River. Kee McKay, Dennis Johns, Lee Griffin, Jim Proffitt, all of Orange County, were among those taking limits on the West Walker.

Several limits of browns were taken at Bridgeport Reservoir on Fishback lures. Largest was a four pound, four once fish. Shore anglers did better than the boaters.

Twin Lakes (Bridgeport) and Luudy Lake were good for planted trout plus some brood stock rainbows, ranging to 4½ pounds. On the June Lake Loop, where we are staying, Grant Lake was good for limits of browns with the largest weighing four pounds. Silver, Bull and Junes lakes were especially good for the shore anglers.

Convict Lake had light pressure with a 20-inch rainbow the largest reported, but boaters were driven off early in the day by wind. Bishop Creek was the hot spot for stream anglers with mostly planted trout and some large brood stock rainbows.

ALMOST EVERYBODY HAS SEEN SOME kind of a county fair, but there are many millions in this country who have never seen such a sight as Bishop produces at its Rainbow Day Trout Derby in the City Park.

So it went Saturday night when people from all walks of life and from miles around, plus the visiting fishermen from Southern California, paraded past the tables on which were displayed the outstanding catches of the day.

It was the 52nd annual derby for Bishop, and the fish displays were not confined to just rainbow trout, even those predominated. There were limit catches of browns, eastern brook and some goldens. Somebody always produces a limit of golden trout from a high lake even though he might have to travel there on snowshoes and break ice to wet a line.

Usually the goldens are small. I have never seen a large golden displayed at the annual derby. In fact, I have never seen a live golden of great size except once when the late Nyle Smith, a guide for many years in the Mammoth area, and I broke ice on Crystal Crag Lake in the Mammoth Chain.

Nyle caught it and played it for several minutes while it jumped and finally threw the hook. Sportsman that he was, Nyle didn't even swear. He just smiled and said: "A fighting golden like that deserves to go free." I know that that beautiful golden must have weighed two or three pounds.

DIFFICULT THOUGH IT IS to collect information from Northern California and from the other side of the Sierra Nevada, we have tried to run down some opening weekend information. It must be remembered that many lakes and reservoirs on the western slope of the Sierras and in Northern California now are open to year-around fishing. That, in a way, explains the rush to Inyo and Mono Counties.

In Northern California, Eagle Lake has been producing some of those big rainbow hybirds that run to eight pounds. In Modoc County, Duncan and James Reservoirs, higher than Eagle, are top prospects. Reservoir F also is regarded as a great producer.

Stampeded Lake, near Truckee, has been producing some 12-to-14-inch 'bows, even for the shore anglers who dunk worms and eggs. Prosser Lake is a real sleeper with some big browns in it. Davis Lake, near Portola, is good for trout ranging from 10 to 16 inches. Frenchman Reservoir, near Chilcoot, and Donner Lake, near Truckee, are good bets.

It is advisable for all fishermen to carry the California Sportfishing Regulations pamphlet because there are certain restrictions. For instance, the limit in Davis Lake is five, not 10, trout and anglers should know that before going there. In Eagle Lake, the limit is three trout because of their size.

Rosie Beard, pitching star of the Queen and Her Maids, another successful touring team, will give a pitching exhibition prior to the game.

HEY KIDS! A CHANCE TO BE DODGER BATBOY

How would you like to be the Dodger Batboy for a day.

It's easy. You may be the lucky one to be on the field with the Dodgers when they host the surprising Houston Astros on Sunday, May 21.

Contest rules are simple but they must be followed.

Write a letter in 50 words or less telling us why you would be like to be Dodger batboy for a day. All boys between the ages of nine and 14 are eligible. Letters will be judged on the basis of sincerity and originality.

Address your letter to Batboy Contest, Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram c/o Sports Dept., 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 90801. All improperly addressed letters will be disqualified.

The winner will receive a Dodger uniform which will be his to keep and the family will get four box seat tickets to watch him in action.

He will get to meet and talk with his favorite Dodger and will be given an official league baseball autographed by the team. The four runners-up will each get a pair of tickets to the game.

All entries must be in this office by Friday, May 12 at 6 p.m. Include address and phone number in your letter, but please do not send photos.

Stanley Cup finals --'a rugged battle'

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Bruins host the New York Rangers here today in the opening game of their best-of-seven series for the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup championship and both clubs are predicting a long and rugged battle.

Today's game (Channel 2, 11 a.m.) marks the eighth time the Bruins and Rangers — the two oldest U.S. entries in the NHL — will meet in playoff competition, but only their second appearance together in the championship round.

Coach Tom Johnson of the Bruins expects his club's five successive victories over the Rangers in regular-season play this year will have "no bearing on the outcome of the playoffs. This is a new season."

Ranger coach Emile (The Cat) Francis said he expects the New York-Boston meeting will provide "the best Stanley Cup series in a long time. Both these clubs are ready. The Bruins are the best hockey club in the league in terms of talent."

The two clubs have approached the title series in different ways with Francis closing some of his practice sessions to the press while Johnson left his open.

"Let them close their workouts," Johnson said "I understand they even put blinds up. But what can you change after 88 games? We're just doing what we did all season. There's nothing new."

Johnson expects the series will go seven games or close to it.

"New York has more confidence now than they did during the season," the Boston coach said. "They beat Montreal and they beat Chicago. But we have a good club, too."

The key to the series could be held by two players who have seen little action of late.

For New York, high-scoring Jean Ratelle will be back in the lineup for the first time since March 1 when he broke a bone above his right ankle. He returned to practice only last Tuesday and had some soreness in the ankle, but reported toward week's end that it was clearing up.

Ratelle had 46 goals and a team record of 109 points this year, despite missing the last month of the season. Francis pronounced him fit and ready and "looking very good."

Center Derek Sanderson will be back in uniform for the Bruins after missing the semifinal series against St. Louis because of a combination of colitis and a virus.

Sanderson rejoined the team in practice Thursday, but he's 10 pounds lighter and was obviously off in his timing. Johnson said Sanderson would play today, though he might not center his regular line.

RAMS' FILM AVAILABLE FREE AT L. P-T

The Rams and Tommy Prothro didn't invent the "big play," but the new coach's philosophy gave the club a different and exciting approach in 1971.

Featured in the '71 Rams highlights film, available free to groups through the Independent, Press-Telegram promotion department, are Willie Ellison's NFL record 247 yards against New Orleans, Roman Gabriel's 11 consecutive pass completions against Detroit, defensive end Coy Bacon's fierce rushes and Lance Rentzel's end-around sprints.

Even fake field goals and onside kicks — an emphasis on the unexpected.

The 16mm. color film runs 30 minutes, with sound narration.

TAG-TEAM CLASH TOPS AUD WRESTLING CARD

Monday night's wrestling show at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium will feature a tag team main event between Billy Graham-Mister Wrestling and Black Gordman-Raul Mata.

War Eagle and Kubla Khan will clash in the two-out-of-three-fall, 45-minute time limit semiwindup.

The program will start at 8:30 p.m. as will all programs for the duration of daylight saving time.

EARL WILSON'S BROADWAY

Phil Silvers tells why he quit gambling

NEW YORK — "I'm a compulsive gambler but I gave up gambling in Las Vegas to gamble on Broadway and I promise you, this time I'm gonna win . . ."

Phil Silvers, of the bald head, the glasses, the surprised look, and the Sgt. Bilko fame that's spread around the world, was having cannelloni in Sardi's at 11 p.m. He wasn't overjoyed about discussing gambling; it's a black chapter in his life.

"All life's a gamble. I see nothing wrong with gambling. But I'd be a millioniare if I hadn't gambled. I'm off of it now. Do you know why? Fright! I never had fright before. I'd betcha anything. No more. I play a little pinochle at the Friars. I might bet $50 on the Kentucky Derby. But that's nothing to the way I used to be."

"What was the most you ever won and lost?" I asked

"I wouldn't tell you. It would sicken me to think how stupid I was," he said.

He's crap-shooting now with "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," a hilarious musical hampered by the fact that it's a revival. But its superb reviews and the word-of-mouth praise are the things Phil has riding with him as he throws the dice every week with this show.

"IN LOS ANGELES we opened the show doing $55,000 for the week and closed doing $91,000. We'll do the same here." He gave me that gambler's stony look of confidence.

"Why did you quit gambling?"

"Let me try to think. There was an enforced discontinuance. My eye operation, my divorce . . . and then I went to Las Vegas about four years ago and I said, 'I'm going to lose whatever I got in my pocket and then I'm quitting.' I couldn't wait to lose those few bucks and get the hell out.

"It was $400 but I used to bet $400 on a number. They say gambling is a sex substitute. How am I going to explain my five kids"

"You haven't been back to Vegas?"

"No reason to. Let's get off this silly subject"

Phil's tremendous laugh-getting in "Forum" got him a Tony nomination, which news he conveyed to his daughters by long distance. "They screamed 'Wow' and I promise you they have no idea what a Tony is. They know Milton Berle and Jackie Gleason but they don't have much idea what I am.

"I USED TO make them a drawing, a man smiling, that was a 'Daddy,' a woman smiling, that was a 'Mommy.' One day I was taking them to school and some children stopped me for autographs. One of them said, 'Look, he's making them a 'Mommy'

"I gave up gambling, now I'm trying to beat smoking," Phil said. "I have one after breakfast, one before bed, and sometimes I sneak one . . . And I have a recurrent dream of not showing up for the show one night. I'm going to be there every night. I wouldn't want them to find out they could do the show without me."

The Weekend Windup . .

Latest personality to sponsor a golf tourney (like Bing Crosby, Dean Martin, Bob Hope, etc.) is Jilly Rizzo. (Palm Springs, April 30 . . . Berdji Abadjian, holding a "Rugs As Art" auction at the Delmonico, says he will offer "every kind of rug except George Jessel's toupee" . . . Nick Manero sold his Rochelle Park (NJ) restaurant for $1,100,000 . . . Geraldine Palmer's up for a role in "The Heartbreak Kid"—and so are her two children.

The forthcoming MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas'll have a big casino—plus a "beginners' casino" where instructors'll explain how to gamble . . . A new mini-theater in Norwalk, Conn., will be named for the late Horace McMahon, a native son . . . Actor Michael Tolan turned down a continuing role on the Mary Tyler Moore TVer.

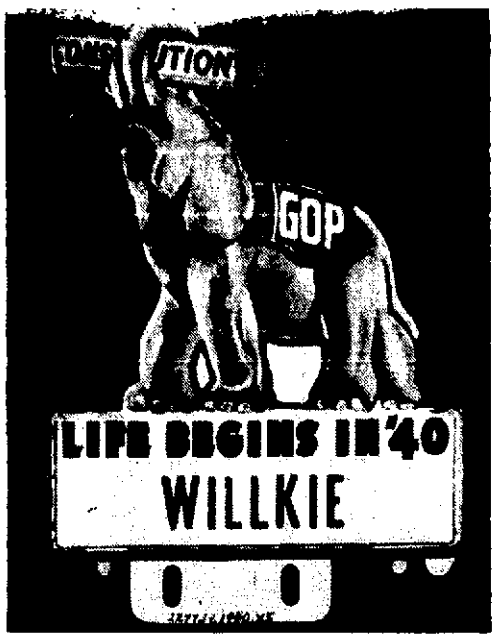

Eddy Arnold'll do one-man concerts in theaters-in-the-round this summer . . . Imogene Coca and husband King Donovan'll do summer stock together in "The Fourposter" . . . Famed artist Norman Rockwell will coach the late Nat (King) Cole's son Kelly, a promising painter . . . A London model agency is called "Blondes"—and supplies only blonde models.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Soupy Sales insists he heard this H'wood producerism: "The dozen people you can trust out here, you can count on the fingers of one hand."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Jackie Kannon described a boring actor: "His idea of changing the subject is going from talk of his last movie to talk of his next movie."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "After slaving the whole year, all that some men have to show for it is a used-up calendar."

EARL'S PEARLS: In some Latin American countries being president is a temporary position, sort of like being a husband in Hollywood.

CAMPAIGN 1940

This campaign emblem was used by Republican Wendell Willkie during his campaign for the presidency in 1940. Willkie lost and Franklin Roosevelt was reelected for a third term. An exhibit of more than 80 portraits and 600 items of campaign memorabilia including the Willkie emblem opens next Wednesday at the National Portrait Gallery in Washington.

Sex-film debate goes on but judge has his say

Attorneys in Orange County, who noted Law Day with an elaborate luncheon Friday, argued among themselves over whether a subpoena naming District Attorney Cecil Hicks means he has to appear in court.

Their differences of opinion may be moot, however, because Santa Ana Superior Court Judge Robert L. Corfman ruled that Hicks must show up in court May 11.

On that day, Kenneth and Nancy Loar of Huntington Beach will plead for return of 22,500 reels of stag-type movies and 300,000 sex-oriented pictures which Hicks and Police Chief Walter Scott of Westminster claims are pornographic.

The Loars had been acquitted a month ago of conspiracy to distribute the allegedly-obscene pictures; a jury of six men and six women returned the innocent verdicts to Judge Corfman after viewing several movies.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

FORECAST FOR MONDAY

Your birthday today: Promises stronger self-expression. You achieve more space for yourself, perhaps higher income. Social contacts are inclined to become less important and less demanding this year. Today's natives usually go out of their way to meet the needs of others and expect something similar in return.

Aires (March 21-April 19): You may see an opening for a future advance. If so, start planning now. Tact and tolerance must also run along thru the day.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Interruptions and distractions are quite normal at the moment. Pause here and there and let intuition show you the way.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): If you're married, it's a lively, exciting time; if single, you may not be pleased with the sudden jolts you're likely to get.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): This is strictly a do-it-yourself day, and in some unaccustomed manner at that. Romantic urges find you alive.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid needless disagreements as you pursue original and sentimental ventures. Take time to think before you move, see your reward immediately.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Public discussion of finances is the last thing to do now—so don't. Family affairs need careful consideration without delay.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Those who care about you oppose you from time to time for the experience. Offers accepted without much thought backfire later.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There are no short-cuts open. You'll subsequently be proud of your diligence and the checking up required in today's chores.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Realize that you do sometimes get on people's nerves, like today, and do something to give them a breathing spell.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home needs practically all of your attention. You can momentarily postpone or neglect more distant places and people.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Week's opening includes suggestions of binding contracts. Stall long enough to think things over and examine the implications.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Where you have clear responsibility, use it firmly; where you don't, stay out of it completely. There will be a later opportunity to intervene.

Sing along with 1,473 soda cans

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — A device made of 1,473 pop cans has been built into a musical instrument by four college students who say the result is "sort of like a calliope."

The sound comes from wind pumped through pipes, 36 of them, from five inches to more than four feet high.

An accumulation of soft drink cans in lounges at Macalester College inspired the project.

GAMING TEACHER

Show doll also long on brains

By MYRAM BORDERS

LAS VEGAS (UPI) —Statuesque showgirl Kathy Saxe is not only one of the most beautiful women in this city of beautiful women, she has a sure system for not losing your money at the Las Vegas gaming tables.

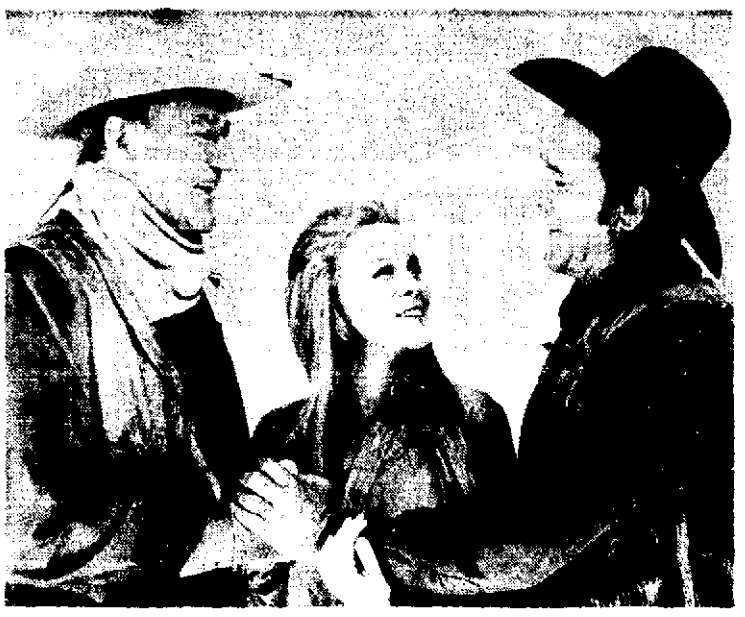

It's a simple one: "When you gamble use someone else's money."

Miss Saxe graces the stage at the Stardust Hotel twice nightly in the "Lido de Paris" show but between times she moonlights as a gambling instructor. The idea came to her, she says, "when I began to realize that many of the people who come to Las Vegas are completely in the dark when it comes to the various casino games."

She made a study of them all, from craps to roulette, and then told the Stardust's sales department she would be available to give instructions to groups visiting the hotel. Sales director Mark Swain thought it was "a gag, a publicity stunt," but also that it was a good idea.

The first time Miss Saxe was assigned to explain the ins and outs of the casino games, a veteran casino executive stood by ready to take over after she had got her laughs. An hour later the standby man was relieved and, Miss Saxe said, "I had my new career."

Most of the questions she is asked are basic ones — how much does a number pay, "How much will I collect if 13 hits on roulette," what is a hard-way bet, and so on.

Jackie Cooper directs film

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jackie Cooper's saga of 40 years from "Skippy" to skipper of his own movie, is the first to span four decades from child star to directing his first feature film.

Among the most winning of child stars, Cooper has endured the movie-television mill without severe trauma.

His once blond hair is darker now and flecked with gray. His voice is deep, his shoulders broad. But there remains that configuration of his mouth giving him a permanent pout.

Jackie is smart. He's rich. He's been married three times and is now the father of Russ, 16, and two daughters, Julie, 14, and Cris, 13. His Beverly Hills address is prestigious.

Although he has directed many a television show, he has finally climbed his own mountain of ambition: directing a feature film.

It's titled "Stand Up and Be Counted," the first movie based on the women's lib movement.

Lest anyone think it's a shallow spoof of masculine females howling for equal rights, Cooper quickly explains the picture's content.

"WOMEN'S LIB is just the tapestry behind the story of four different couples," he said. "It sends men out of the theater feeling the men have come off well, but aware of the feminist movement.

"Women who have seen the picture feel their husbands ought to experience some guilt, or at least have learned something."

Cooper is not altogether objective about his film.

He is an ardent feminist, raised by his mother and grandmother. Jackie is female oriented.

"My picture is mostly a comedy based on very real people. It has its poignant moments, too. But I didn't make a funny little picture demeaning women's lib. Nobody would go to see that.

"But it is inevitable that women aren't going to continue their way of life anymore than the slaves of 200 years ago were content with their lot."

Cooper's words would fall like sleet on the ears of his old comrade in movies, the late Wallace Beery.

Sons of Italy plan birth defects drive

A campaign to raise funds to support research into birth defects will be held May 8 to 14 by the Long Beach lodge, Order Sons of Italy in America.

The campaign is an annual function of the order, and lodge venerable Mario Saragnano pointed out that "there are about 250,000 children born with birth defects every year in the United States.

"We need the support of everyone in the community if we are going to make a significant effort to combat this child health threat."

Lodge campaign chairman S. J. Laspesa said the national campaign proceeds will go to the 100 birth defects centers supported by the March of Dimes for research treatment and teaching.

The national fraternity was founded in New York in 1905 to help Italian immigrants become Americans. Today's membership is composed mainly of second and third generation Italian-Americans.

The campaign, which coincides with March of Dimes Healthy Baby Week, will include "tag days" sales at street intersections. Saganano noted that containers for coins and currency will be labeled "National Charity Project of the Order Sons of Italy in America — tso fight birth defects."

Carlson Festival is feast of arts, East and West

SUSHI INGREDIENTS rest on ti leaves atop a bed of crushed ice, decorated with parsley. As chef Yuki rolls a sushi, he and Masaki Kobayashi, general manager of the Horikawa Restaurant, Los Angeles, discuss arrangements for a sushi bar at Carlson Festival.

Two men who will make contributions to the first Carlson Festival, to be held Friday, Saturday and next Sunday at California State College, Long Beach, visited the campus this week.

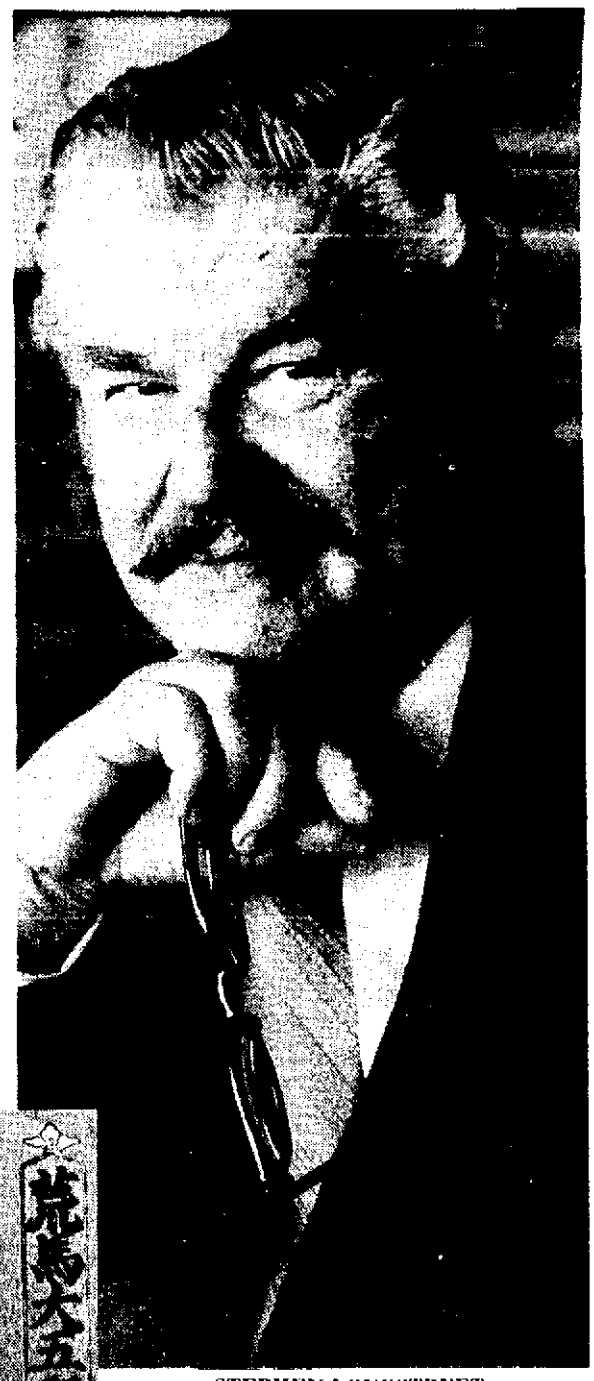

They are Stephen Longstreet, who will lend his matchless collection of Japanese prints for display, and Masaki Kobayashi, general manager of the Horikawa Restaurant in Los Angeles.

This is the first time that gastronomy has been an important part of an arts festival. It is Kobayashi who will supervise the preparation and serving of Japanese food.

Because this is an East-West, Cross-Cultural festival, it will salute Sweden as well as Japan. Representing the culinary arts of Sweden will be Kenneth Hansen of Scandia Restaurant, Los Angeles, under whose direction Swedish refreshments and a smorgasbord will be offered.

The festival is, indeed, a feast of rich fare. Cinema, music, drama, art, poetry, literature and dance will be generously spread through the three days.

As he inspected Gallery C, where his collection will be shown and where he will preside at a panel discussion of graphic arts next Sunday at 5 p.m., Longstreet spoke of his Japanese prints.

STEPHEN LONGSTREET

"CHAMPION," JAPANESE print done by Yoshitora in 1860, is in Stephen Longstreet's collection that will be shown during festival. The wrestlers, deliberately overfed to achieve their huge size, rarely lived beyond the age of 30.

"I FIRST BECAME interested in this art form when I was a young, beginning painter in Paris. I discovered how Japanese prints so greatly influenced Gaugin, Toulouse-Lautrec, Whistler, Cezanne.

"So I began buying prints – they were very inexpensive then, perhaps $20. The Japanese originally disdained the prints, considering them cheap folk art, but European artists recognized their value and bought them. Some I now own first belonged to Toulouse-Lautrec and Frank Lloyd Wright."

For more than 20 years, Longstreet added to his prints, then, suddenly they were recognized as valid, exquisite art.

"What happened then was ridiculous – the price skyrocketed. Prints that

She offers on-the-spot buying tips

By JOANNE NORRIS

Supermarkets are everyday kinds of places where everybody feels at home.

Or are they?

To some residents of the central city – especially to the very young who frequently are sent to do the shopping -- supermarkets can be aisles of confusion.

Because even in these days of consumer education there are people who don't know how to read the label on a can.

Is the product vacuum packed when they want water? Does it contain sugar when they need something sugar-free? Is it the size they need to most economically feed their families?

These questions and a host of others – some far afield from shopping matters – are being answered by two women at a downtown Safeway store. It's a new program to bring instruction in consumer affairs right to the customer.

Patterned after a program devised by the Hunt-Wesson Co., the right-on-the-spot instructional project was suggested last fall by the local chapter of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

THE NAACP approached the management of the Safeway store at Anaheim Street and Atlantic Avenue because it's in an area where consumer education is sorely needed.

The group talked to Safeway public relations official, Elton Hill, in Downey and the chain took the matter under advisement. The upshot was the hiring last February of Mrs. Susie Ellis, nutritionist for the Long Beach Head Start program, and Mrs. Ruby Dotson of the state Agricultural Extension Service.

On four afternoons a week – Mrs. Ellis on Wednesdays and Fridays and Mrs. Dotson on Tuesdays and Thursdays – the women man a booth at the store from 3 to 7.

Their job is to serve as a liaison between customer and store, answering questions, solving problems and teaching buyers how to shop.

"ONE OF OUR biggest problems is children," said Mrs. Ellis. "You'd be surprised how many children are sent to shop with a little list."

Frequently the youngsters don't know where to find what they've been sent to get and are puzzled about brands and sizes.

"Sometimes they are a few cents short," Mrs. Ellis continued. "Instead of their having to put the stuff back, I keep it at the booth

Tasting and touring popular

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

The amount of wine consumed in Long Beach on Thursday evening was staggering.

More than 1,000 wine tasters toured the Queen Mary Museum and Jacques Cousteau's Living Sea at the invitation of Nightingales, and Gay McKernie and Vera Dunnigan, co-chairmen of the party.

Over at the Art Museum 200 sippers attended the tenth annual April Wine Festival benefiting March of Dimes.

Among those strolling the grounds on a balmy night were Frank and Donna George, Bud and Doris Minor, Jim and June Dougherty, Martin and Doris Horn, the Bob Mulveys, Barbara Dean, Claude and Helen Wright, Mike and Lynne Driscoll, Rear Adm. Ned Sprow (USCG, ret.) chairman of the board for March of Dimes, Harry and Alice Aggers, Art and Pat Kempster, Ray and Wanda Berbower, Frank and Dorothy Marshall, Walter and Roxanne Oliver and Jasper and Marian Nutter.

Seventy of the group adjourned to Bill and Jean Ingham's home in Huntington Beach for buffet dinner. Jean is the sister of MOD executive director, Virginia Bohan.

Meanwhile, back at the Queen, President Nancy Frank, with Ron, welcomed guests in an appropriate red, white and blue sailor dress.

President-elect Gerry Eldred was there with Gary, also Dr. Dick and Nancy Daniels, Bob and Mary Alice Braly, Dr. Gainer and Lynn Pillsbury, Dr. Phil and Jane Wright, Ron and Marcel Omohundro, Jim and Marilyn Perona and Dr. Matt and Sharon Sloan.

In the crowd were five million (well, it seemed that many) smiling candidates for political office who shall remain nameless since Bob Houser takes care of those names in HIS column.

Others were Jack and Ruth Weiblen, Al and Kay Cruchley, Ed and Patti Twining, Glen and Walli Richardson. (She is a caligraphy expert and did the beautiful name tags.)

SPEAKING OF HARRIED hostesses . . .

Karen Williams plotted a surprise birthday party for her dad, Wally Smith.

She and husband, John, (as is typical of most everyone I know) decided to do some redecorating in advance of the event.

Naturally, the wallpaper came in late and it was the wrong pattern.

So they waited and waited. Finally the paper was hung on Friday evening before the Saturday party.

That wasn't cutting it close enough.

The clean-up crew (to help put the house in shape) didn't show up until 9 a.m. on Saturday and the party started at 2 p.m.

Of course they made it.

Karen greeted guests looking as cool and serene as if she had spent the morning in a bubble bath.

Wally walked in with wife, Vi, to the surprise party and was double surprised to see his other two daughters, Kristi and Kerri, who came from Tucson, Ariz. for the festivities.

Don and Linda Dyer made a hit with their gift of a Frasier the Sensuous Lion T-shirt which Wally promptly modeled for such as Larry and Carol Burnight, Don and Charleen Swanson, Nadine Lull, Roy and Julie Halsey, Dr. Walt and Barbara Havekorst, Jim and Linda Armor, Scott and Diane Jones, Gordon and Marion Nickle and Mike Boland.

Among others were Tom and Lynn Hermstad, Les and Sharon Stewart, Jim and Susan Chalker, Jack and Kathy Bransford and Gerry and Jody Barber.

AND ANOTHER one . . .

Eva Miner almost missed her own cocktail party.

She, husband Dr. Mark, and Ted and Marge Miller planned to co-host a pre "Long Beach Symphony Guild Moonlight Cruise and Dinner Dance" party, at the Miners' home.

The Miners discovered it was the same day as the dental convention in Anaheim where Mark was attending meetings and Eva was modeling in a fashion show.

Their youngsters took over in the absence of parents and did flowers and finishing touches while co-hostess, Marge, shuttled between her home on Bayshore and the Miners' in Belmont Heights, with hors d'oeuvres.

They sent Tedd off to Century City for specially ordered fresh flower leis.

He returned at the same time the first guests started arriving.

Among them were Dr. Ralph and Jan Simonian, George and Rae Shaw, Ed and Marilyn Henriques, Rolly and Diane Coltrane, Dr. Bob and Jean Tyndall, Don and Shirley Coscarelli, Symphony manager Topper Smith, Maestro Alberto Bolet and Rosita, Dr. Bob and Betty Frankenfeld and Leo and Lois Greene.

Eva made it in time to join the guests briefly. Mark was so late he walked in the door and asked them why they had not already gone on to the ship.

Fortunately the S.S. Princess didn't sail without them.

Put on your convalescent list Carol Slosson and Joyce Sarver.

Carol is up and about after surgery but Joyce is taking a bit longer since she had tricky-type back surgery.

Recovering nicely from ten days of fun and sun (and some marine surveying business) are Roby and May Bessent.

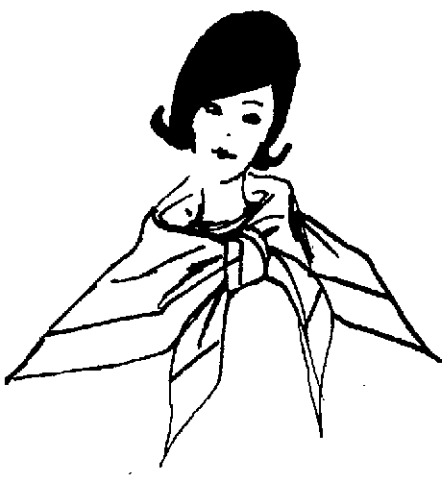

They divided their time between the El Camino Real hotel overlooking Lake Chapala (near Guadalajara) and stay at the home of part-time Long Beachers, Don and Flo Huseman in Sayalita, which is a little village about 20 miles from Puerto Vallarta.

Some buyers can't read food labels

and tell them to go ask Momma for the few cents they need. That saves them a lot of trouble.

Mrs. Ellis said one elderly man who couldn't read bought a can of sweet potatoes, marked "vacuum packed." When he got home and found there was no water in it, he brought it back to the store and wanted his money back.

"I paid for the can myself," said Mrs. Ellis. Then I explained to the store why he had made this mistake.

The women have attempted to dispel some of the myths they claim were making the rounds about the market.

"FOR INSTANCE," Mrs. Ellis said, "many people believe that prices are higher in the ghetto, but I went to the central warehouse where pricing is done and found out that all the prices, at least for Safeway, are marked the same.

"There is another belief that old produce is taken from stores in other areas and brought to stores in the central area. I found out this isn't so."

Residents in the area near the store griped about a fence around the market and the store responded by taking it down. Its removal, claimed Mrs. Ellis, resulted in reduction of the number of shopping carts kept outside the store from more than 100 to about 40.

"People complain about the long wait in the check-out lines and I have told them that if one of the box boys didn't have to stay outside to watch the carts, he could work inside and the whole thing would go faster."

People approach Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Dotson with questions ranging from "Where can I find a place to live?" to queries about the availability of legal assistance.

The questions put to Mrs. Ellis most frequently, she said, are why is she there and who pays her.

"THEY ARE quick to think you're not for them, just for the store, that maybe I'm some kind of policeman. But I explain I am there to answer questions, to help them."

Mrs. Ellis said she observed the erratic buying habits of the elderly and devised menus for them which are nutritionally sound but low cost. She makes them available free and has others for children. Cost of the meals ranges from 18 to 46 cents each.

She invites anyone interested to come to her office at the Community Improvement League at 615 E. 10th St. where she will help work out budgets.

A former dietitian and home economics teacher in New York, Mrs. Ellis now heads the Head Start nutrition center which feeds about 600 children a day.

She also teaches consumer education in the Long Beach Unified School District's adult program.

ALL MARKETS IN the Safeway chain began providing consumer information to customers last Feburary. Brochures on unit pricing, code dating, nutrition, ecology and recipes are available on consumer bulletin boards in the stores.

Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Dotson keep some cookbooks in their booth so all bases are covered in the purchase-meal preparation picture.

They never recommend specific brands, but they do explain differences in different products and household items, as well as explaining amounts and costs. If the code dating and unit pricing information is confusing, they clear it up.

The women relay requests from customers for products the store may not carry. If somebody wants mustard greens and can't find them, the store staff hears about it.

When poor people cut down on spending, they cut down on food first, Mrs. Ellis said. The result is skimpy, non-nutritious meals. Watching the elderly shop inspired her to devise her geriatric meal plans.

The reception to the consumer information booth has been good, she said.

"People see a friendly face and they come over to ask questions."

AT WIT'S END

Loveliness of lumpiness debated

By ERMA BOMBECK

Here is a fashion note that is going to make your week. Two designers in New York have come up with an egg-shaped satin pillow fringed with antique lace and garnished with rosettes called pwf (pronounced puff). When worn tied around your waist under a jumpsuit, it allows every woman to look like she is six months' pregnant.

"Maybe it will be just another fad," said Linda Sampson, who co-invented it, "but the fashion world is hungry for a great fad. There is no reason why the pear-shaped figure can't come back again. After all, for centuries the pregnant woman has been regarded as the epitome of nascent loveliness, the carrier of the species, the wearer of an inscrutable glow."

HOLD IT!

Take it from a woman who went into maternity clothes at two weeks and wore them for the next two years, waddling around with a snack tray around your middle has few virtues.

"WHAT GOOD is nascent loveliness, I say, when you cannot see your feet, much less count your toes. As for the inscrutable glow, it comes from high blood pressure and trying to arrange your stomach around the steering wheel of a car.

Gosh, I don't want to abort your idea of an instant stomach before it gets a chance, but in a spot survey among some of my friends, their reactions were quite negative.

Said one mother of five, "I haven't been so excited since I got a cold sore on my tongue."

Another came up with a question, "Is she suggesting you wear this on a first date?"

Yet another summed it up with, "I think Linda has another Edsel on her hands."

Mrs. T. Otis, the co-designer said, "The pregnant woman is catered to and tendered by everyone she meets. She is a special person. I really don't intend to have any children so I have to enjoy reaping the rewards of the pregnant look."

AND THAT, my dear, is yet another myth. We do not get seats on the bus when we are expecting . . . we just look like we're sitting . . . all the time. Our husbands don't run out in the middle of the night and get pickles for us. (When Joan Rivers phoned to tell her husband she was pregnant, he put her call on hold.)

The way I feel, if anyone wants to go out and play pregnant, they're welcome to it. The pwfs sell from $18 to $50 (morning sickness extra).

Me? I am reminded of the day I went shopping and got lost in a maze of dress departments. Finally, I went up to the saleslady and asked, "Am I in the career shop?"

She looked at my lumpy, little body and shrugged, "It all depends on how you feel about maternity clothes."

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Well schooled in fixing ribs

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

A last . . . we've found a native son!

In addition, with the exception of Mrs. "B" (Virgie) the family is composed of four "bee bees." Today's Chef of the Week is known as Bill Barnes, while sons add up to Blake Barnes, Brian Barnes and Bradley Barnes. Blake, 13, attends Stanford Junior High; Brian, 11, Gant Elementary, and Bradley, 9, treks off to Bixby Elementary.

Officially, our "cook" is William C. Barnes Jr., dean of counseling and guidance at Long Beach City College.

Born in Los Angeles, Barnes is a long-time resident of Long Beach, attending Polytechnic High and Long Beach City College. He joined the staff of City College in 1966. In 1967, he was elected chairman of the newly formed Polytechnic High Interracial Committee and still holds that position. He also works with Boy Scouts, Boys Club, Long Beach Family Service, and Downtown YMCA.

Barnes served two years in the U.S. Army, from which he was honorably discharged in 1953.

WILLIAM C. BARNES JR.

HIS EDUCATIONAL background also includes the following: a B.S. degree in physics and education-social studies from Pepperdine University and an M.A. in administration from Cal State, Los Angeles. He is a doctoral candidate at USC.

His first position included six years at Centennial High School, where he taught history, English and government, was attendance investigator, counselor and varsity basketball coach. At Vanguard High, he taught history and counseled for a year.

A member of the Board of Directors, Compton Junior Chamber of Commerce for five years, Barnes was winner of the Key Man Award. He served on the Alumni Board of Directors of Pepperdine College, was vice president and chairman of the committee of counselors, and is a member-chairman of the NAACP.

Active in Kiwanis Club, Barnes also serves as chairman of the Los Altos Methodist Church Council on Ministries.

Webster defines awards. "to confer or bestow upon, as to award a prize." Well, in the case of our "Chef," the word "recognition" is far more fitting. He was recently named winner of the award for individual contributions in the field of human relations, presently by the Long Beach Human Relations Commission. In it Barnes was described as "an outstanding citizen who has worked diligently and persistently in the interests of community harmony and progress."

"His dedication, resolve and fortitude as a proponent of human equality and happiness through enlightened relations have made the way easier, and life more meaningful, for Long Beach residents," the citation said.

OTHER RECOGNITIONS include the All Conference in Basketball at LBCC and Pepperdine, the Law Day award by the Long Beach Bar Association, and the Boyd Foundation Scholarship.

An honor student at the Army Physical Training School, Barnes received its Board of Governor's Award.

A member of the State Community College Advisory Committee, Economic Opportunities Program, he also received the Honorary Service Award from the Long Beach area PTA Council for 1972.

His hobbies run the gamut of basketball, tennis, spectator sports, community organizations, inter-group relations and workshops. When he cooks, it's mostly outdoors on the braiser. "And of one thing you can be sure being most inventive," says Virgie, "He's sure to throw in extra ingredients — wheat germ, unusual seasonings, etc. He can whip-up a batch of waffles in nothing flat, also." Today, however, he opts for a batch of Braised Short Ribs of Beef.

BRAISED SHORT RIBS OF BEEF

2 teaspoons shortening
1 large onion
1 clove garlic
4 pounds lean short ribs of beef
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon thyme
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 cup red wine
2 cans (1 pound) red kidney beans

Oven 450 degrees. Melt shortening in large casserole or baking pan, with lid. Cut onion in thin slices; chop garlic. Now put onion and garlic on bottom of casserole. Put beef on top, with bone side down. Season with salt and thyme, and bake uncovered about 30 minutes. Turn the ribs over and continue baking 20 minutes longer. Reduce oven to 350 degrees, drain off all fat possible and discard. Sprinkle beef ribs with chili powder. Pour in the wine; cover tightly and bake 1 hour. At the end of this time drain and rinse kidney beans. Add to beef mixture and bake about 25 minutes or until beans are hot. Serves 6. Good accompaniments are rice and coleslaw or cauliflower salad.

The Aces on bridge

by IRA G. CORN JR. TEAM CAPTAIN

Dear Mr. Corn:

We have a feud going between two different factions. Can you help settle this question? Is a forcing two bid forcing with 60 on score?

Hatfields and McCoys,
Clear Lake, Iowa

Answer: The question has caused problems in many partnerships and there is no "official" solution. It falls in the area of partnership agreement.

The problem with playing it nonforcing is that a slam, which depends upon finding a fit, may never be reached. I recommend you play the demand bid as forcing for at least one round regardless of part scores.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Should I have bid again with this hand after this bidding:

4/30

Profit Taking, Dallas

Answer: North's bidding shows values in excess of a good opening bid, since South's one-heart bid was forced and might have been based on no strength at all. Since South has enough to be near the game zone, I recommend bidding. Either three hearts or three clubs is okay, with a slight preference to the latter.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Chintz maintains its charm

By FRANCES DIETRICH

There's a charm about chintz in its gay-colored prints of figures and florals under a glazed finish that has made it a fashion favorite over the years.

It has held a place in all the major custom fabric lines used by interior decorators because of its affinity to the Old English and French influence in furnishing; classic styling more lasting than Mediterranean, Oriental or Swedish, which come and go after periods of two or three years.

Presently, chintz is winning an even larger coterie. There are a number of reasons. One, is the trend toward bringing the outdoors in as part of the ecology movement. Birds, ferns, botany prints and florals are traditional chintz prints. Simultaneously, the new generation has rediscovered cotton. This natural fiber is the basis for most chintz fabric.

At the same time, chintz is lending its elegance and crispness to women's fashions in blazers, skirts, floor - length, shirt - style loungewear, and mandarin-inspired leisure gowns. A version of the latter, elegantly interpreted by a name designer, is priced at $325.

AS IN ALL fabrics, there are degrees of quality in chintz. High grade chintz is constructed in a tight, plain weave with a hard-twist yarn in the warp, and a coarser, more loosely twisted yarn in the filling. A resin finish is applied, which is given a high polish by passing it between hot rollers one or more times.

A lower quality would be lighterweight; not as tightly woven, and the glazed finish would be provided by a nondurable wax or starch.

A second cousin to chintz cretonne. Sometimes called an unglazed chintz, it is usually a coarser cotton cloth woven with carded instead of combed cotton yarn.

When buying chintz in home fashion fabric, yard goods or ready-to-wear check the hangtag to determine whether it may be washed, or whether it must be drycleaned.

The Everglaze trademark on 100 per cent cotton chintz is your assurance of a lasting lustrous effect, crease resistance and durability to laundering. Because of chintz' smooth surface, it resists soil. When it does need washing and ironing, iron on the right side.

A NEW ENTRY in the field of glazed fabric is the BanCare trademark. This means that the fabric has received a special glaze which can only be applied to blends of polyester and cotton and polyester and rayon. This durable press product has all the properties of customary chintz.

Both Everglaze and BanCare trademarks indicate that the fabrics have passed rigid quality standards for stability of the fabric, retention of appearance and colorfastness.

In home fashions, chintz can transform winter-oriented rooms to those of sunny openness when used for cafe curtains, draperies, bedspreads and slipcovers. Prints include not only nature studies, but a few contemporaries, and a good representation of 18th century Indian designs.

Bouggess-White awards scholarships

The annual scholar dinner sponsored by Bouggess-White Scholarship Foundation will take place Wednesday in Lakewood Country Club.

A social hour at 6:30 p.m. precedes dinner at 7.

Featured speaker will be Dr. Kenneth Washington, assistant superintendent of public instruction for the State of California and a member of the Los Angeles Community College Board of Trustees. He also has served as assistant to the chancellor at UCLA in charge of minority programs.

The purpose of the dinner is to recognize the students from various ethnic backgrounds who have won the 1972 scholarship awards of $300 each.

Ticket information is available from Mrs. Richard F. Driscoll.

Pros and cons of privacy quest

DEAR ABBY: What's gotten into you? Everyone is entitled to privacy!

I refer to those people who were vacationing near Monterey when a car full of strangers drove up, and asked if they could share their picnic table. I think they had a lot of nerve trying to butt in that way.

I give those people credit for saying, "No, we want our privacy." You took the part of the intruders and gave out with a lot of dialog about "caring and sharing."

Look at the English. They are great protectors of their privacy. You don't see them letting just anybody move in and get c h u m m y with them.
LIKES MY PRIVACY

DEAR LIKES: For the other side of the coin, please read on:

DEAR ABBY: After reading about the people who didn't want to share their picnic table, I couldn't help but think how much they were missing. Privacy can be found in the confines of one's own home, and if that is what one wants, he should stay home.

We are not world travelers, but we have had many memorable outings when we took our children camping. We've shared picnic tables (and even lunches) with strangers from all over.

Had we wanted our privacy, we never would have met the two charming schoolteachers who were crossing the country on the narrow back byways instead of the freeways. ("You don't see anything from an airplane!")

Or the party of happy young people who insisted that we share their campfire on the banks of a river one beautiful moonlit night too beautiful to describe.

Our children have romped with children of every color and creed, and it has enriched their lives.

Once we joined a family with nine children who were giving "Mamma" a vacation from the kitchen, treating her to a dinner of peanut butter and jam sandwiches and chocolate milk.

Those who shun strangers will never know the wonderful feeling of making friends of strangers, and have them blow you kisses when you wave them goodby.

Privacy seekers miss the whole point of living in, and enjoying, God's beautiful world, which belongs to all of us. I weep for them, and their growing numbers.
RECEIVED MORE THAN WE GAVE

DEAR ABBY: 27 years ago, I married a smart, young, ambitious man. Climb! Climb! Climb! Year after year the goals got higher. He worked, worked, worked!

Last week I nearly lost this wonderful man to a heart attack. What good was the split level home, the beautiful furniture, the sterling silver, the mink, the extra car? My only prayer was that this devoted husband and father should live to enjoy the fruits of his hard-earned labor.

I reproached myself a thousand times for having demanded so many material things. I nearly worked him to death. No wonder most women outlive their husbands.

I was lucky. Thank God mine is going to make it.

Abby, please tell young married women to settle for less and not to drive their husbands to exhaustion. Sign me, GRATEFUL.

DEAR GRATEFUL: No one can tell it like the one who's been there. Thanks for the reminder.

DEAR ABBY: Three of my friends came here for lunch and bridge the other afternoon. One is a widow, the other a divorcee and the third is married. They all had a wonderful laugh over a sign they had recently seen in the needlework department of The Farmers Market.

"NEEDLEWORK HAS TAKEN THE PLACE OF SEX"

Needless to say no one brought out her needlework, even when she was dummy.

Prints draw eye to festival

THIS GALA scene by Kiyanoga (1751-1815) shows "Geisha and Maids Setting Off Fireworks."

PRINT BY EISHI (1750-1820), titled "Geisha," depicts a Japanese professional singing and dancing girl. Such art, now highly valued, first was deemed by the Japanese to be folk art and virtually worthless.

HIROSHIGE'S WOODCUT, "Rain," was done in 1850. Colors are softly muted. All prints reproduced on this page are in the Stephen Longstreet Collection to be displayed at the CSLB Carlson Festival.

HIGHLY TREASURED print, "The Great Wave,," was created by Hokusai in 1850. Hokusai is considered the master printmaker. Yoshitora, who studied with Hokusai, also became known as a master printer.

were only a few dollars a short time before were bringing $600 or $700. Collecting them was the fad, and I stopped."

Longstreet has known Japan for more than 30 years, making frequent visits there, including a stint for Time Magazine in 1945.

"Today, the traditional Japanese culture has almost disappeared. The Ginza is a noisy, glaring strip, frequented by hippies. The old way of life is vanishing."

Longstreet recalled that in his own early painting days, times were different, too. "In Paris I had $20 a week. My grandfather sent me the money, but, to prove that I was studying and working, I had to send him about a painting a month. Not long ago, many of my early paintings, ones that I had completely forgotten, were found in storage in Paris. Yale University bought them after paying several hundred dollars in storage fees. Eventually, my entire Japanese collection will go to Yale."

With the depression, Longstreet's stipend stopped. He returned to New York and worked as a cartoonist for Saturday Evening Post, Life, Judge, College Humor. When he was a cartoon caption writer for the New Yorker, Bennet Cerf said to him one day, "Why don't you write a book?"

"I'm an artist, not a writer," Longstreet replied.

BUT CERF staked him to $2,000, and the painter wrote his first book, "Decade," a successful novel.

That was the beginning of a fabulous career that has embraced nearly every phase of writing — best-selling fiction and non-fiction, screen, radio and television scripts, the play, "High Button Shoes." Time Magazine has called him "the most readable of American authors." The San Francisco Chronicle predicted, "One day social historians will turn back to Stephen Longstreet as to Scott Fitzgerald, who fixed the '20s forever in print."

Now 65, the handsome, urbane artist-author has no thought of slowing his fast-paced schedule. This week his new book, "We All Went to Paris," was published by McMillan. He already is working on another, "The Ravished Renaissance: Chicago," dealing with that city's history from 1860 to 1920, beginning with Lincoln's nomination and ending with the White Sox scandal.

Soon he will begin his second cookbook — the first was "Salute to American Cooking." The new one will have a wider scope — "The World Cookbook."

CSLB's other visitor, Kobayashi, checked facilities in the new Student Union where Japanese refreshments will be served next Sunday at 3:30 and dinner at 6 p.m.

As his chef, Yuki from Tokyo, deftly prepared an array of sushi, Kobayashi watched his flashing hands and noted, "All Japanese cooks are highly skilled with knives."

FROM SEAWEED, raw fish—squid, herring, tuna, clams — from rice, cucumbers, green horseradish and eggs prepared like a layered omelet, Yuki conjured a display as enchanting to the eye as to the palate.

"There are two categories of sushi," Kobayashi explained. "The Edomae from the Tokyo area have raw ingredients, except for the rice. The Osaka, from that region, are cooked. The cooked rice is mixed with vinegar, which helps to preserve it."

In Japan, Mike Y. Horikawa, owner of the Los Angeles restaurant that bears his name, has a number of restaurants and seven sushi bars. "The younger generation prefers American meat, but the older generation, like my parents, insists on fish."

To Japanese, the appearance of food is as important as its taste. "There is first the eye, then the food, then the sake. The dishes must be of the best possible quality, thin and beautifully decorated. There are many courses with small portions served in different dishes. A typical 10-course meal will include appetizers, soup, raw fish, boiled food, broiled food, fried food or tempura, salad, soup, then dessert. It is perfectly correct to drink from the soup bowl —the only utensils we use are chopsticks.

"Japanese food has a 2,000 year history, but sushi go back only 200 years."

Included in the $15 tickets which allow admission to all events, will be either a Japanese 5-course dinner or the Swedish smorgasbord.

The festival will begin Friday with 4 and 8:30 p.m. showings of Akira Kurosawa's film, "Rashomon," and Ingmar Bergman's "Virgin Spring."

Henri Temianka, chairman of the festival, has arranged this schedule:

CSLB PRESIDENT Stephen Horn will officially open the event Saturday at 1 p.m., to be followed at 1:30 by a concert performed by Swedish virtuoso violinist Leo Berlin and pianist Greta Eriksson.

At 5 o'clock, Hansen of Scandia Restaurant, will chair a panel discussion on culinary arts; Horikawa will participate. At 6 p.m., the smorgasbord will be served.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m., August Coppola, professor of comparative literature at CSLB, will moderate a panel discussion with audience participation. Taking part in the discussion of Swedish and Japanese film art will be Liv Ullman, star of Ingmar Bergman's "Persona;" Hans Conried, film and television star; Francis Ford Coppola, director of "The Godfather," and Onoe Koroemon, supporting actor in Akira Kurasawa's "The Seven Samurai." A screening of "Persona" will follow the panel.

Sunday at 1:30 p.m., Japanese concert violinist Yoko Matsuda and pianist Etsuko Tazaki will perform a major Japanese work and classical selections.

LBAA awards honors to two

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Their hours of volunteer work — which translates into just plain drudgery sometimes — brought handsome rewards Tuesday night to Mrs. Albert Fluch and Mrs. William Carlon.

The two were the surprised recipients of Long Beach Art Association's honors at its Awards Night in the Fidelity Plaza. LBAA president Mrs. Richard Gurrey made the presentations.

Since coming to California from New York six years ago, Mrs. Fluch has assisted in many of the association's activities and for the past five years has written the LBAA newsletter.

Since 1958 when LBAA still was housed with the Long Beach Museum, Mrs. Carlon has taken on innumerable committee tasks, sat patiently in the LBAA gallery to assist visitors, and has proudly sold a record number of tickets for the annual Scholarship Tea, fund-raising event to aid youthful artists. For many years she also was a painter.

FURTHER news about the fast-selling tickets to Laguna Beach's Pageant of the Masters July 11 through Aug. 27. Although Friday, Saturday and Sunday performances are sold out at the box office, you still may get some weekend tickets at Downey Museum of Art, 10419 S. Rives Ave.

The museum has tickets for July 26 and 31, Aug. 12, 16, 19, 21, 22 and 27. Aug 12 and 19 are Saturdays and Aug. 27 is Sunday. Prices range from $3 to $8. For more information, phone the museum.

KATHLEEN NEAL, who has had 10 one-man shows, will exhibit watercolors during May at Dana Library, 3638 Atlantic Ave. Her paintings recall trips on the West Coast from British Columbia to California, along the Mother Lode country, in Jamaica and in Europe.

The artist has studied with Rex Brandt, Robert E. Wood and Mario Cooper.

AT TRADITIONAL Artists Guild of Paramount's Spring Membersip Show, judge Joyce Pike chose a watercolor by Long Beach artist Richard Johnson for the Best of Show ribbon. There were many other winners from the Long Beach area.

Firsts in their classes went to Lenzie Periman, Seal Beach, professional; Arlene Boyd, Norwalk, amateur, landscape; Ryo Terasaki, Downey, amateur, miscellaneous; and John Salchak, amateur, copy. The Paramount City Councilmen's Award went to Kathy Jones of Norwalk.

TO INTRODUCE its May show, Studio Trois, 3069 Long Beach Blvd., will give a reception Friday from 1 to 9 p.m. honoring artist Virginia Beeson. Mrs. Beeson paints portraits, seascapes, still lifes and semi-abstracts. Her study has been with private teachers and at art schools.

PRESIDENT Ora Brimer invites the public to Huntington Beach Art League's meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Huntington Beach Recreation Center. Newport Beach artist Linda Lee will demonstrate oil painting. There is no admission charge.

BEGINNING May 8, registration forms will be available for the All City Outdoor Art Festival open annually to artists who live within a 30-mile radius of Los Angeles City Hall. Forms may be obtained at Los Angeles Municipal Art Gallery, Barnsdall Park, 4804 Hollywood Blvd., where the festival is held; at the Municipal Arts Department, Room 1500, Los Angeles City Hall; or at any Home Savings office.

Dates of the festival are June 23, 24, and 25. Deadline for returning registration forms is May 31.

Symphony season finale on May 7

With a chorus of 300 and four brass bands, Long Beach Symphony Orchestra will move to the Convention Hall of Municipal Auditorium next Sunday at 7 p.m. for an impressive finale to its 37th season of subscription concerts.

The work to be performed is one of the gigantic masterpieces of the romantic period, Hector Berlioz' "Requiem."

Written in 1837 to commemorate the dead of the Algerian campaign of that year, Berlioz composed the music in only four months, creating a work as interesting to watch as it is to hear.

Choral groups will include those from California State College, Long Beach, under direction of Frank Pooler and Wesley Reed; Long Beach City College, under Wayne Gard's direction; El Camino College led by Dr. Roger Quadhamer; La Serna High School of Whittier, conducted by Brent Pierce; and California Heights United Methodist Church, directed by Robert L. Collins.

BRASS PLAYERS will be from the CSLB Band under Larry Curtis, and LBCC, directed by Ron Logan. Two bands will be in the balconies and two at the outer edges of the choir.

Soloist in the Sanctus section will be Robert Gray, who recently won second prize in the Western Regional Competition of the Metropolitan Opera and has appeared with West Coast companies, including the San Diego Opera and Los Angeles Euterpe Opera.

All season ticket holders for the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra concerts at Millikan High School are invited to be special guests of the Long Beach Symphony Association for this concert. To obtain two complimentary tickets it is only necessary to show the season ticket stub at the door the night of the concert or to phone the symphony office in advance.

THE FINAL symphony preview of the season will be held Tuesday at 1 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Sussman, 1451 El Mirador Ave. Pooler, director of choral organizations at CSLB will speak on the life and music of Berlioz. Reservations may be made by calling the symphony office or Mrs. Harry J. Lowther, 166 Granada Ave.

Tickets for the concert may be obtained at the symphony office, 121 Linden Ave.

History, ecology blend in Canada's Thousand Islands

By HERB SHANNON
I, P-T Travel Editor

And as I row, row, row,
Up the River St. Lawrence,
I'm hollering, 'Florence!'
—Oh, where can she be?"

travel

KINGSTON, Ontario — Bandleader Louie Prima would have been in more trouble than he thought if he really were in the fix described in that comic ditty of the Frantic Forties.

There are actually more than 1,700 islets in the Thousand Island chain extending from the headwaters of the mighty St. Lawrence Seaway here to Morrisburg, about 100 miles downstream, where the river widens a bit to become Lake St. Lawrence.

This information is courtesy the skipper of the good river boat Ivy Lea IV, one of the sightseeing excursion fleet plying the 1,000 Isles area from a dozen communities along the Canadian shore.

THE BOATS sail hourly and even oftener during the busy summer months on 2 to 4½-hour cruises up and down the river, criss-crossing the international border and landing for refreshments and exploration on islands both Canadian and American, complete with cursory customs and immigration inspections on both sides.

The tours from Ivy Lea, a rustic riverside hamlet in the heart of the island area, include sailing under the nearby High-level International Bridge, a seven-mile island-hopping span linking Ontario to New York State, and a closeup of the world's shortest international bridge, a 30-foot arch connecting two adjacent islands on either side of the border.

The American citizen who owns both islands lives in the summer residence on the larger Canadian property, but has erected a flagpole to fly the Stars and Stripes on the smaller isle.

Anyone who despairs of the detrimental effects of developing resort and recreational areas on a large scale should take a refreshing vacation break here. The green-clad islands and rushing blue water are still much as they were when the area was called "The Garden of the Great Spirit" by the original Indian settlers.

A GENEROUS sampling of the environment as it has remained since nature created it is located at the Nature Center on Wellesley Island, largest of the U.S. islands in the archipelago. The center is the starting point for hiking tours, with or without guides, through the true forest primeval.

On the Canadian shore, a chain of parks and historical sites unmatched by any similar development in North America extends for more than 100 miles. Administered by the St. Lawrence Parks Commission, the 6,000 acres of parkland include picnic and campgrounds, scenic drives and such locations of historic importance to both Canada and the U.S. as Old Fort Henry at Kingston and Upper Canada Village at Morrisburg.

Fort Henry, originally designed to keep Americans off Canadian soil during the hostilities dating from 1812, now is invaded annually by increasing armies of U.S. tourists. From May 15 to Sept. 15 its red-coated guards parade, muster ancient arms and show how soldiers of a century ago lived.

This year the fortress-museum will have on its roster some members of the third generation of Canadian university students who have re-enacted the past for fun and salary during the summer months.

In addition to the precision marching, the student-soldiers fire salutes from the muzzle-loading cannon on the ramparts, demonstrate the skills of shoemaking and tailoring and guide groups through the museum displays of Canadian military history.

All this in a fortress which served its purpose so well that no attack was ever attempted by American forces, though many were planned.

CANADIAN ISLAND and summer residents, left, are linked to American island by world's shortest international bridge

IT'S A different story at Morrisburg, site of both Upper Canada Village and Crysler's Farm Battlefield Memorial, on the grounds of a decisive engagement with Americans in 1812.

Both the village and the memorial owe their current existence to industrial progress. When the St. Lawrence Seaway and its associated power project were undertaken, the widening of the river wiped out a number of small towns on its banks. The battlefield as well was inundated.

Now the 40 buildings of Upper Canada Village, ranging from crude log cabins to the elegant brick and stone farmhouses of the 1850s, are relocated on higher ground as a living museum of the early 19th Century.

The actual site of the Battle of Crysler's Farm, which Canadians believe repulsed the Americans and determined Canada's destiny as a free nation within the British Commonwealth, now lies beneath the St. Lawrence.

But when the shoreline in front of the memorial park was built up, it was done with soil taken from the battlefield. Thus the Memorial Mound and the obelisk surmounting it are on historic earth.

A GREEN mall, 600 feet wide, sweeping up to the mound is appropriately lined with British oaks and Canadian maples.

There is some question whether that fateful clash in 1812 was a full-scale military battle or a skirmish of farmers and pioneer militia, but there is no question as to which side won the day.

It wasn't ours.

Pity. We lost a mighty pretty parcel of country.

OLD FORT HENRY in Kingston, Ontario, Canada, is site each summer of parade of guards. The fort was built to stave off attack by the U.S. during War of 1812, but was never used

TRIP TIPS

Shopping for hotel bargains in the Orient

By MARIE MATTSON

You can get a 25 per cent discount on new hotel rooms in Singapore. Taxi fares run 15 cents a mile in Manila. Sightseeing tours by air-conditioned motor coach cost $2 a day in New Delhi.

Gourmet meals are priced at only $2.50 in Taipei. You get more rupiahs for your dollars than ever before in Indonesia. Bargaining for moderately-priced hotel rooms is common, your success depending upon supply and demand.

Despite rising prices in many areas of the world, you still can indulge your champagne tastes on a beer pocketbook in the Orient. Top values are offered in cities listed

Most hotels recommended are within walking distance (or a 30-cent taxi ride) of leading restaurants and shops. For room and meals per person, per day, in a twin-bedded room with private bath, figure about $22 deluxe, $16 moderate, $10 budget.

BANGKOK: Deluxe: Siam inter-Continental; Dusit Thani Bangkok-Sheraton. Moderate: Manhattan, Asia, Amarin. Budget: Christian Guest House — homey atmosphere, attractive grounds; YMCA International Center — new.

BOMBAY: De luxe: Taj Inter-Continental. Moderate: Farias — new. Budget: YWCA International Guest House — near Taj Inter-Continental.

KUALA LUMPUR: De luxe: Hilton — scheduled to open this year. Moderate: Merlin — excellent value. Budget: Malaysia — pleasant, free laundry; Mirama — attractive, price slightly exceeds budget category.

MANILA: De luxe: Manila Hilton; Hyatt Regency Manila — both near sightseeing attractions and Ermita shops; Manila Inter-Continental — in Makati commercial district, popular with businessmen. Moderate: Bay View — good value. Budget: Luneta — excellent location, rooms need refurbishing.

NEW DELHI: De luxe: Oberoi Inter-Continental — India's finest; Akbar — new. Moderate: Claridge's — in residential area. Budget: YMCA Tourist Hostel — British management.

SEOUL: De luxe: Chosun. Moderate: Bando, KAL. Budget: Metro — good value.

SINGAPORE: De luxe: Hilton; Singapore Inter-Continental; Ming Court — all in heart of tourist area; only slightly further away are the Shangri-La, Mandarin and Malaysia. Moderate: Merlin; Imperial. These are de luxe hotels, but with a 25 per cent discount fall within the mederate price category. Both hotels are 50-cent taxi rides from the main tourist section. Budget: New Hong Kong; YWCA Hostel (women, married couples); Tanglin Court Hotel. Budget hotels do not offer comparably good value: if at all possible stay at a new hotel offering a discounted rate.

Remember that discounts are never automatic — you must request them.

TAIPEI: Moderate: Grand — palace architecture, 50 cents by taxi to shopping area; President; Ambassador. Budget: YWCA Hostel — new, pleasant.

Slightly higher are the following areas, where cost per person will run $30 de luxe, $22 first class, $16 second class, $10 budget.

BALI: De luxe: Bali Beach. Second Class: Tandjung Sari; Segara Village — attractive grounds and architecture; La Taverna — Italian management. Budget: Narmada — good value. The foregoing are at the beach resort of Sanur. In Ubud, at Puri Saren, your hosts are the royal family; accommodations in modest cottages cost $6 per person per day, including three meals.

CALCUTTA: First Class: Grand —City's finest; Hindustan International. Second Class: Park. Budget: New Kenilworth, near U.S. Consulate.

DJAKARTA: De luxe: Hotel Indonesia. First Class: Karitka Plaza, near Hotel Indonesia. Second Class: Sabang — attractive, good value.

HONG KONG: Hong Kong Island and Kowloon are connnected by a five-minute ferry ride; unless otherwise noted, all hotels are in Kowloon. De luxe: Mandarin and Hong Kong Hilton — both on Hong Kong Island; Peninsula — excellent location and restaurants. First Class: Hong Kong Hotel; Hong Kong Hyatt. Second Class; Fortuna; Nathan — both 20-cent taxi rides from major shops; Astor older — establishment, convenient location. Budget: YMCA International House: Chungking House — convenient location.

With the exception of Singapore and Bangkok, de luxe hotels often are fully booked. If you're using this category, make reservations early and get confirmation slips. Hong Kong has a year around shortage of all grades of rooms.

In other areas mentioned, moderate and budget accommodations usually are necessary in some popular establishments.

The rules for bringing pearls through customs

travel

It is really not complicated to bring in a pearl necklace and get it through Customs with a minimum of trouble or cost.

According to the United States Bureau of Customs, whether or not a clasp is present, and whether or not the pearls are permanently strung, are the two major factors that decide the rate of duty.

As the rate of duty can vary from as little as ½ of 1 per cent to as high as 33 per cent, it pays the traveler to understand and obey the Customs requirements.

PEARLS LOOSE or temporarily strung and without a clasp (the words "without a clasp" make all the difference), are dutiable at only ½ of 1 per cent if they are natural pearls, or at 3 per cent if they are cultured pearls.

But if they are permanently strung, or if the clasp is with them, or both, the duty can jump from a bottom of ½ per cent to from 14 to 33 per cent.

If you buy pearls (natural, cultured or imitation) abroad and want to bring them in at the lowest rate, be sure that the pearls are either loose or temporarily strung and that no clasp accompanies them. If the clasp is there, either attached or separate, or if there is no clasp but pearls are separated by knotting, the higher duty rate will apply.

IMITATION PEARLS, loose or temporarily strung and without a clasp, take the rate of 20 per cent.

Be sure your dealer gives you a sales slip or invoice that accurately states the value and cost of the pearls. A false valuation can make a lot of trouble and perhaps a fine. You might even lose the pearls. With duty rates so low, it pays to obey the import law.

Hawaii prepares for whales and summer

travel

WHALE watchers while away time by fishing from Hawaii's rugged shore

May is a whale of a time to visit Hawaii. Even the whales think so, according to the Hawaii Society of Whale Watchers.

This group has been training its spyglasses on the big beasts for nearly 20 years, and reports that the intriguing mammals make a point of visiting the islands in the winter, spring and on into May.

The whales, according to the Society, are drawn to Hawaii for the same reason that attracts a million visitors annually — romance.

The giant sea animals zero in on the channels between Maui, Molokai, and Lanai, and are often spotted off the shores of Oahu.

They return a year later to bear their young in the same waters. After calving the whales cavort for awhile in island waters, then head north for the Arctic. A year later, the entire performance begins again.

AND THERE'S a lot more than whales to see during May and June in Hawaii. It's one of the busiest, best seasons for visitor events, ethnic celebrations and sporting contests.

Daytime temperatures under a bright sun range in the high 70s, low 80s with a 10-degree drop in the evening hours. Offshore in Waikiki the surf's in the mid-70s.

May 1 is Lei Day in Hawaii — a day of flowers, music, entertainment, pageantry. Focal point is Kapiolani Park in Waikiki. Here you'll see hundreds of leis of every conceivable design and construction on view in the gigantic Lei Contest: leis of orchids, plumeria, carnation; of kukui nuts, sea shells, seeds, feathers — name it and you'll see it somewhere on display in the park.

Dances, ukulele music, and appearances by the Lei Day Queen and her court of local beauties are also on tap. At sunset there's a big hula pageant. And it's all free to the public.

On the weekend of May 13 there's a carnival spectacular hosted on windward Oahu some 30 minutes from Waikiki by the Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station. With scenic Kaneoke Bay as the "stage" you'll see water skiing demonstrations, nautical sports, a Carnival Queen, boating contests.

Honolulu International Center headlines the lavishly-mounted "Ice Capades" production May 18-28. The ice extravaganza is an American institution — even here, in the middle of the Pacific.

KAMEHAMEHA Day, June 11, is the most some Hawaiian of holidays. It honors the unifier of the Hawaiian Islands — King Kamehameha I — with a colorful and massive float parade in downtown Honolulu, a huge public luau, pageantry and dancing, and the ceremonial decoration with yards and yards of flower leis on the enormous statue of King Kamehameha gracing Honolulu's downtown Civic Center opposite historic Iolani Palace.

The evening before, the elegant Holoku Ball is staged at one of the major hotels in Waikiki Beach. Ladies wear the graceful, form-fitted, traditional Hawaiian holoku gowns; men, the Hawaiian formal costume of white slacks and shirt, red sash. Along with the music and pageantry, this is an authentic slice of gracious Old Hawaii. Open to visitors, of course.

Kailua Beach, Oahu is considered one of the finest strips of sand anywhere in the Aloha State. Just a half-hour drive from Waikiki, this beach is the setting for the annual Kamehameha Day canoe regatta on June 11 featuring Hawaii's top outrigger canoe racing teams. Take your swimsuit, your camera, and make a day of it after the big parade in downtown Honolulu.

EVERYTHING'S ROSY

Portland readies festival

Three parades, three different entertainment shows, a Queen selection, auto races and a host of allied events will provide "something for everyone" at the 64th annual Portland, Ore., Rose Festival June 2-11.

Shows this year, all in the Portland Coliseum, are designed to appeal to all ages and tastes. David Cassidy, star of TV's "Partridge Family," comes in Sunday afternoon, June 4, Ed Ames brings an all-family show, with Shari Lewis and her puppets, Saturday night, June 10. Rounding out the package is a Sounds of Young show Monday night, June 12, featuring Jethro Tull.

Two different types of auto racing fill the two Rose Festival weekends. Drag racers take their turn June 3 and 4, in a meet sanctioned by the National Hot Rod Association. Next weekend, June 10 and 11, sports cars and open wheel formula cars compete over a winding tree-lined course of 1.9 miles for national points, in a meet under sanction of the Sports Car Club of America.

FEATURE parade of the Festival's three processions is the Grand Floral Parade Saturday morning, June 10. A capacity house of 10,000 watches the Coliseum pre-parade show at 9 a.m. and at 10 the parade itself passes into the Coliseum and through downtown streets, before a throng of up to 400,000 persons.

More than 40 floats, each one entirely flower-decorated, illustrate varying interpretations of the parade theme, "Love Is . . ." Interspersed with the floats are prancing equestrian units and smart-stepping bands, many of them from foreign countries and distant states.

First big parade of the Rose Fest is the Merrykhana Saturday night, June 3. This illuminated nighttime procession is dedicated entirely to the spirit of fun and is reigned over by a "King of Fun" — normally a local celebrity — and a "Miss Raindrop."

THE FESTIVAL Center, which will be open the entire period from late morning to late evening, will operate adjoining the downtown Willamette River seawall. Arts and crafts, commercial exhibits, food concessions and midway attractions will vie for the visitor's attention.

Nearby at the seawall, the ships of the Rose Festival fleet will lie at anchor. These vessels come each year, dispatched by the Canadian and U.S. navies and the U.S. Coast Guard.

Further information and mail order reservations are available from the Portland Rose Festival Association, 10 S. W. Ash St., Portland, Ore. 97204.

OK to print souvenir money

It is legal to print money on toilet paper in Sweden. That was the verdict of the Stockholm City Court in a case brought by the Bank of Sweden against a novelty store owner.

The bank accused the store owner of counterfeiting after he had printed 20,000 rolls of toilet paper with the face of a 100 kroner currency note on one side.

The defendant countered by charging the bank of making counterfeit toilet-paper after attorneys passed two of his novelty bills back to back to show they could be made to look like the real thing.

The court ruled both parties innocent, since there is no law to prevent the use of the Swedish banknote image for advertising or other similar purposes.

SPECIAL SAIL
The best cruise bargain sails June 18th.

It's only $20 a day—one way or full cruise—to Suva, Auckland, Port Moresby, Manila, Hong Kong, Keelung, Kobe, Yokohama, Honolulu, Los Angeles.

On June 18th, 1972 the 550-passenger S.S. UNIVERSE CAMPUS sets out on a fascinating 78-day Circle Pacific Cruise from Los Angeles with Chapman College's Summer Adult Education Program.

But here's the exciting news:

Orient Overseas Line has reserved a block of cabins for non-student passengers at incredibly low fares—$20 a day, inside room . . . and $25 a day, outside room.

This will be a relaxed, informal cruise with many planned activities. And you'll particularly value the long stops at each exotic port.

The S.S. UNIVERSE CAMPUS (formerly the S.S. Atlantic) is a sleek "One Class" ship with private bathroom facilities in each cabin. The ship is fully air conditioned. # Read this tour book as though your European vacation depended on it.

At Pan Am we think our European tours are better than anybody else's European tours.

So we've tried to make our European tour book better, too.

For example, instead of just giving you a general idea of how much your tour will cost and what you will get, we give you specific details and specific prices.

And we give you tips on what to see, where to eat, and a lot of other things you need to know when you're 6000 miles away from home. This year, we offer you many different tours and departures to choose from.

Some are escorted.

Some independent. Still others are fly/drive.

And all include the lowest round trip economy individual excursion or group air fares and double occupancy hotel accommodations (which is the way most people travel).

Here are some examples of our tours from Los Angeles.

Our Regency Tour, that gives you 15 exciting days in London from $537 to $610.

Our Italy Grand Tour, that lets you enjoy Rome, Venice, Milan, Sorrento and Capri for 15 days from $664 to $704.

And, if you have more time and more money, we have our incredible Southern Europe Tour which gives you 22 unforgettable days in Spain, Portugal, Morocco and Majorca for $949.

To help you learn about the countries you'll be seeing, on most tours we give you, before you go, one of the most comprehensive guidebooks available. Pan Am's New Guide to Europe.

On the Regency and Ambassador Tours we even give you our Insider's Guides that tell you things like where to shop, what to do at night, and how to tip. And on these tours we include weather insurance. That way if you get some rain, you can also get back some of the money you paid for your vacation.

If you're thinking about a European vacation, send for Pan Am's Europe '72, or pick it up from our Holiday Center display featured at most Pan Am travel agents. It's free, so you're not losing out on anything if you do.

But considering a European vacation is usually a once in a lifetime experience, you could be losing out on a lot, if you don't.

Hints on where to find bargains when shopping overseas

The clout of inflation has been felt overseas, as elsewhere, which means it costs more to shop abroad than it did five years ago.

However, for the tourist going abroad, good values are still obtainable, according to Trans World Airlines travel advisors, if the shopper is selective and concentrates largely on specialties reflecting the superior craftsmanship or the workmanship of merchandise in the country of origin.

It follows that Swiss watches are more costly in Minneapolis than in Geneva or Zurich, just as an ounce of French perfume will cost considerably more in New York than in Paris.

CONSIDER these helpful hints:

If you have a particular item in mind — whether it be knitwear, wood carvings, cutlery or other imports to the USA — take a look at the price tag it bears if it's available in your home city.

You'll be in an ideal position to compare both quality and price when you see it displayed in London, Amsterdam, Florence or another area where it is actually produced.

Look for practical gifts and don't be pressured into buying something that isn't entirely to your liking.

Hold the line on impulse buying — unless, of course, you have an unlimited budget. Some travelers can't resist buying objects that somehow lose their appeal as soon as they return home.

Deal with reliable shops. Also, try the leading department stores which offer the advantage of fixed prices and a variety of merchandise.

SAVE TIME by asking your hotel concierge when the shops open and close.

If you are in the market for gems, antiques and expensive art, and don't consider yourself an expert, it will pay you to have a professional appraiser.

For arts and crafts, make inquiry to determine if state-owned shops are operated in the city you are visiting. Where they exist, you can be assured of first quality, and you won't have to haggle over prices.

Don't be timid when it comes to bargaining or asking for discounts. The practice is common in Mediterranean countries, and throughout Africa and Asia.

Avoid shops and boutiques recommended by touts and tour-guides who obtain liberal commissions at your expense.

Remember your duty-free allowance is $100. However, even with the payment of customs duty on purchases exceeding that figure, you may still be saving money.

Make things easy for yourself (and the customs officer who will greet you on your return) by producing a record of your purchases, as well as receipts.

HERE IS a partial list of "best buy" items recommended by TWA:

Paris — Perfumes, shoes, art, Limoges china; Madrid — Suede coats, leather goods; London — Silver, woolens, knit-wear; Amsterdam — Diamonds, Delf ware; Dublin — Hand-woven materials, linens, Waterford crystal.

Copenhagen — Silver, ceramics, toys; Oslo — Ceramics, sporting goods; Stockholm — Stainless steel, porcelain, crystal.

Geneva — Clocks, watches; Frankfurt — Toys, cameras; Lisbon — Pottery, filigree work; Rome — Gloves, leather goods.

Tel Aviv — Jewelry; Cairo — Brocade, brassware; Athens — Rugs, handicrafts.

Bombay — Brassware, cotton fabrics; Bangkok — Thai silk; Singapore — Pewter, Batik, cameras; Hong Kong — Pearls, silk, cameras; Taipei — Jade, reproductions, Chinese art.

Nairobi — Tribal artifacts.

TWA has European bus trips

If you think Trans World Airlines is only concerned with aircraft, you're wrong. Now it's buses.

In connection with TWA's 1972 Getaway Adventures program for Europe, a fleet of specially designed motorcoaches will operate out of key continental centers for the exclusive use of the airline's tour passengers.

Employing a special design that combines comfort and sophistication, the new travel

Meteor motorcoach was created to complement TWA's Ambassador Service.

EACH AVANT-garde coach carries 38 passengers, although it could accommodate 50.

Meteor Coaches are air conditioned and feature carpets, a lounge complete with bar, refrigerator with soft drinks, taped stereo and radio.

Meteor's spacious seats offer the traveler regulated reclining, individual head and arm rests and lots of leg and elbow room. Seats are elevated and tiered as in a theatre, giving all passengers "front row views." Picture windows and raised-roof skylight offer panoramic viewing and clear photo-taking.

THE COACH has a newly designed independent air-suspension system ensuring smooth rides on remote secondary roads as well as high-speed thruways linking major continental cities.

All Meteor motorcoach tours are accompanied by English-speaking tour guides.

Tours using Meteor coaches are detailed in TWA's Getaway Adventures Europe brochure for 1972 — just one part of TWA's Getaway Vacation kit, available free from travel agents or by writing TWA, P.O. Box 747-A-2, Burlingame, 94010.

Paris at night

Life burns brighter than ever in the French capital. A happy new note is the re-opening of the Bal du Moulin Rouge in Montmartre. The review, "Fantastic", is just that, including a 60-ton aquarium with Kiki the dolphin. Folies Bergere has a new show, "J'aime la folie" with scenes including Catherine of Russia, Casanova, and Love Story covering life, love and literature.

Being the biggest vacation airline in the world allows us to do a lot more than we are able to list here.
For example, on your flight, you'll find our new Ambassador Service. For the coach passenger especially, it's the most comfortable fleet of planes in the world.
And in New York you'll be able to take advantage of TWA's separate U.S. Customs and Immigration facilities. While most of the other airlines still share facilities together, our passengers are able to get thru a lot faster.

In these two pages we have tried to show you how being the biggest vacation airline has also helped us become the best.
And how one airline can give you more vacation for your money than another.

How to cope with the 'red tape' of travel

The warm months are upon us and increasingly people's fancies are turning to thoughts of travel — travel at home and travel abroad.

Those considering a foreign trip for the first time may be hesitating because of the thought of "red tape" involved. True, there are certain requirements that must be met, but they are really quite simple in today's world.

It's just a matter of advance planning, giving yourself ample time to acquire a few documents and knowing what you can bring back with you.

THE BASIC and most important document is a passport. Passports are issued by the passport division of the Department of State in Washington, and U.S. passport agencies in post offices throughout California.

Getting a passport is easy — just a matter of proof of U.S. citizenship (a birth certificate does the job nicely) and two small photos. These, plus $12, provides you with a passport good for five years.

Visas once caused much of the red tape travelers used to complain about. They are endorsements stamped in the passport by representatives of foreign governments in the U.S. giving permission to visit their countries.

TODAY, relatively few countries require visas. No visas are required for travelers to Western Europe or to Latin America. In fact, for travel to most countries in Latin America you don't even need a passport.

These countries have settled for a "tourist card", which may be obtained from the airline serving the country you plan to visit. So, with visas required by only a few countries in Eastern Europe, Africa and Asia, the time may not be far off when the very term "visa" will be a matter of history.

Your trip is over and you are now at the international arrivals section of a U.S. airport. No problem with your passport, which is quickly inspected.

The final step is customs. It is here that some travelers run aground, usually because they have not read the applicable rules before departure.

Current regulations state that if the total value of goods you have bought on your trip does not exceed $100, you may make a simple oral declaration to the inspector. This exemption includes one quart of alcoholic beverages, wine or spirits.

ONE IMPORTANT caution: Don't be tempted to carry home a slab of Italian salami, Moroccan oranges, Dutch tulips or anything else of that nature. Meats, fruits, vegetables, plants and plant products are all forbidden to enter the U.S. unless they have special permission from various U.S. government agencies. Such usually can only be obtained by wholesalers.

travel

So you see, what "red tape" there is for an international trip is really not so bad. The important thing is to do enough advance planning so you will know what to expect.

Should you still have qualms, you only have to check with the nearest airline or travel agent where complete and up-to-date information on every aspect of foreign travel is available for the asking.

Fly-cruise package to Canada

CP Air (Canadian Pacific) and P & O Lines have joined to offer travelers a five-day, fly-cruise package between San Francisco and British Columbia.

Ten fly-one-way-sail-the-other programs are available between May 15 and January, 1973.

Prices per person are from $195 and include one-way flight between San Francisco and Vancouver via CP Air Empress jet, two nights aboard a P & O passenger liner, meals and various entertainments aboard ship, hotel in Vancouver for two nights, an all-day round trip excursion to Victoria via sea ferry (or with the option of the ferry one way with air flight the other), a "fun club" for shopping or sightseeing in Vancouver or Victoria and airporter coach transfer between hotel and airport in either Vancouver or Victoria.

Ski attractions

Chamonix, one of Europe's six year-round ski resorts, boasts a variety of summer attractions. The Aiguille du Midi, Europe's highest cable-car was recently acquired by PLM Hotel Rothschild Group and carried its millionth visitor to the top since completion in 1955. About 250,000 passengers are carried annually.

Chamonix's newest summer attractions are the indoor Olympic pool, basketball court, gymnasium and huge sauna. Nearby is an ice rink auditorium, 9-hole golf course, and 10 tennis courts.

Airlines plan Vienna hotel

Trans World Airlines and Swissair have undertaken a joint venture to build a 1,200-bed hotel in one of the most beautiful areas in Vienna, capital of Austria.

An estimated $20 million has been budgeted for the project, which will be located near the Wien River close to the City Park. Construction is scheduled to begin in early September.

ENTERTAINERS RELAX outside Bunratty Castle in Ireland

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

A wanderer's view of Ireland

By STAN DELAPLANE

Ballyvaughan, Ireland

"I see ye've come to the West country to sharpen yer wits," says the old lady to the writer in Shaw's play.

There's something mystic about the west of Ireland. The Atlantic beats a wild tune. Spray goes smoking up sheer black cliffs.

Gray castle ruins rise out of the misty morning. It was raining billy-o — what the Irish call a "desperate day."

I DROVE the twisty narrow roads between hedgerows of thorn, and so into little Ballyvaughan (where I lived three years ago to sharpen my wits) on the edge of Galway Bay.

Ireland will be the best buy and least crowded place in Europe this summer. TV and newspaper reports of troubles in the north cancelled a lot of bookings.

(Though this is ALL in the north's 6 counties. The 26 counties of the south are not touched by it.)

Should be the FIRST country for young backpackers to consider. Europe will get one million plus of the under-30s.

IRELAND is the ONLY country left where you can leave the roads and strike across fields and on footpaths.

Plenty of wild land to camp on. But you must have rainproof shelter. It RAINS in Ireland. Navy foul weather clothing is good hiking equipment.

There are some youth hostels. A lot of bed and breakfast farmhouses at low prices.

Best buy: Gregan's Castle Hotel above Ballyvaughan is a remodeled ancient manor house looking down to Galway Bay. Warm and cheery. Small and quiet. Single room with breakfast, $8. Or two of you can stay a week with ALL meals for less than $70.

You can get a folder by writing them at Ballyvaughan County Clare, Ireland. But for heaven's sake send a quarter for return airmail. (Both Temple Fielding and I liked Gregan's Castle, and the mail requests ate them alive.)

MUST GO: The medieval dinner at restored Bunratty Castle, close to Shannon Airport. I think the best entertainment in Europe. Harps and pepperpots. Eat with your fingers and a dagger.

Expensive and absolutely worth it: Dromoland Castle dating back to the 1500s, one of the most elegant castle hotels of Europe. Even if you have to save somewhere else, get in one night here. About $25 to $45 for two with breakfast.

"If we backpack in Europe — two girls — how much should we carry?"

I picked up two French girls on the road in Ireland. Wore jeans and had slicker rain gear. Carried a light sleeping bag. One good pair of slacks for change. Change of shirt etc.

Guided tours

France's Ministry of Foreign Affairs may now be visited by guided tour. Highlights include the panelled Louis-Philippe and Napoleon III style salons, tapestried rooms, Savonneri Carpets and fine furnishings. Notable is the room where the Congress of Paris met, and the Kellogg Pact was signed.

Said a dress should be included on the Continent, but not necessary for Ireland hiking.

"Can baggage be checked safely all the way through to a Europe destination, even though we change airlines at New York?"

I've never lost anything that way. I did have a day's delay once — plane was grounded by snow, and I got out ahead of the bags.

Free port people tell me NEVER to do this with packages of liquor and cigarettes you've bought. They get grabbed in the plane exchange. Hand carry such things.

KEEP baggage to a MINIMUM! I can't count how many times I've wound up carrying my own bags. Porters strike. Or there's no porter at all in some small town where you get off.

Lift those bags before you go. How would it be if you HAD to carry them a few blocks?

"What will the weather be like in Spain in August?"

Hot as a sheriff's pistol in Madrid. Impossible south of there. In some of those La Mancha towns, people leave their houses and live in cooler caves. Most of the government closes in Madrid.

But Spain in summer is very pleasant on the Atlantic coast or in the mountains.

Male shoppers find variety in Pacific ports

Who said men don't like to shop?

Let them loose where the mood and merchandise is exotic, unique — and the price is right — and they'll out-shop mothers, wives, daughters, sisters and sweethearts.

The South Seas is such a place. Cruise ships that ply the Pacific all agree.

During hundreds of annual cruises, member lines of the Trans-Pacific Passenger Conference also have witnessed that men travelers are shrewd and savvy shoppers.

MALE VOYAGERS are fashion keen, too. In Tahiti, a first port of call for many TPPC South Pacific cruises, men go instant Polynesian with purchases of flowery handblocked la Ora shorts, cruise wear and peachy-beachy togs.

Some start a collection of South Seas shirts. They pick up another in Moorea, New Zealand, Australia, American Samoa, a bula in Fiji, an Aloha shirt in Hawaii, and add to the wardrobe as they cruise along. Daring playboy types really flip native and get draped in a no-top skirty pareu (wrap-around cloth garment).

The oceanic primitive art of the South Seas fascinates most males. Discriminating ones seek out dealers who trade in grotesque New Guinea ceremonial masks, old idols and tikis of the Marquesas, richly carved Maori canoe figureheads, ornamented Tahitian nose flutes, and weird headdresses from Malekula Island.

Antiquities also appeal to men, and Pacific ports are treasure chests of rare Ming dynasty Celadon porcelains, Chinese agate snuff bottles, bronzes from Thailand and Tibet, and exquisitely carved ivory kris (Malay dagger) handles. A collector gathered seven antique clocks priced from a $1 shambles in Auckland to a grand $150 grandfather's clock discovered in Sydney.

Golfing guys buy golf caps at courses throughout the Pacific to add to their ego collection. A Texas bachelor, purchasing bunches of vanilla beans, aroused curiosity in Tahiti. "I'm loco about their sweet fragrance," he explained. "so I put the beans into my dresser drawers and closets and my clothes always come out smelling like vanilla."

Opals are a man's best friend in Australia, source of almost all the world's yield. The gems glow greenish in the Fire Opal, flash flame in some, and strut peacock colors in others. The iridescent Black Opal, from Lightning Ridge in New South Wales, finds favor as cuff links and shirt studs. Opals may be purchased mounted in gold, loose or rough for self-polishing.

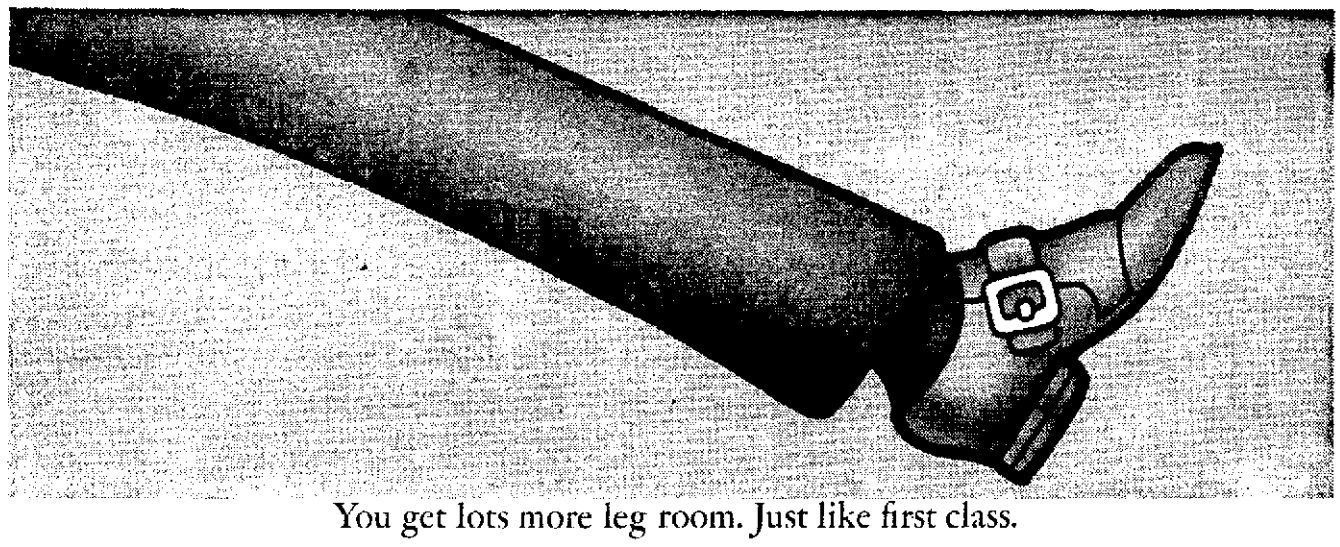

THE MERGENCE of New Zealand and Australia as wine-producing countries of distinction has enticed men into acquisition of Aussie and Kiwi vintages for their worldly cellars. A wine appreciation course by a California winemaster aboard some TPPC cruise ships sharpens connoisseurs' taste buds and prepares casual wine drinkers on their way to being connoisseurs.

Men dig postage stamps. The South Seas digs both with artistic designs. Perhaps least expensive, and perhaps eventually most valuable as a collector's item, memento or gift, is an air mail envelope with two Tonga stamps mailed at sea. Then it's dispatched via canoe to Niuafo'ou, the Tin Kan Island, in a tin can. These philatelic prizes cost 21 cents each.

Only a man would think of a lottery ticket as a souvenir, present or investment. The lottery benefits the Sydney Opera House construction. Drawings are every two weeks. Fifty-five-cent tickets try for $25 prizes and $6 luckies can reap up to $200,000.

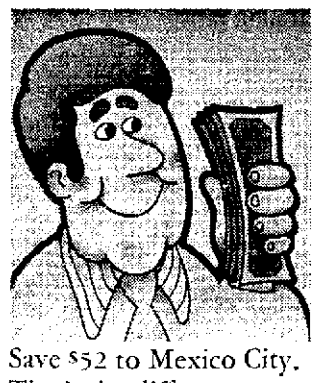

Big spenders, like TV star Raymond Burr, may buy an island, like Burr's Naitauba, Fiji. Almost anything's for sale in the South Seas!

The name of the game is entertainment

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
Associated Press

"There exist only a limited number of dramatic forms that convert into a television series," said Aaron Spelling.

"The difference has to be in the way it is done. But when a writer tells me, 'This show is about ecology, drugs, abortion or whatever,' I know it's wrong."

Spelling, who started out 19 years ago as an actor and now heads his own busy production company, is the fellow who launched the word "relevancy" in Hollywood jargon. He has lived to regret it.

"We started with 'Mod Squad,'" he explained, "and it was a hit, so everybody jumped on the youth bandwagon and talked about being 'relevant.' What happened then was a season full of positive, pretentious series about the young-relevant and dull.

"Hell, television had been doing 'relevant' shows almost from the beginning. When I did a Western 'way back on 'Zane Grey Theatre,' about loneliness, that was relevant; loneliness is always relevant."

SPELLING — frankly openly and patently—is a practical man who carefully works within the disciplines of commercial television. The result is that he has waxed rich and successful and yet insists he has been able to make some philosophical, even political, points from time to time.

His "Mod Squad" recently wound up its fourth ABC season and has been renewed for a fifth. He turned out a round dozen "Movie of the Week" 90-minute programs that included two pilot shows projecting series ideas.

"We know that our business is entertainment," Spelling said. "We also know that the audiences like to watch police shows and doctors shows. That doesn't mean audiences watch only those series

'The Price'

Arthur Miller's play, "The Price," which won Emmys last year for George C. Scott (best actor) and the late David Burns (best supporting actor) repeats at 8:30 p.m., Wednesday, Ch. 4. Barry Sullivan plays the "successful" brother; Colleen Dewhurst plays Scott's wife.

PRIME TIME REGULATION

Most station managers dislike FCC's ruling

Associated Press

A nationwide survey of television station managers shows two-thirds of them dislike TV's prime time access rule, which would be magnified greatly if the Justice Department is successful in its antitrust suit against the networks.

The prime-time rule was imposed last October by the Federal Communications Commission as a method of providing more diversified and innovative sources of programs than those offered by the networks. It requires the local stations to produce their own shows for a half hour each night or turn to independent producers or advertising agencies.

Whether more innovative and diversified programming has resulted is questionable.

TWO-THIRDS of the local station managers polled by The Associated Press said they are opposed to the rule or believe it has not achieved its goal. They say it has either produced poor quality shows, cost them money, or both.

Sixty-one out of 97 managers polled were against the rule. Only 23 managers said they either favored the rule or believed that it should be tested further. Thirteen offered no opinion.

"It's producing a variety of programming and allowing independent producers to enter the market," said Lee Jason of KFSN, Fresno, Calif. "But it's decreased the quality of programming because independent producers can't gamble with an innovative product. Instead, they stick to tried-and-true formats, like game shows."

A STRUGGLE within the industry could be in the offing.

Some stations are losing money from the rule, but others are profiting from it. NBC is seeking to have the rule withdrawn by the FCC, presumably because it has cost the network money. But the rule has greatly helped the competitive posture and financial standing of another network, ABC.

A number of independent producers are risking money with new shows on the assurance of the FCC that the rule will stay in force.

While critics assail the rule, saying it has produced a proliferation of game shows, bargain-basement dramas and off-network reruns, the Justice Department has filed suit to take entertainment programming away from the networks altogether. The suit, filed April 14 in Los Angeles, would turn network programming over to advertising agencies and independent producers in much the same way as does the prime time access rule.

THE NETWORKS have mixed reactions to the prime-time rule.

FROM 'MOD SQUAD' TO TV MOVIES

The game's entertainment

and I think television and audiences are much underrated in terms of quality shows.

"By and large, television has done a remarkable job — just think about some recent shows like "tribes,' 'the Homecoming,' "My Sweet Charlie,' 'THe Snow Goose,' 'Brian's Song,' and particularly 'The Glass House,' which was naked, realistic look at prison life. I'm rather proud of 'The Last Child, and even of the way 'The Night Stalker' — a little horror film about a vampire loose in Las Vegas — worked out for us."

Spelling paused and then suggested slyly: "If you looked back, you could count the number of superb 'Playhouse 90s' and other drama series in the old Golden Age on the fingers of one hand."

THE MOVIE-made-for TV, of which Hollywood turned out close to 100 this season alone, has been a shot in the arm for the troubled film business.

"Anytime there is a need for 100 scripts a year, there are not going to be 100 good ones around," he said. "But because of economic circumstances this past year, we had many more good actors and directors available to television. Some directors are products of television who had moved on to theatrical films — and now are coming back to TV where the action is."

If television producers have learned anything during the past year, Spelling said, "It has to be that you can't just sign some big movie star, give him poor material and expect the public to buy the result."

He believes that, with the arrival of made-for-TV films and rising costs, the days of the big one-shot dramatic special is past.

"The words drama special now have a special meaning for viewers," he added. "It means a play with a sad ending taped in New York -- usually a revival."

HIS PRIMARY interest is in making a show entertaining. The message, if any, is incidental.

"If a show is entertaining, you can drop other elements in it without lecturing," he said.

Spelling, a Dallas native, arrived in Hollywood in 1953 full of show ideas. For the first two years he cut a successful swathe for a newcomer — more than 50 TV roles and parts in a dozen films.

He moved into writing with the "Zane Grey Theater," eventually sold host Dick Powell a script — and wound up writing about one-third of the series' programs.

Spelling, while on top at the moment, has learned his lessons under the Nielsen guns. Some of his earlier efforts at production include some very short-lived disasters — "the Lloyd Bridges Show," in which the star emerged on dry land after the successful seasons of "Sea Hunt," "The June Allyson Show," an anthology, and "The Smothers Brothers Show," a situation comedy disaster preceding the controversial variety hour.

Spelling keeps turning out pilot films, hoping that lightning will strike. His latest was "The Rookies," seen on ABC early in March, a law-and-order show that he probably would like to forget.

"Mod Squad," however continues to be a real, substantial hit.

TV actors take pen in hand

DON GALLOWAY

MICHAEL LANDON

Associated Press

Many an actor has cursed the lines written for him by an author, and a few of them — with pen in hand — are doing something about it.

Michael Landon in his 13 years on NBC's "Bonanza" has turned out 22 scripts for that show and has directed most of them. He's signed to write and direct at least three episodes next season.

Rob Reiner, the son-in-law of "All in the Family," has written for a number of shows and is the co-creator of "The Super," an ABC summer comedy series coming up in June.

Don Galloway wrote an episode for NBC's "Ironside," in which he plays a police sergeant, and with his partner is finishing a western movie script. They also sold a series idea to Universal.

"One of the annoying things from an actor's viewpoint," said Galloway, "is that you do things differently after you've been on five years. But we still get scripts written for the first year and that's dumb. Like I was set up originally as a foil for Ironside, but after the fifth year it gets a little boring doing the same lines."

In the script he wrote with his partner, Charles Nichols, a Los Angeles businessman, Galloway is mistakenly identified by witnesses as a killer in a story about lookalikes.

Other actors who write include Stuart Margolin, Laurence Luckinbill, Marvin Kaplan, Sonny Bono, Fanny Flagg, Carl Reiner, Rob's father and creator of both the old and new Dick Van Dyke series, and Roger Smith, who gave up acting altogether after "77 Sunset Strip," for writing and producing.

Landon turned out his first script over a weekend nine years ago when it appeared the series would have to shut down temporarily because no script was available.

"I'd never had any experience," he said, "but I think if you've been in the business for any length of time and don't just sit in the corner and hide your eyes you pick up a certain amount of knowledge.

"What I like best about writing is that it lets me direct. I didn't direct the first six shows I wrote. The directors were good but you just visualize something a certian way and if it isn't done that way you're disappointed. Right or wrong, it's better when you can direct your own script."

Galloway describes his approach to writing as "total procrastination." He said, "I should write more but I seem to go in spurts. I write for three days and then I don't write for three months. My partner is the one who gives me a push."

"I get mad at myself because I don't do more," said Landon, whose mop of graying hair contrasts with the still-boyish face. "You know, you'll go along and write something and you'll like it. Then you run into censorship and you'll get disappointed."

Galloway said, "I think the product of writing is more individualistic than acting and cannot be duplicated by someone else. The role I play in 'Ironside' could be done by any one of a dozen competent actors. But when you write it's just you."

Landon said he writes swiftly, but only after the story has gone through a long gestation peroid. "I start thinking about a character," he said. "I never know what's going to happen to him. I don't plot or use an outline. Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't."

Neither believes his position as an actor gives him an advantage other than familiarity with the series and access to the producers.

"I think our executive producer will accept or reject a script on its merits rather than on who it comes from," said Galloway. Landon said, "I don't force scripts on people. I've written several I didn't like and I just kept them."

Both resist the temptation to write themselves a fat role. Landon writes major parts for other members of the Cartwright family or for guest stars.

Galloway said, "If I were writing a script that I knew I would appear in I would tend to write my part smaller. I doubt that an actor can see his part that well."

ROBERTO ROSSELLINI'S 'SCHEME'

...and why he prefers state-run television

ROBERTO ROSSELLINI

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR
New York Times Service

Italian television is operated by the state, and Roberto Rossellini likes it that way. In New York recently, the noted director examined his own involvement with television and explained why he is against a commercial-channel structure for Italy.

To his audiences in America, Rossellini is probably still regarded as a traditional filmmaker, creating his films for commercial theater. His reputation as a "neo-realist" was, of course, firmly established after World War II with "Open City" and "Paisan," films that went out of the studios and into ordinary streets with largely nonprofessional actors.

But, he says, he always found filmmaking "absolutely useless, a meaningless fight between artists and artistic conceptions." For him, the "main thing is to be efficient and useful."

HIS INTEREST in the medium of television began as early as 1950. Here, he recalls, was an incredible machine for the diffusion of information, capable of reaching the biggest possible audience. Gradually, Rossellini developed what he calls "my scheme."

The roots of that scheme are in the director's pronounced humanistic concerns. His approach is, has aways been, educational. He frequently cites UNESCO's 1970 program on education, which defined education not just as a product of formal schooling but as a constant element in the life of man.

Through occastional projects for television, he learned the technology of the medium. He eventually turned to television as an exclusive outlet for his work. Some of his projects, such as "The Rise of Louis XIV" and "Socrates," have been released theatrically in this country, but they were created specifically for the TV screen.

"MY SCHEME" did run into some initial resistance from Italian television powers. For one major thing, it was a relatively expensive scheme. It demanded the support not only of Italian and French TV authorities but of certain foundations and corporations in the United States.

The scheme basically consists of nothing less than a history of mankind. "The spine of my action," Rossellini explains, "is contained in several series. Two, "The Iron Age" and "Man's Struggle for Survival" have already been completed. In various stages of development and production are "Science," "The Industrial Revolution," "The Conquest of the Western Hemisphere" and "The American Revolution," scheduled for next spring as Rossellini's first production in the United States.

"Man's Struggle for Survival" consists of 12 one-hour episodes and reflects the broad scope of the director's scheme. Beginning with primitive man, it progresses through ancient Egypt, Rome and the Middle Ages, and finally winds up in interplanetary space explorations.

Aside from the series, the Rossellini project also includes treatments of specific subjects, focusing on men who have in some way changed the course of history. In addition to "Louis XIV" and "Socrates," films also have been completed on "The Acts of The Apostles," "Pascal," and "St. Augustine." On the current schedule: "Cosimo de Medici," "Leon Batista Albaerti," "Descartes," "Diderot" and "The Travels of Marco Polo."

THE PROPORTIONS of the scheme are obviously, vast. In American television, they would be impossible. And that is part of Rossellini's defense of Italian TV as it is run by the state.

At present in Italy there are various groups organizing campaigns for the creation of a commercial channel. The motives are political, the proponents maintaining that the ruling Christian Democrat Party wields too much control over the flow of news on television, that unfavorable items and opposition views are regularly excluded. The charges are well-documented.

Rossellini, however, is singularly unimpressed. The gist of this argument, he maintains, is merely "dropping to the level of politics." Of course, the ruling party enjoys something of an advantage, but it always does, whether television is run by the state or by "independent" commercial interests. Even in a commercial operation, Rossellini says, someone at the top will be making the decisions and there is no guarantee that he will be more liberal than the state.

For Rossellini, the main point is in having the best over-all television operation possible. The state, he argues, at least theoretically represents all the people, and has a defined duty to "do something" for them. Commercial interests, he continues, have a duty only to profit statements. And in the end, he feels that his project would have been impossible within a commercial system of television.

MEANTIME, the Rossellini grand scheme continues, with the 65-year-old director committed to projects through the next several years. The educational approach has even proved to be popular. Out of a possible Italian audience of 20 million viewers, he observes, "Socrates" attracted 7.5 million.

In aiming to reach the biggest audience possible, Rossellini has relied heavily on his own sophisticated techniques of dubbing sound tracks in different language. Sometimes, he says, a single film might be made with some actors on the set speaking Italian, some speaking French. It doesn't matter, the director insists, for the final product is specially dubbed for specific audiences, and European audiences are not overly finicky about even the more obvious examples of dubbing.

American audiences, however, are. And that's one reason the Rossellini productions have not been snapped up for American television.

Only "The Rise of Louis XIV," the one film from the scheme that Rossellini no longer directly controls, has been shown on American television. Recently public broadcasting's "NET Biography" series presented it, utilizing what could be called a United Nations translation technique. Using no subtitles, the soundtrack in French was overlaid with a slightly delayed, brief translation in English.

For the future, with an eye on both a bigger audience and the lucrative American market, Rossellini will have all of his actors mouthing English dialogue on the set. The dubbing into English will then present no problem.

MOVIES MADE FOR TELEVISION

Will filmgoers pay to see them?

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Will movie goers pay tickets to see a movie made for and shown on television:

Columbia Pictures is trying the gamble, releasing "Brian's Song" in the new ABC City Theater in Century City. It is advertised as "The tough, tender and true story of the Chicago Bears' Gale Sayers and Brian Piccolo."

No mention that the movie appeared on the ABC television network last Nov. 30. The only hint is in the ad line: "The extraordinary film nominated for 11 Emmy awards."

"Brians Song" was produced by Screen Gems, the television arm of Columbia Pictures. Starring James Caan and Billy Dee Williams, it tells of the friendship of pro footballers Sayers and Piccolo, the latter a cancer victim. When the film received a strong response from TV critics and audiences alike, a test showing was tried in a Chicago theater.

SCREEN GEMS President John Mitchell said: "We were interested in finding out the reaction to a theatrical release immediately after the telecast. It was a short run in an out-of-the-way theater before Christmas, when the weather was dreadful. Business was fair and we didn't really learn anything pro or con."

The "Brian's Song" experiment may — or may not — bolster hopes of some film producers that new revenues can be gleaned from movies made for television. Those hopes were dashed last year when Universal tried the same gambit with "My Sweet Charlie," a highly praised, Emmy-winner film starring Patty Duke and Al Freeman Jr.

The film was released in one New York theater and flopped. It was withdrawn from theatrical showings.

"But 'My Sweet Charlie' was not the right picture to try," says a veteran film salesman. "It was a 'small' picture, a two-character drama that looks good on TV but doesn't fit the big screen in theaters."

A RARE success in the TV-to-theaters field was accomplished by Disney in 1955 with "Davy Crockett, King of the Wild Frontier." The three-part adventure starring Fess Parker and Buddy Ebsen had twice appeared on television.

Yet Disney combined the three hours into a 95-minute feature and received $2,401,000 in theater rentals in the United States. A sequel, "Davy Crockett and the River Pirates," also played theaters after television and returned a good profit.

Other producers have tried the same thing, Lacking the Disney magic they have usually failed. MGM put out two-partners of the TV "Man from UNCLE" series as theatrical features, but they never rose above the lower half of double bills.

WHILE RELEASE of TV features in the United States is chancy, film companies have earned good returns from theaters abroad. Disney has sold foreign theaters such TV shows as "Texas John Slaughter," "Hans Brinker," "The Waltz King" and

EMMY GUESSING

Some performers compete against themselves

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

In the television Emmy awards, performers sometimes have to compete against themselves for the statuette.

That was the case last year when Lee Grant was nominated twice. She won for her role in the TV movie, "The Neon Ceiling."

That's the case again with Glenda Jackson, a former Oscar winner, who is nominated twice for outstanding single performance by an actress for two segments of "Elizabeth R." Miss Jackson also is nominated for outstanding actress in a series.

MISS JACKSON looks like a winner in the series category for "Elizabeth R," and if so it would be the third straight year for a British actress in a BBC production on "Materpiece Theater" on PBS. Susan Hampshire won twice, for "The Forsyte Saga" and "The First Churchills." Miss Jackson's competitions are Susan Saint James of "McMillan and Wife" and Peggy Lipton, who has been nominated annually since 1969 for "Mod Squad.'

Her competition for a single performance is more formidable: Helen Hayes for "Do Not Fold, Spindle or Mutilate;" Patricia Neal for "The Homecoming," and Susannah York for "Jane Eyre." It looks like a tossup between Miss Jackson and Miss Neal.

The winners will be announced on the Emmy telecast on CBS May 14.

KEITH MICHELL also has a double shot at an Emmy for the BBC production "The Six Wives of Henry VIII" seen on CBS. He is up for an award for best actor in a series and best actor in a single performance.

Despite Michell's brilliant performance, Peter Falk of "Columbo" has the edge in the series category.

Others competing for the single performance Emmy are James Caan and Billy Dee Williams of "Brian's Song"; Richard Harris for "The Snow Goose," and George C. Scott of "Jane Eyre." Probable winner: James Caan.

"Brian's Song" and "Columbo, as well as "All in the Family,' are certain to pick up a clutch of Emmys.

"BRIAN'S SONG," which won a Peabody Award, looks a winner as outstanding single program, best supporting role for Jack Warden, outstanding directorial achievement for Buzz Kulik, and outstanding writing in dramatic adaptation for William Blinn. In all, it has 11 nominations.

"Columbo," with 10 nominations, seems to have the edge as outstanding new series, outstanding dramatic series, and for writing, where it was a clean sweep in the dramatic category.

"All in the Family," has the odds for outstanding comedy series and its star, Carroll O'Connor, should pick up the Emmy that he missed last year. Redd Roxx and "Sanford and Son" could be a sleeper. In "Family," Jean Stapleton, Rod Reiner and Sally Struthers are up for Emmys, and the show has a sweep of the comedy writing category.

"The Sonny and Cher Hour," a midwinter entry this year, with eight nominations, could score an upset in the variety classes over last year's big winner, "The Flip Wilson Show."

It's 'Plaza Sesamo' south of border

By TIMOTHY BERRY
United Press International

Take the United States' most highly touted children's television show, study it, revise it, refilm it, and you no longer have "Sesame Street."

You have "Plaza Sesamo"—a Latin American version of the children's television workshop show with its successful formula for teaching pre-school children while entertaining them.

"Plaza Sesamo" got its start in 1969 when several Latin American teachers and government representatives asked Children's Television Workshop for permission to dub "Sesame Street" for Latin American children.

The workshop said no, that's not the idea. Latin American children would not identify with the American character of "Sesame Street." Workshop officials offered the help they could to provide a Latin American version.

The project faced financial difficulties until Xerox Corp. pitched in to pay half the cost. The other half is paid by various television agencies in Latin America. A consultant's panel which included 11 educators from Mexico, Argentina, Bolivia, Colombia, Costa Rica, Chile, Panama, Peru, Puerto Rico and Venezuela helped plan the pilot film which was made in Mexico last summer.

The executive producer is John Page, an American whose 17 years in Mexico have earned him the tag "Honorary Mexican" and whose more formal titles include a master of arts degree from Harvard.

Forty-eight more Latin American experts were consulted on the finished pilot, it was tested on children, and the final production was readied. The action takes place in a typical Latin American plaza surrounded by yellow buildings and small stores and centered with a fountain, benches and trees.

The actors have the same dark semi-Indian look that most of their viewers have. Approximately half the show is taken directly from "Sesame Street"; the other half is completely original. The main human characters are Gonzalo and Maria Luisa, in their 20; Rosita, a girl in her early

The BIBLE Says

Question: Will only 144,000 be saved in Heaven?

The Jehovah's Witnesses so teach, but the Bible does not. These people make a literal statement out of the most figurative book of the New Testament, Revelation. They cite Rev. 14:3, but ignore the context of that passage, as well as its figurative nature.

If the Witnesses wish to conclude that the number who will be saved in heaven will only be 144,000, then why do they not take Rev. 7:4 where it plainly says this number was made up of Jews, and the very next verse of their text, Rev. 14:4 says that the number was composed of men who were virgins? Now, remember — they are the ones who want to take the passage literally, so we must conclude that only Jewish men who were virgins will be in heaven!

The teaching that only 144,000 will be saved in heaven is a result of pitiful biblical interpretation. Again, the very next verse says that this number was the firstfruits — and this is a clear indication that there would be others. Again, after John saw the 144,000 he said: "After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb . . ." Rev. 7:9.

Do not be deceived by such false doctrine which would limit the number saved in heaven. The Bible says:

(1) All who obey God's commandments will have a right to enter the city (Rev. 22:14).

(2) Eternal salvation is promised to all who obey Christ (Heb. 5:9), and is reserved in heaven (1 Pet. 1:4).

(3) If you blindly follow blind leaders, you too will fall into the ditch with them (Matt. 15:14.)

Station Managers' view of the prime time rule

is leading the fight to revoke the rule, which he calls "unrealistic" and says has produced "absurd results."

"We believe what people said this would bring about, what the FCC members voted for, has not come about," Goodman said. "We don't think that it has met any of the objectives that were set out for it and we think the FCC should admit its mistake and take a fresh look at this."

But at ABC, a spokesman said, "We think it needs another year for everyone to take a look at it. The first year was an experiment. A shakedown year with a lot of waivers.

"There's no question that it helped ABC. The economy was bad, cigarettes were gone. It reduced our inventory in a slow market time and we were able to weed out a lot of losers."

NBC SAID that, according to the Nielsen reports, over-all viewing from October to February declined 8.4 per cent as compared with last year in the 7:30-8 p.m. period. Network affiliates report viewing off even more — 12 per cent for the access time period.

Independent stations, however, increased viewing 36 per cent.

The networks also said the access rule has caused a significant decline in viewing of the evening news shows. NBC said the three network share during the news shows declined from 85 per cent last year to 77 per cent.

Few of the shows offered to television stations through syndication or barter — a means by which a sponsor offers a show free in exchange for a few minutes of advertising time — were innovative or noteworthy, many of the managers felt.

A COMMON ground of agreement by nearly all of the station managers was that the new shows were not as good as those offered by the networks. The public apparently agreed, because over-all viewing during the early evening access time declined in the Nielsen ratings.

The two most popular shows were "Lawrence Welk" and "Hee Haw," with new shows offered to stations by barter after cancellation by the networks.

Other big winners are "Lassie," "Rollin' on the River," "Wild Kingdom," "Untamed World," "This Is Your Life," "Sports Illustrated," "The Goldddiggers," and "Let's Make a Deal."

Look at one city, San Francisco:

KPIX, a CBS affiliate, fills its 3½ hours weekly with local and syndicated first-run shows obtained largely through its parent Westinghouse Broadcasting Corp. Among them "Doctor in the House," "The David Frost Revue," "Street People" and "Good Grief, It's Sunday."

The NBC affiliate, KRON, aims its shows for children and the family audience.

The ABC station, KGO, expanded its news operation. Don Curran, the general manager, prounced it "eminently successful." He said, "We're absolutely delighted with the rule. I hope they don't go back to the old way."

An independent station, KBHK, programs movies opposite the access shows. "Our ratings have jumped," said Carlo Anneke, the general manager.

TV NOTEBOOK

A CONSUMER group has convinced NBC-TV that it should give equal time to answer commercials read by Wally Shirra for the Association of American Railroads.

The Center for Law and Social Policy, a Ralph Nader group, in Washington, complained one of the commercials favored the Surface Transportation Act of 1972, which refers to the railroads' right to abandon unprofitable spurs. Farm groups, according to the Nader group, object to closing some railroad spurs.

NBC reviewed the commercial and decided that the material could be considered as editorial matter rather than product advertising and therefore subject to air time for rebuttal.

Dick Cavett will devote his entire show Tuesday to an examination of New York City street gangs, exploring their motivations, operations and history. Members of several gangs will be among the guests, says the network.

THE CHIEF U.S. correspondent of the Soviet newspaper Izvestia, Melor Sturua, is scheduled to visit NBC-TV's "Today" program Monday to talk about the American and Russian press with the series' anchorman, Frank McGee. Another planned "Today" feature for Monday is a panel discussion about boxer Muhammad Ali and what he symbolizes in sports and the black world. Panelists for this session include Budd Schulberg, author of "Loser and Still Champion: Muhammad Ali"; NBC newsman Bob Teague and Pete Axthelm, Newsweek magazine essayist on sports.

A FEDERAL grant of $202,591 was accepted last night by the Coast Community College District Board of Trustees for purchase of color broadcasting equipment for KOCE-TV, Channel 50, Orange County's first television station.

The College District will operate Channel 50 as a full-color, non-commercial, UHF educational TV station to serve the entire county. It is scheduled to go on the air next fall.

The funds were awarded to the District by the Department of Health Education, and Welfare, under the Educational Broadcasting Facilities program.

The newest color video tape recording equipment will be purchased with the funds. It will enable Channel 50 to pre-record, and broadcast a full range of color TV programming, according to William Furniss, Director of Telecommunications and station manager.

"With the new equipment, Channel 50 will be able to offer Orange County audiences any kind of TV broadcasts — with the newest and best in color capability," said Furniss.

The station will present community-oriented, cultural, and educational TV programming — accented on Orange County.

Station facilities will be in the Telecommunications Center on Golden West College campus, Huntington Beach. The transmitter will be located in the Puente Hills, three miles north of La Habra.

PATTI DEUTSCH, the original girl in the Ace Trucking Company, improvisational comedy group, has been signed by producer-head writer Paul W. Keyes as a new regular on "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" for the fall season on NBC.

Miss Deutsch, in addition to her work with the Trucking Company, has done numerous commercials, including one for a motor car firm wherein she keeps nagging her husband with the line, "Harry, wha-did ya pay for da' car?"

teens, and Don Ramon, a graying shopkeeper.

The famous "Sesame Street" puppets are there, although slightly modified for their new audience. Jazz accompaniment has been dropped because it fell flat with the children.

Some 130 hour-long shows are planned for broadcast starting next fall in Argentina, Chile, Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Puerto Rico and negotiations are under way with 11 other countries. There are about 16 million television sets in Latin America and it is not unusual to see antenna in the poorest city districts, even on cardboard shacks.

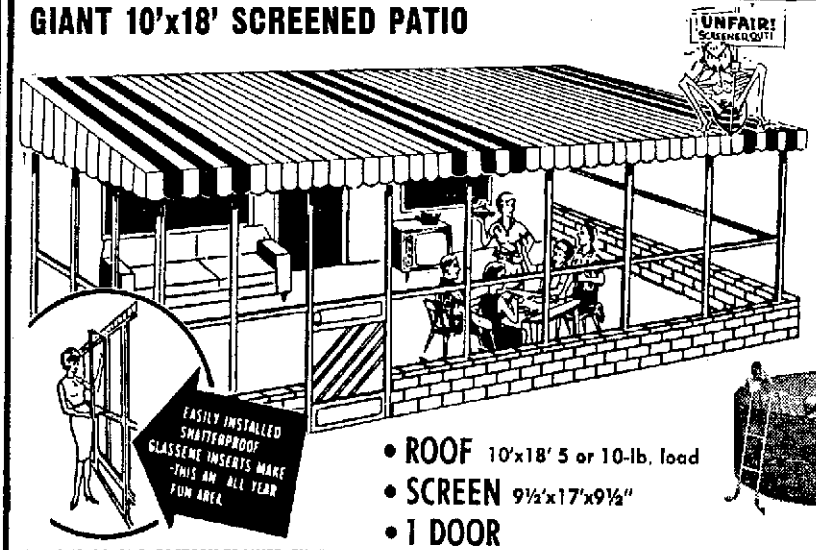

One of the subtle changes in the "Sesame Street" format is heavier emphasis on community spirit which social experts found lacking in many Latin America preschoolers.

The producers hope the show will reach a majority of the 22 million Spanish-speaking children between two and five in Central and South America. A Portuguese production also is under way for the 11 million children of that age group in Brazil.

CRITICS' CORNER

JACK PAAR'S AFRICAN DIARY, aired April 25, Ch. 4.

It's too bad Jack Paar doesn't spend as much time on television as he does in Africa. Of course, he probably wouldn't have half as much fun if he did. So we have to wait for, and savor, the hour specials he offers periodically on NBC-TV.

The format was familiar for Paar admirers: a sort of home movie approach, totally personal, humorous and witty observations that were delightful, chatty and informative (with just the right touch of adult raciness), and the undeniable impact of a man who does things his way, and his way only — almost unheard of in committee-run television.

"African Diary" was the first special for the humorist-essayist in one-and-a-half years, so a viewer might be forgiven for being tempted to say, "Mr. Paar, I presume." In any case, Paar missed no chance to remind us that he has lost none of his magic. He is still widely regarded, especially in the television industry, as the best late-night talk show host video has ever known — and he pulled a gorgeous twist on this in his special: he offered a talk show on a slope of Mount Kilimanjaro. And you know something? He's still the best.

The guests for this wildly improbable Kilimanjaro panel included not a single major celebrity besides Paar. There were a former big-game hunter; a safari organizer and his wife, and Paar's own spouse. In short, just friends and family. They sat around on some chairs, with Paar guiding the conversation in his instinctively enticing manner, and NBC-TV couldn't have done any better with the help of the biggest talent agencies or 10 corporate vice presidents.

It must be a sobering experience for a network executive to watch this kind of program and realize what television is all about, and also for the showbiz types to look at a Paar special and see how phony and second-class most of their efforts are by comparison. At any rate, Paar, noting the countless talk programs now deluging America, said he was afraid our children will grow up thinking "The Last Supper" was a panel show.

But the Kilimanjaro sequence was only part of his special. Among other things, for instance, he pulled off the inspired idea of having a pop musical group perform rock concerts for Africans, to get their reactions. One concert was for an audience of about 5,000 — but the choice sight was seeing the group, "Up With People," perform for 18 Masai tribe members. Some were moved by the music, and some weren't, it appeared. What turned them on were the drums, not the fancy stuff.

There was a sequence about the training of lions for a new movie (a Paar interview with actress Susan Hampshire was ended abruptly when one lion, seeking attention, ate through a microphone cord). There was a visit with Joy Adamson, author of "Born Free" and "Living Free." And there was a train ride, with Paar narrating a re-created story of the dreadful experience of building the railroad because of all sorts of hazards, including two lions who terrorized and ate a lot of workers.

Above all, though, there was Paar's usual astute eye for the offbeat, his comments and observations on the ironies of human nature, and his humor and anecdotes drawn from truth rather than gag-writers. There was a mysterically funny segment in which a donkey wandered into a black-tie dinner of British colonials out in the bush, with everyone trying to ignore the animal until Paar finally cracked up. There were also fascinating little bits and insights about Nairobi.

It is the 20th century, so Paar is a little late for the search for the Nile. Times being what they are, he is on NBC-TV instead. He does keep going back to the real world, however (which is why we see him so little on the home screeen). And he does keep things in perspective. For example, during one of the rock concerts he noted that music is one of the things that brings people together, and then added: "It's almost as popular as war."

— RICK DuBrow, UPI

TRIPLE PLAY, aired April 24, Ch. 4; AN ESSAY ON CHURCHES, April 24, Ch. 7; SURRENDER AT APPOMATTOX, April 24, Ch. 2; TONY AWARDS, April 23, Ch. 7; CLOSE TO ME, April 23, Ch. 7.

The march of what the television industry calls "busted pilots" continues. This time it was three comedy programs, none of which is on the network's fall schedule and so all may be presumed to be discarded.

"Wednesday Night Out," the first, centered on four households — a Jewish, an Italian-American, a WASP couple plus a divorcee, all close friends. A black woman doctor was injected into the story line and the ethnic one-liners took over, sometimes baldly and sometimes amusingly. A little TV bigotry goes a long way and Archie Bunker still has it pretty well cornered.

Then "Keeping Up With the Joneses" concentrated on the life of two couples formerly in "The Funny Side" which was canceled at midseason. The pairs in this, one black and the other white, have the same surname and share one remodeled brownstone. It was all slightly reminiscent of the old "Honeymooners," with lots of shouting and marital misunderstanding.

Between the domestic comedies there was Arte Johnson in a broad satire of the infallible sleuth. Arte had a chance to use a lot of wigs and crepe beards and exercise an assortment of foreign accents. It was okay for a half hour, but would be a bore on a once-a-week basis.

THE COMBINATION of writer Andrew Rooney and narrator Harry Reasoner emerged again in a short essay on church architecture. It seemed primarily designed too show some of the off-beat edifices used as houses of worship.

A "church" was defined for program purposes as "any place where people gather to pray." They ranged from shabby storefronts to modern experiments to Gothic and Renaissance cathedrals. Reasoner called New England's while churches with their steeples "America's single greatest architectural contribution."

"SURRENDER at Appomattox" in CBS's "Appointment with Destiny'" series concentrated on the final days of the Civl War and the confrontation between Robert E. Lee and Ulysses S. Grant.

CRITICS' CORNER

The program was primarily designed to contrast the characters of the two men leading opposing armies, and it drew sympathetic and warm portraits of them.

The dramatization in a low-key scholarly way called to the viewer's attention the similarities between conditions at the end of a war more than 100 years ago—frustrations, disunity and personal tragedy — and those faced by the nation today.

BROADWAY'S Tony Awards show, which for the past couple of seasons has been setting high marks never achieved by the Oscars or the Emmys, slipped a couple of notches with a very long program. Somehow it lost its former pace and zip.

True there were some samples from current theater. Ruby Keeler tapdanced in a scene from "No, No, Nanette," and there was a musical number from "Jesus Christ Superstar." Ethel Merman sang eight of her show-stopping tunes. Nine stars took turns working through a chronological — and delightful — reprise of Richard Rodgers' melodies. These two Broadway veterans were given standing ovations and special awards.

The entertainment portion of the program was fine.

The show slowed down in that old trouble spot: envelope-opening and presenting trophies. Eighteen awards were given out, almost all of them involving shows most people in the television audience had not seen and persons the viewer had never heard of.

It was a star-studded occasion, however. All the presenters were important performers, from Ingrid Bergman to Henry Fonda. But with all the little preliminary pleasantries and then the thank-yous it dragged considerably.

BUT BACHRACH'S hour, "Close to Me," was notable for the appearance of Rex Harrison talking through a couple of "My Fair Lady" numbers and reading a bit from the novel "Lost Horizons." The hit of the hour, however, was Carol Burnett singing a couple of lost-lady songs very well and never once clowning.

6 Amtrak: Is It on the Right Track?
Once upon a time nearly everyone in America rode trains. But in the past 25 years railroads have discouraged passenger service. Amtrak, the National Railroad Passenger Corp., took over the rail system last year, streamlined it, and is trying to revive passenger service. It faces many problems, but staff writer Terry Sattoria is convinced Amtrak can be a success.

Is it on the right track?

By Terry Sattoria

A man said: "It's the only answer, all they need is a system. A lot of people would rather ride a train than a bus or plane. This would be great to the coast."

A young man with shoulder-length hair said: "Airplanes, I'm a plane fan, but I'd use this thing. It would be a nice way to travel, if it rides as smooth as it looks."

A salesman said: "We need to relax more on business trips and this would be the way."

Another longhair: "I would, I would, I'd take it any place ... It would sure beat driving."

A woman said: "I think so, yes; definitely, we'd use it on vacations. It'd be a lot more economical and more fun."

These are a few comments from some of the thousands who saw Amtrak's new jet-powered TurboTrain when it visited Arizona a few months ago.

The TurboTrain is one of a series of moves to streamline the tattered, archaic, long-abused railroad system which was taken over in May 1971 by Amtrak, the National Railroad Passenger Corporation.

Amtrak has a long way to go, but it's trying desperately, against great odds, to get the American traveling public to recognize that there still are trains and that the rails provide the best answer to mass public transportation.

Once upon a time almost everybody in America rode the train: up and down the East Coast, all over the Midwest, across the expansive prairies of the great West to the shores of the Pacific Ocean. It was the only way to go.

The names are legend: El Capitan, The Super Chief, Senator, Silver Crescent, Silver Star, Patriot, Silver Meteor, City of San Francisco, North Coast Hiawatha, National Limited and on and on ...

It was part of a way of life. There were the war years when people had to be moved in great masses ... railroad stations, almost cathedral-like, teemed with humanity on their way somewhere ... "gonna take a sentimental journey ..."

And then time, in technological cadence, provided other means. Businessmen had to get there fast ... the jet age marched in, and train riding ended as a way of life for an entire generation.

Today, there are many who have never sat at the window of a coach car and watched as the train rolled through a grade crossing to the accompanying lullaby of the blinker signal's ding-ding-ding-ding – dang-dang-dang-dang.

But, if you listen closely – very closely – you still can hear the whistle down the line and the clickety-clack of steel wheels on rails. The whistle doesn't sound the same as the far-off wail of the steam locomotive, and the clickety-clack is fainter; but trains still whistle, and they're as fun to ride (perhaps more so) as they were in the heyday of rail passenger service.

However, it's not surprising that trains have become something of a novelty in a world of jumbo jets and space craft.

In 1929 there were as many as 20,000 passenger trains operating in the United States. Before Amtrak took over there were fewer than 450. Now there are only 214. Less than 30 years ago, America's railroads covered 90 billion passenger miles. In 1971, the number was down to seven billion.

All in all, however, railroads are not as dead as some may think – or some may wish ...

–"I think Amtrak's function should be to preside over the orderly shrinkage of rail passenger service."
–Benjamin F. Biaggini
Pres. Southern Pacific Company and Adviser to President Nixon

The fact is, Amtrak must face many perils.

ment and refurbishing old equipment as rapidly as money will allow. Meanwhile, it is stuck with a lot of old locomotives and passenger cars on which maintenance costs are abnormally high.

To get the money (Amtrak officials are currently asking Congress for $170 million) the fledgling corporation must win the goodwill of influential congressmen, who control the pursestrings.

And, it seems, these highly placed congressmen have yet to be convinced that Amtrak, which will have to be subsidized for several years, is necessary as a mode of mass transportation.

A major complaint heard most recently is that Amtrak is unable to keep its schedules. A survey taken several months ago revealed there is only one railroad in the nation with an "on time" record that approaches satisfaction. Its trains kept their schedules only 95 per cent of the time. One railroad has demonstrated that it can get its passengers to their destinations on schedule only 45 per cent of the time.

It appears that somewhere the system is breaking down, or that the railroads have a different set of priorities than Amtrak.

Amtrak trains operate on tracks owned and operated by the railroads, indeed a basic problem. The railroads often delay passenger trains in order to give priority to freight. It is not surprising to find some of Amtrak's trains running behind schedule.

Another peril: Amtrak is stuck with conductors, porters, ticket agents and reservation clerks inherited from the railroads. Their attitude toward Amtrak is not what it might be. In fact, as Amtrak president Roger Lewis indicated in a recent interview: "The attitude of personnel in some cases has been indifferent, even rude."

"We don't know why the train is late," the man behind the window said, twitching his nose like a dowager who suspected something awful in the tea. "Why don't you ask the people at Amtrak," he added, insinuating that it had to be their fault.

That type of negative attitude from a Los Angeles ticket agent, coupled with the remark by Southern Pacific president Biaggini as to what he feels is Amtrak's purpose, perhaps raises the question:

Where is Amtrak going from here?

To get some answers, I recently rode the Super Chief from Chicago to Los Angeles. Having read reports of delays, discourtesies and inconveniences, my enthusiasm was a bit dampened, but I had ridden trains as a youngster and, to me, they were the most exciting things I had ever seen.

Because of negative reports of Amtrak's dependability, I decided to make a reservation well ahead of my planned trip. I thought a month would be adequate.

I called the Amtrak number listed in the Long Beach phone directory and was treated very courteously by an Amtrak reservations agent. (These are personnel paid and hired by Amtrak, not the railroads.)

I explained that my trip plans called for me to leave Canton, Ohio, and that I required connections from that small Ohio city to Chicago where I would catch the Santa Fe Super Chief which leaves daily at 7 p.m. from Chicago.

The agent assured me there would be no problem and advised me to use a travel agency in Long Beach to confirm the reservation and purchase my ticket through the agency. I did.

A month later, two days before I was to leave for Ohio, my ticket arrived. ONE ticket — Chicago to L.A. — none for the trip from Canton to Chicago.

Why? Because it was impossible to confirm a train ride between the two east-west destinations. The travel agency told me, however, that I would certainly be able to buy a ticket at Canton — there should be no problem.

The agent was right — about buying a ticket. There was one problem, though. The only scheduled westbound passenger train from Canton to Chicago leaves at 3 a.m. — not very convenient. The train arrives in Chicago at 9:30 a.m., which means a layover of nine and a half hours.

I bought a plane reservation.

After fighting crowds at O'Hare Airport in Chicago and a hair-raising taxi ride on crowded expressways into the downtown area, at last there was the one-time magnificent Union Station — once the hubcap of the nation's passenger transportation system.

Today it's hard to imagine that great cavernous shell as a bustling travel center. The exterior is shabby like its greying interior. The three-story high vaulted building has a hollow echo.

Redcaps were scarce so baggage handling was mostly a do-it-yourself operation. Two-wheeled carts were available to transport belongings to the trains.

If all this sounds negative, it shouldn't. Actually, I've had more difficult times trying to get a plane from Los Angeles to San Francisco.

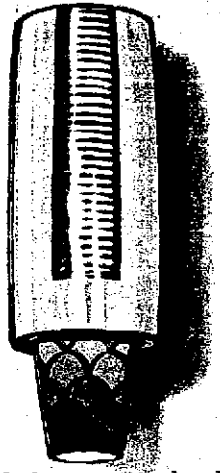

Once the train starts rolling along, the few inconveniences are forgotten. It's all replaced by a sort of leisure on wheels.

The Super Chief pulled out of Chicago's Union Station precisely on time.

There are few modes of transportation that provide a more neighborly atmosphere.

in your seat," remarked one traveler on board. She confided that planes frightened her, so she always took a train when she could. That was once a year when she visited her daughter's family in Albuquerque, N.M.

In buses, you also have to stay in your seat. But not so with trains. During the approximately 36-hour journey, people swarmed through the train, struck up conversations with other passengers, relaxed in lounge cars, enjoyed leisurely meals in the dining cars and drank in the scenery from lofty dome cars.

One very talkative, and obviously experienced, train rider probably missed a lot of scenery on this particular Chicago-Los Angeles trip. She was so busy encouraging others to look, she had little time for her own viewing.

"People will think I'm a hostess," she said, "only trains don't have them."

That's true for now, but it appears to be forthcoming. Several months ago Amtrak began training hostesses to help make travel via railroads more pleasant. Oddly enough, the hostesses' training is coming from the railroads' chief competitor — the airlines.

The plan, to provide a pretty, congenial source of information on tickering, scenery and train travel in general, may help lure passengers back to the rails.

There was a time when railroads were encouraging passenger traffic. In an ad in a September 1944 Colliers Magazine, Southern Pacific's emphasis was on passenger service:

"Miles from the meeting point of the Daylight and the freight, a dispatcher sits before a C. I. T. (Centralized Traffic Control) board. Colored lights show him the progress of both trains. At the right moment he moves levers connected with track signals and switches. In response, the freight glides onto a passing track, proceeds at reduced speed — the Daylight 'highballs' past. The freight then rolls back onto the main line track."

The Daylight was a passenger train between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Today, it's not the freight that would roll onto that siding.

Why?

According to Southern Pacific's Biaggini there is no market for long-distance, intercity passenger transportation by rail. "People just won't ride it, and they won't pay what they should to support the service. I don't think the taxpayers of this country should put up $300 to $400 million a year to support such a service if the demand is not there."

Amtrak believes there is a demand. In fact, they expect to operate on a break-even basis within five years from the time they took over rail passenger service.

Although the money loss Amtrak gave Congress for the current fiscal year was about $152 million, that figure is less than half the losses previously reported by the railroads.

Amtrak's Roger Lewis claims trains are carrying around 15 million passengers a year. And, he says, "Indications are that after several months of operation, the decline in rail passenger service has been arrested on the system as a whole."

Lewis is optimistic about the future of cross-country rail travel.

"In my lifetime, the population of this country has doubled. There is more affluence and a lot more leisure time. While in the past 10 years business travel has increased 50 per cent, nonbusiness travel has increased more than 70 per cent. I think we can attract people who have leisure time to travel."

Lewis doesn't feel that all people will travel by rail: "Perhaps they will fly to Chicago from New York, take a train farther west, then rent a car and drive to a vacation spot."

He feels that if Amtrak can combine rail service with buses, rented automobiles, airplanes, hotels — a whole "galaxy" of travel-interested businesses — "we can carry enough passengers to justify such service."

In fact, there has been some experimentation, by individual railroads, to bring the passengers' own cars along on the same train.

Do influential railroaders think this might work?

"No!" says Biaggini. "It's been done with some success only in Europe, where there isn't the kind of highway system we have in this country. You have to go from one village to another on a relatively primitive road system."

Biaggini may have struck a nerve. The highways in this country are better. And they're better for the very same reason that some congressmen are crying loud that the taxpayers shouldn't support Amtrak.

Subsidies.

In 1969-70 the federal government poured $2.2 billion into urban highways alone. The federal government has subsidized the automobile to the point that it has become a traffic bottleneck in many areas, including Los Angeles, and an ecological disaster.

Some experts believe that the revival of railroad passenger service, even if it has to be subsidized, is the only practical alternative to automobile travel in the near future.

And the facts are evident—

Amtrak has improved the service, renovated the rolling stock and spent a great deal of time thinking how to utilize the rails to passengers' best advantage.

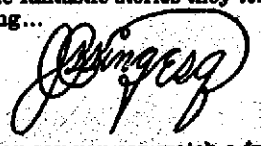

All that remains is for Amtrak to educate the traveling public to the fact that the railroads are still here, and convince them that they are here to stay. □

A bit of folklore is born recalling railroading's Golden Age.

THE HOBO'S WIFE.

The Millionaire's Drink A Bum Invented.

There's fact and fancy and who's to say where the line lies between them. Take the fantastic stories they tell of J. B. King...

They say you can watch a freight train go by and see his signature chalked on the sides of a dozen cars. Always the same name in the same handwriting. J. B. King, Esq.

Man or myth?

Some people think J. B. King is a myth. Just a name railroaders doodle the way G.I.'s scribbled "Kilroy was here." For all we know, those people are right. But, rumor has it that no less an authority than a President of the Commonwealth & Promontory Railroad insisted he'd met King in person.

Incident in Palm Beach?

The story of that alleged meeting sounds rather fanciful. Supposedly, it first came out at a party given by the magnate himself. Possibly at Palm Beach in 1919. Possibly at Newport in 1921. Instead of the usual French champagne, the cut crystal goblets were said to have contained a remarkable new drink which the President of the Commonwealth & Promontory Railroad introduced as a Hobo's Wife. Chided for "giving such a fetching drink an absolutely dreadful name," the host replied, "I didn't name it. The man who invented it is a gentleman whose signature is quite familiar to you all. J. B. King, Esq. I met him in the flesh a month ago."

J. B. King in person?

"One of the yard cops caught him chalking his name on my private car. 'What's the idea of writing on my car?' I asked him. 'Not yours,' he says, 'My car.' I would have decided then he was crazy as a coot, but he had a dignity that couldn't be denied. The man impressed me. 'Explain yourself,' I told him and offered him a chair.

The Hobo millionaire

"Now, you'll have to take my word for part of this because I swore to keep the fellow's secret and I will. 'I told you this is my car,' says he, 'And it is. I'm a stockholder in this railroad and a dozen more and I've shares enough to swing control.' Well, when I heard the name he was born with—which is the secret I'm not going to tell—I had to admit he had a right to call the car his own.

"We talked a good deal after that. He told me he'd grown up hating the wealth he'd been born to—mostly because he'd done nothing to earn it. So he'd taken a new name one day and started over as a hobo. He said there are few men in this world who get to decide for themselves who and what they want to be and he was proud of being one of them.

" 'I started out to write my name on all the cars I owned just to remind myself who they belonged to,' he told me. 'Then I decided to sign all the railroad cars in the country—to remind people that there's something left on this earth that can't be bought or sold or taken away from a man and that's his own good name. As for being a hobo, there's no sin in that. This country was built by hobos and so was this railroad."

Bottling the Hobo's Wife

"I asked him then if he didn't miss the comfort of a home and a wife. 'Sometimes I do,' he said, 'but mostly I'm content to be free of headaches and responsibilities. Once in awhile, when I get real lonesome, I hang up my hat somewhere and call it home and I drink a Hobo's Wife.' With that he pulled a bottle out of his bindle and poured out the best cocktail I ever had. That was the first time I tasted the drink I served you here tonight."

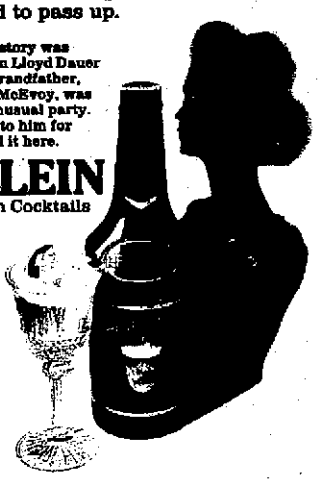

"I never saw King after that and I probably never will, but I owe him a toast for giving me the recipe, and I owe him the courtesy of calling it by the name he gave it."*

Today, everyone can enjoy the Hobo's Wife. Made as it was supposed to have been served by the President of the Commonwealth & Promontory Railroad. As for the man who is credited with inventing it, J. B. King, Esq., his signature still shows up freshly chalked on the sides of railroad cars. Even now.

What's a Hobo's Wife?

A unique blend of liquors—like nothing else you've found in a cocktail. It has a tang that reminds you of apples. An aroma redolent of spices. Mostly, it is too good to pass up.

*This apocryphal story was recounted by John Lloyd Dauer who claims his grandfather, Terence Patrick McEvoy, was a guest at that unusual party. We are indebted to him for permission to tell it here.

Wells Report

Picking Off the Fuzz

The great Sherlock Holmes loved to astound Dr. Watson and sundry others by correctly announcing the occupation of a visitor before said visitor had spoken a word. It is a parlor game that still has appeal, particularly at a dull cocktail party.

What does the fella across the room with the beard do, for instance? It's hard to say now. Ten years ago he almost certainly would have been an artist or psychiatrist. Five years ago he could have been a college professor. Today he might be almost anything except a banker, cop, politician or accountant.

Bankers are about the only people left who still wear white shirts. Even accountants have switched. Politicians you can detect by their compulsion to be all things to all men, even in their dress. Their clothes will be mod, but not too mod. Their hair will be not too short and not too long. They will wear sideburns, but only to the earlobes.

The tipoff to accountants, now that they have taken to wearing colored shirts and broad ties, is their feet. They have what one observer once described as "finkfeet." That is, small feet clad in low-cut, highly polished shoes with laces and tapered toes with a pattern on the leather. Finkfeet are held close together, or are crossed at the ankles, but rarely higher.

Some years back a state legislator introduced a bill, only half in jest, that would have required lobbyists to wear the traditional apparel of the industries they represented. The lobbyist for the lumber industry would presumably stroll through the 100-degree heat of Sacramento in a heavy mackinaw carrying a two-bladed ax. The lobbyist for the baking industry would patrol the corridors of the Capitol in whites and a floppy chef's hat.

There is one field of endeavor where guessing a person's occupation is more than a game. It is not unknown for the Joseph Gendarmes to abandon the usual blue suit and helmet in pursuit of evildoers. In nonvictim crimes such as prostitution, drug-peddling, pornography and bookmaking, the evildoer's freedom and business success depend upon his ability to recognize "the vice" behind the business suit or sports shirt.

Barbara Ponse, the Cal State Los Angeles student who did a paper for a recent anthropological meeting on her experience as a waitress in a bar showing pornographic movies, tells how waitresses were instructed in how to spot plainclothes vice officers.

"First of all, when vice officers came into the bar, they usually looked around the room rather than at the films. They had short hair, which in itself was unremarkable, but it was a little more military or severe in style than usual," she reported.

"Their attitude toward the waitresses was different from the customers'. They were almost uniformly unfriendly and seldom if ever tipped."

The waitresses were instructed to keep an eye peeled for "the vice" and to tell the projectionist if they spotted any. The projectionist would then switch from hard-core pornographic films to so-called "beavers" or "nudies."

One of the major ways of spotting a vice officer was by his shoes.

"They were often dressed in slacks and sport shirts that were indistinguishable from those worn by the other customers. But their shoes were always spit-and-polish black. They just didn't fit with the rest of their clothes," Mrs. Ponse reported.

"Policemen walk with a characteristic rolling stride that is hard to define but unmistakable once you learn to look for it. A waitress would remark, 'There goes a cop; look at the way he walks.'

"Another characteristic that would mark a policeman was the way he stood — legs far apart, pelvis forward, arms crossed. He looked as if he had been transplanted from guard duty somewhere. It was an occupational stance."

However they do it, there is no doubt that there are certain individuals whose ability to recognize a plainclothes police officer approaches that of the fabled Sherlock Holmes.

The late Howard Sweet, a captain of Long Beach police, used to tell how once when sitting on stakeout in plain clothes in an unmarked car reading a paper, he was approached by a man he had never seen before.

"Can you tell me the time, officer?" the man asked. Surprised, Howard told him the time. The man then courteously thanked him and walked away. □

Shipwrecked Joey's Missing Shotgun

By Dick Emery

WHERE the waterfront curves between San Pedro and Wilmington, Joey O. Jacobs runs an oasis called Shipwrecked Joey's. This story is about a shotgun that used to hang against a mirror behind the bar.

It was an old shotgun, plain, single-barreled, with a travel-beaten walnut stock stained black with sweat and grime. The gun had a curious and honorable history.

The gun no longer hangs there, although a great many other relics stand propped against the mirror or hang from the walls and even from the ceiling.

In quiet and coolness and dim light Joey pours refreshments to travelers of one kind or another, mostly truck drivers and seafarers, with a measure of dock workers and tourists and sight-seers. He knows a couple thousand regulars by their first names and they all know Joey.

They bring him curios for his collection. Or they say over a beer one day, "Hey, Joey, I know where you can buy a Samoan canoe paddle."

Or a Turkish sultan's slippers, or a square nail from Sutter's Fort, or a lifejacket with TITANIC on it. And eventually the paddle, the slippers, the nail and the lifejacket show up in Joey's museum.

"Travelers stop by, and they look around and see something from somewhere they've been," Joey explains. "Makes 'em feel they're among friends." He points out some of his exhibits.

"Ship's bell off a captain's gig. Dunno whether he missed it. That E plaque came off the USS Platt. Oldest tanker in the Navy. Mothballed, if she's still afloat. Those two big wooden spears came from the Amazon River country. I'm never goin' there.

"Turtle shell up there, that's from Magdalena Bay. Dunno the name of the stuffed giant lizard. They got a lot of 'em in South America. The bull's horns, those're water buffalo horns, from the Philippines.

"The fire ax came off a San Francisco ferry. And those running lights, they're from the old Fighting Bob — they're 75 years old."

A parachute flare pistol from an English merchantman, a starfish from the Great Barrier Reef, a doughnut from the USS Cabildo, trinkets from Kansas, New Jersey, Texas, Alaska, India. A painted wooden sign, STALAG 1703. "They tell me it came from a German prison camp."

Joey's travel gallery has become a sanctuary belonging, in a way, to everybody. Some of the things look ugly to some people and beautiful to others. Some people thought the old shotgun was ugly. But it was beautiful to Joey.

Then one day a grumble of outrage sounded over the waterfront. Word got around that Shipwrecked Joey's had got robbed.

"Anybody stick up old Joey like that, take somethin' right off the wall — in the old days, they'd get strung up!"

What happened was this:

At 9:05 o'clock one March night four strangers sauntered into Shipwrecked Joey's. One drew a pistol and called to Joey and a couple of truckers at the bar.

"This is a holdup. Keep your hands down and don't move."

One of the four climbed over the bar and unhooked the old shotgun from its place over the mirror. He handed the gun to another of the four, who dug a shotgun shell out of his jacket pocket and slipped it into the gun's breech.

The gun snapped closed again — Klatch! — and swung around until its muzzle pointed at Joey.

The other two no-goods took $800 from the till. Then all four eased out the back door, covering their retreat with two pistols — and Joey's old shotgun —, and vanished into the night.

A police report described the bandits, but not the shotgun, beyond saying that Joey put its value at $250 because it was sort of an antique with sentimental value which you can't put a dollar-mark on.

It was a long time before Joey filled in the blank space against the mirror — with a strange looking wooden dipper nearly three feet long.

"From the Philippines," Joey would explain. "Use dippers like that over there when they're making wine."

If he ever got the gun back, though, he would say, the dipper would get moved and the shotgun would be hung back in its same old place.

"Policemen came in here after the stick-up figured it was strange the bandits brought shells to fit the gun," Joey would say. "Thing was, they must have come in earlier, must have recognized that old shotgun for what it was."

And what the old shotgun was, Joey would say if anyone asked, was a special bandit-killer made back in the mid-1800s for guards "ridin' shotgun" on Wells, Fargo & Company stagecoaches and freight wagons.

"My father gave me that gun back in Missouri when I was a boy," Joey — now crowding 58 years — would say. "It was an old gun even then.

"Said right on the gun, 'Made by Hopkins & Allen.' Great old name! The whole idea was to put a shotgun in the guard's hands he could swing so handy, so quick, he could get the drop on a road agent.

"Get the drop was the whole thing. That's why the short barrel, only 21 inches long. And single-barrel, for lightness. Twelve gauge, and a buckshot load — that'd get the job done and let the stage and its passengers, or the freight wagon and its cargo, get along wherever they were headed.

"Not one single bit of ornament on that old gun! No notches, either. But I always had a feeling it had got the show on the road many a time."

Truck drivers resting up from the long, lonely roads used to look up at that old gun and ask about it and then look at it a long time, Joey said, and talk about what stagecoaching must have been like in the 1850s and 60s and 70s when "ridin' shotgun" was one way a steel-nerved man could make a living, though maybe not for long.

"You know what they'd tell me? Tell me they'd look at that old shotgun by the mirror and could hear the ponies' hooves pounding the road, even smell the sagebrush and dust.

"No, I never put a shell in the gun. Don't know whether it would fire, being so old, and modern shells being loaded different. Hung it up there for travelers to look at. They like to be took back awhile, and out into open country we don't have enough of any more."

Meanwhile, the four bandits who hit Joey's place hid out awhile until they blew Joey's $800 and then got brave again as bandits do and pulled stickups around Wilmington and San Pedro and Torrance, using what the victims called a short-barreled shotgun.

That got them called, of course, the "Shotgun Bandits," while they lasted — and there have been a lot of "Shotgun Bandits" in our times and in Wells, Fargo & Co.'s times, too, and none of them lasted long. The four split up — one of them headed north — but three were riding together in a car one night when Torrance police hauled them down.

The car they were driving showed a big jaggedy hole in its windshield. One of the no-goods, it turned out, had fumbled a trigger at a stickup somewhere and blasted the glass accidentally.

It might have been the same stupe who, when the Torrance police stopped the car, fumbled a pistol trying to hide it under the car seat — or trying to grab it from where he had hit it there — and shot himself in the foot, right in front of the policemen.

Before the dust settled from that hurly-burly, detectives had found the bandits' hide-out and there, sure enough, they found Joey's shotgun. In time the fourth member of the earlier gang also fell into the law's clutch, up north somewhere, so all four no-goods came to justice — as the saying goes. But there is still more, about the shotgun.

One of the detectives who worked on the original case at Shipwrecked Joey's is a long-time robbery-squad man at Harbor Division, which is LAPD's 282-man outfit working the port communities west of Long Beach. Sgt. Robert Kinsey can't forget what happened to Joey's shotgun.

He was talking about it one night not long ago in the station's coffee room, when business was dull and conversations turned to past events.

"Joey really did like that shotgun," the detective said.

"He didn't like getting robbed, but what he hated worse was losing that old gun. Then the gang got busted and the gun was found, and we told Joey.

"He was a happy man!"

Of course, though, the gun had to be kept for the trials, as evidence. And even after the trials, there came a hitch.

"That gun was made with a 21-inch barrel, plenty short," Kinsey said. "There's a federal law against having any shotgun with a barrel shorter than 18 inches. But what those dirty bandits had done was take a hacksaw and cut six inches off the barrel. That made it a sawed-off shotgun and Joey couldn't get it back."

So the Philippine wooden dipper hangs over the mirror where the shotgun used to hang, in Shipwrecked Joey's; but here's what finally happened to the old gun itself:

A year after the trials which sent the four no-goods to prison, a tugboat laden with two tons of deadly weapons chugged out to sea from Wilmington. It was the annual batch of ugly junk from Los Angeles police lockers.

The junk splashed into the Pacific five miles offshore in a place where 600 fathoms of cold salt water covers a sea floor of mud.

Down there, covered with muck and murderous trash, rusting and forever abandoned on the bottom of the sea, lies whatever's left of Joey's treasured shotgun. □

HAIR+

You don't have to be an anthropologist, a behavioral expert or a sociologist to know that, with the possible exception of the Neanderthal era, these are the greatest hair-raising years of all times.

It's perfectly obvious to any observer on the American scene that the U.S. populace has grown into a nation of hair-etics. And that all those splendid thatches and flowing manes seen in offices and on campuses have any number of political, social and economic implications.

But, not so well known, is the fact that a handful of pioneering medical men, research scientists and beauty experts are discovering there's a lot more to hair than how long a bank teller should wear his or whether ponytails should be worn under football helmets.

Some of the most important research, of course, is in the beauty field. But even beauty experts are finding out more about what they always knew — that hair tells much more about a person than meets the eye. And, now, on the basis of findings from a new type hair microanalysis used by some with-it beauty salons, it is not uncommon these days for a hairstylist to tell a patron he or she should see a doctor.

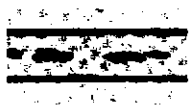

Scientists are, indeed, finding that hair is more than women's (and yes,

GIVE YOUR HAIR A PHYSICAL CHECK-UP

DID YOU EVER THINK YOU MIGHT HAVE—SICK HAIR?
MANY PEOPLE DO, YOU KNOW.

There's a way to determine the health and condition of your hair. That is through Hair Analysis. It's like giving your hair a physical check-up.

It begins by taking samples of your hair. These samples are tested on a sensitive instrument called a Micro Gram Scale. Readings taken off the Micro Gram Scale register your hair's tensile strength and elasticity. (That is, is your hair dry, brittle, weak, etc.).

Then a photomicrograph is taken of your hair. This photograph is returned to you. From it you are able to actually see the internal structure of your hair shaft. Is it broken, damaged? Is the shaft rough, split?

All this information is examined by trained hair analysts. They diagnose your hair problem and recommend a corrective program.

Our salon Hair Analysis program works in conjunction with Redken Laboratories. Our trained cosmetologists study the corrective program designed for you. They set up a treatment schedule to rebuild and maintain the health of your hair.

If you suspect you might have "sick" hair—shouldn't you make plans to give it a check-up.

Call today for your Hair Analysis appointment!

REDKEN

MR. WESLEY'S is a qualified Redken representative. We will submit your hair sample to the Redken Laboratory for complete analysis. This analysis enables us to properly advise your hair treatment.

men's) crowning glory. Those sexy locks that have been the subject of poets, songwriters and playwrights down through the centuries, today are being scrutinized under powerful microscopes to tell an exciting new story.

Some for instances:

— It has been discovered that blood types can be determined from hair samples with 100 per cent accuracy. It's the quickest means of blood typing used today in forensic medicine.

— Whether a person has been poisoned by lead poisoning, arsenic or mercury shows in the hair.

— Criminologists have found hair can be used in a type of identification known as "cuticle fingerprinting." The outer cellular layer of the hair, under a microscope, shows up much like the scales of a fish or shingles on a roof, and for each individual they are slightly different. A count of these gives an identification similar to fingerprinting.

— Chromosome counts in the root sheath of the hair can be used to determine sex, as they were among some contestants in recent Olympic Games.

— Protein malnutrition has, for some time, been most readily identifiable through hair analysis.

— And now, Dr. Algie C. Brown, a dermatologist and researcher at the Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta, Ga., thinks — on the basis of recent findings — that hair can be just as good a guidpost in diagnosing disease as urine or blood samples.

Working with Georgia Tech physical chemist Dr. R. J. Gerdes, Brown has already linked several diseases with abnormalities in the structure of hair fibers.

Key to the new procedure, according to a recent article in Newsweek, is a scanning electron microscope (SEM), a relatively recent innovation that not only magnifies objects 100,000 times, but also gives a striking three-dimensional appearance that readily shows up malformations in the hair shaft.

Meanwhile, an 11-year-old California beauty house, Redken Laboratories in Van Nuys, a pioneer in microphotography hair analysis, had already discovered in servicing its 78,000-member beauty and men's hairstyling salons that derangements in body functions do, indeed, show up in hair microanalysis.

"We're primarily interested in beautifying hair, not in offering medical advice," says Dr. Ron DiSalvo, vice president in charge of research and education for Redken.

"But hair is such a tattletale. Microphotography is the Redken way of studying hair structure. The strand of hair is magnified more than 200 times and body ailments do show up. When problems are found, the client is advised to see a doctor — unless the problem is merely damaged hair which the cosmetologist can treat."

And why is hair such a tattletale? "Because hair is the fastest-growing tissue in the body with the possible exception of bone marrow — also it is made up largely of protein," Dr. DiSalvo points out. "It is reasonable to assume, therefore, that abnormalities in body chemistry would be just as likely to show up in hair as in other body tissues."

Besides, beauty and health are so closely allied, it's difficult to separate them.

For instance: Even an aspirin or an antibiotic shows up on the hair in the form of a waxy coating. And, if not removed with a special conditioner, remains on the hairshaft for 17 days.

"I think we all realize that improper diet, illness, excessive medication and pollution can have startling effects on our hair, as well as our skin."

Besides microanalysis (more about that later), Redken concentrates on scientifically prepared hair and skin products sold exclusively to accredited hair salons. The line includes acid-balanced, organic hair shampoos and conditioners. There's also a soapless beauty bar that goes the full route in the shower, cleansing both body and hair.

DiSalvo, a handsome bearded scientist whose doctorate is in microbiology, sees all sorts of new possibilities and new horizons for people in the hair-styling profession which, he notes, "has come a long way since the recent days of standup pin curls, back-combing and cookie-cutter hairstyles."

HAIR

"The field is constantly changing. As we learn more about the body and its chemistry, we must have new approaches." Among the new approaches suggested by Dr. DiSalvo are basic lessons in micromolecular biology, the histochemical structure of hair and cosmetic chemistry.

"I'm not saying people who style hair have to be experts in all these things. But they should be aware of the principles and know about the practical application."

One such stylist with all kinds of scientific know-how is Vidal Sassoon, the British innovator who revolutionized the industry in the 1960s with his architectural and geometric cuts, those controversial headline-getting hairdos that made his name a household word among the world's Beautiful People.

But his real contribution is something more significantly durable, if less sensational: the Sassoon concept. Behind the glamorous salons in London, Manhattan and Beverly Hills is perhaps the finest school of hairdressing arts ever established.

Dedicated would-be artists come from all over the world with "teach me how to style hair." Every Sassoon stylist must begin as an apprentice, studying each phase of the business at less than extravagant pay. He must first be an artisan and, if he has that certain something, he finally becomes an artist.

And he must have scientific knowledge of hair and hair problems. Sassoon's Beverly Hills shop is a leading evangelist of the Redken hair-condition analysis, offering a total conditioning program to achieve and maintain healthy hair, the basis for any good hairstyle.

One hairdresser in the Long Beach area who is well into the microanalysis technique for scientific care and feeding of the hair is Wes Stanley, an incurable positive thinker who is active in the Long Beach Hairdressers Guild and owns two thriving salons — one for men, one for women — at Spring and Studebaker.

A with-it stylist who's been snipping, clipping and conditioning hair for 20 years, Stanley is now up to his well-trimmed beard in biodegradable, organic and protein conditioners ... also in hair samples and well-kept files that keep him up-to-now on how the health of his patrons' hair is progressing.

On his or her first visit (yes, he uses hair analysis for men, too), each patron is asked to fill out an extensive, two-page questionnaire, much in the same manner a patient is required to do when visiting a physician. It, along with a snippet of the patron's hair, is sent to Redken Laboratories and is returned with a complete hair analysis.

What's done in hair analysis? First, a strand of hair is wound around a Microgram Scale to test elasticity and tensile strength. Then, under the microscope it goes for superscrutiny to determine protein structure, porosity (if too porous, won't hold hairstyle) and excessive alkalinity (usually caused from harsh detergent shampoos).

A cross-section of the hair shaft is studied to see if cuticle alignment is compact (if not, hair will not reflect light ... if jagged, like barbed wire, you can expect a case of the frizzies).

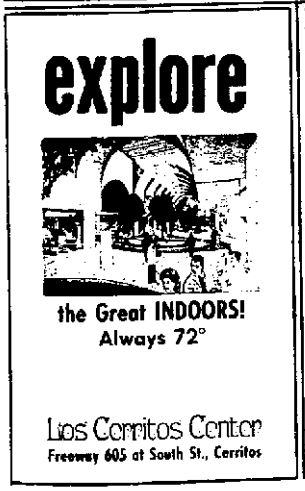

What's the hair doctor's remedy? "First, an amino-protein shampoo," says Stanley. "Hair is composed almost entirely of protein. About 97 per cent, in fact. So, naturally, it requires more protein to build it, reconstruct it, whatever. We use only hydrolized proteins — proteins that have been broken down into smaller amino acids so they're absorbed immediately.

"Each product used, in fact, falls somewhere between 4.5 and 5.5 on the pH scale — corresponding to the healthiest state of you own hair."

The results? "Spectacular," says Stanley. "I thought I knew the hair business until I started learning from hair analysis. It takes the guesswork out of hair care. Microphotography allows you — and the patron — to see exactly how the hair is being affected by caustic permanent wave or bleaching solutions, by improper cutting or combing.

"Also, by being able to see what actually happens to the hair during application of color or permanent waving solution, you can determine proper formulas and timing for each head of hair before the work is done. Even more important, you can determine what conditioners are needed to prevent further damage to already weakened hair."

He tells of one blond swimming enthusiast who walked into the shop with a bad case of discolor-itis brought on by overexposure to chlorine. "Her hair was green enough to make her a candidate for 'The Munsters'."

After four organic conditioners, she walked out of the shop with hair that looked like spun gold, says Stanley.

"The analytical approach to hairstyling may be an added load ... and may make a guy feel like he should enroll in college for a refresher course in science — but, believe me, the results are well worth it."

And it seems "worth it" for his well-tressed customers, too. Business has increased 75 per cent since he went into hair analysis nine months ago.

And what's the "in" look for 1972?

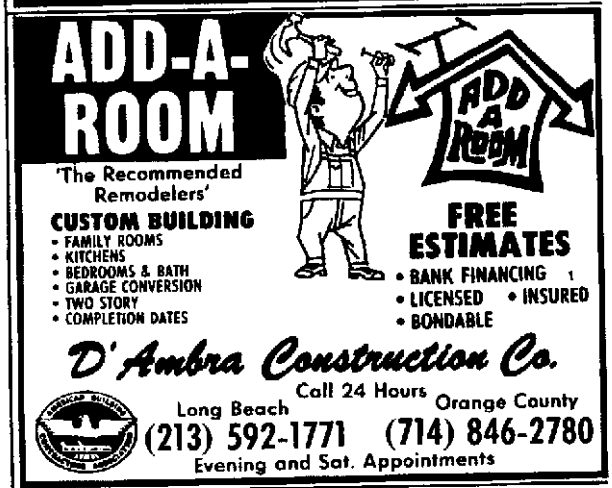

The analyzed answer: Your hair can be any style — windblown, short, casual, shaggy, smooth, long, flowing, rippling, curled, straight, ponytailed, braided or whipped into a topknot. Just so everyone of the 140,000 blond hairs on your head (90,000 if you're a redhead, 110,000 if you're a brunette) are healthy and at their shiny best.

For more suggestions on how to keep them that way, see Rx for Healthy Hair, page 26. □

with shades on their eyes

A window is like the eye of a room. And with subtle make-up it can tell a lot about the personality of a room.

A clever touch of color, the correction of a bad feature and dramatic emphasis on good points achieve the same result for a room that good make-up does for a woman's face.

Windows can be a problem — although these difficulties are easier to overcome than most other architectural problems.

If women were home-builders — instead of the buyers — chances are windows wouldn't be too big, too small, too high or low, badly placed or badly spaced — and space would bear a relationship to the things that have to go into them. Decorating skill continues to have to make up for the shortcomings of planning and space-allocating.

As it is now, however, people who build houses are not the ones who have to make them livable.

It's the homemaker that continues to make-do.

There was a time when windows were merely something to look through — today every window is an opportunity for "window fashion." Homemakers and interior decorators alike are, more and more, "using" windows to add to the style, mood or dimension of every kind of room.

"In fact, decorating windows has reached the 'high fashion' point in variety and design," according to Marilyn Cohen, decorator for Aaron Schultz Furniture.

"Never before has there been such an exciting variety of window fashions . . . bold colors and patterns are available, new fibers, fiber blends and finishes in curtains and draperies take a minimum of care, make fabrics more sun-resistant and add body."

There are several ways to solve window problems. However, draperies seem to be the number one choice to conceal these shortcomings.

CORNER WINDOWS — They can upset your entire decorating scheme — or worse yet, a single window stuck too far into the corner. Instead of making the decorating difficult, why not put these windows to advantage? A bold color drapery will fill the corner with brightness — a fine old chair or exciting plant will add interest.

TALL, NARROW WINDOWS — These side-by-side problems may give too much height to your room. They need a wider and shorter appearance and the trick is to treat the pair as a unit. Draperies hung across both windows will pull them together and add the needed width. You may want to add over-draperies pulled back low to the side and tied with an attractive cord and tassel.

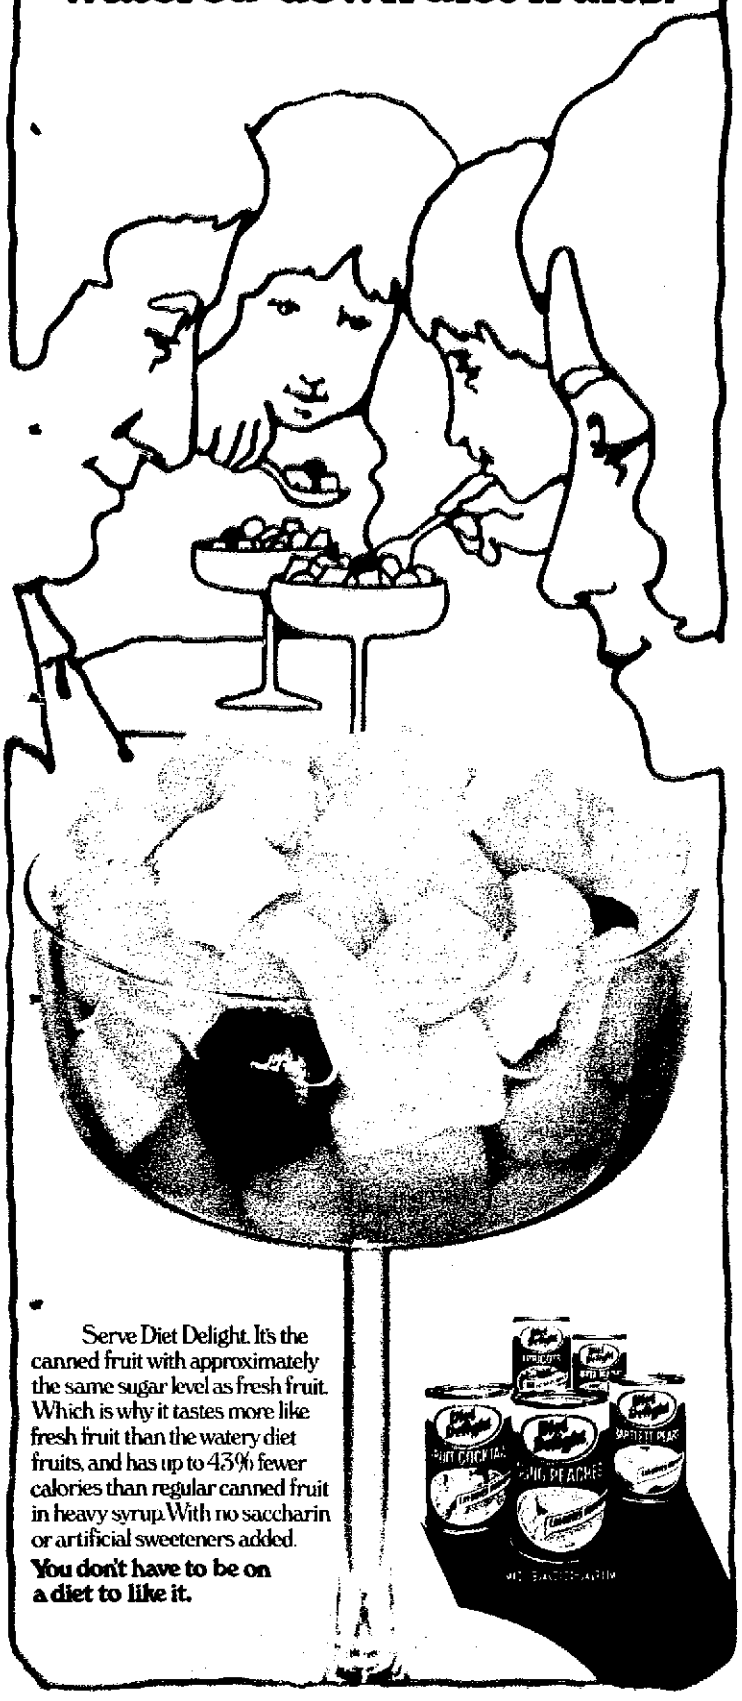

RANCH OR STRIP WINDOW — Make them a part of a decorative wall, using a low sofa, pictures and harmonizing shorty draperies to optically lower the window.

PICTURE WINDOW — One that doesn't really offer a pictorial view. The solution is found in hanging shorty draperies to

How to get your family off thick sugary syrups without serving those blah watered-down diet fruits.

Serve Diet Delight. It's the canned fruit with approximately the same sugar level as fresh fruit. Which is why it tastes more like fresh fruit than the watery diet fruits, and has up to 43% fewer calories than regular canned fruit in heavy syrup. With no saccharin or artificial sweeteners added.

You don't have to be on a diet to like it.

mask what needs to be covered, with matching side draperies and valance used for additional unity and charm.

Another idea for a problem window flanked by book shelves is adding drapery fabric to the wall.

To give an inadequate window an important width-wise stretch, use cafe-styled draperies. Extra fabric can be applied to the wall between the shelves with adhesive. Because the fabric is permanently mounted, easy maintenance is a must. Fiberglas is one suggestion — only weekly vacuuming is necessary to keep the wall and draperies looking new.

Now you have a wide-open look based on what was once a too-narrow window.

Lining draperies is a question that stumps many homemakers. Many wonder why linings are necessary.

They aren't, but there are several reasons in their favor: to protect your new window fabrics from the sun, add body, insure privacy.

They also give windows a more uniform appearance from the outside — and in addition help hold heat in winter months, and protect against sun's hot rays in summer.

If draperies aren't your cup of tea, however, another treatment is shades.

There is hardly a window built that can't be personalized with a shade. New fabrics, colors, patterns and installation methods make them one of the most dramatic ways to decorate.

If you have a vintage window that you'd like to disguise, shades are ideal.

Because many are vinyl coated, a wide variety of shades are washable (ideal for a child's room), and, they're colorfast.

Customizing is easy by adding your own trimmings — loop-edge, tasseled, ball and brush fringes, appliques, braids or special shade pulls.

Stencils or fabric paints can also blend the shades with other decor.

Some shades, however, do more than tame light and give privacy. They also soften the severe architectural lines of some window frames and give rooms a well-groomed look with simplicity of texture, accented by a contrasting color outline at the scalloped hem.

Shades also can work as part of the total fabric look that makes rooms look their Sunday best every day. A homemaker can choose a favorite fabric pattern and have it laminated into a custom shade. The same fabric can be turned into custom-made bedspreads, draperies and slipcovers. The total look minimizes architectural defects, and is right on target for "getting it all together."

A series of shades can also serve as a room divider suspended from the ceiling. Privacy is merely a matter of pulling the shades down full length to the floor.

The illusion of a separate room can be achieved by leaving one shade up to suggest a door. When the full area is needed, the shades can be rolled up and out of the way to the ceiling without the trouble and bulk of other room-separating devices such as screens and sliding walls.

In rooms where windows are small or scarce, shades can hide the deficiencies. Large shades can be put up over the windows and even in places where there aren't any windows. The effect is something like wearing a wig. No one has to know unless they're told —or they peek underneath.

Shades also take the bad news out of bad views. If the outlook is a brick wall or something just as undesirable, a bright floral or snappy geometric shade can be rolled down to hide the outside and add interest to the inside.

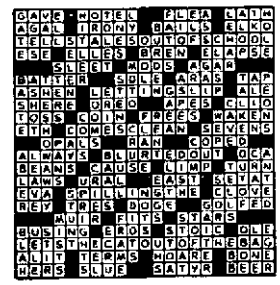

Of course, there are other ways to add some window makeup:

SHUTTERS: Use next to glass in windows or doors

Fling convention to the wind in a window treatment guaranteed to gain attention. Sturdy cotton-duck shades provide easy light control and insure privacy without sacrificing the view.

ANSWER TO CROSSWORD PUZZLE

in place of curtains. Some are used under curtains or draperies, others cafe-style. The inside section of the shutter may be of fabric, cane, mesh, grille cloth, plastic or wire screen.

VENETIAN BLINDS: One of the popular forms of controlling light, air and privacy, these are now being used for a glamorous treatment. Although they've been around for years, new slim slats, laminated color and imaginative decorative effects are making them more useful.

BEADS: Use a curtain of beading hanging in strands and attached to hollow brass rods at top and bottom.

Decorating the "eyes of a room" should be carried out very carefully — you don't want to cause a blind spot. □

If you don't slim down fast with Slender, you're cheating!

You, too, may lose 4 pounds the first week with Slender. Why not? Just don't backslide. Stick with 900 Slender calories a day and you'll get a thrill when you step on the scale.

Clinical study works for problem dieters

We put people, who were at least 20% overweight, on Slender for three weeks. That's four Slender meals a day, totaling 900 calories. At the end of the first week, dieters had lost an average of more than 4 pounds. During the next two weeks, losses averaged 3½ pounds a week. Many of the dieters on the program told us they were not unduly hungry and found Slender "surprisingly filling".

Low in calories, high in nutrition

Many 900 calorie diets are fad diets which emphasize one nutrient over others. But a Slender meal is nutritionally balanced. Whether it's instant Slender, mixed with the substantial nutrition of milk, or Slender chilled from the can —every glass supplies ¼ of your daily recommended adult dietary allowance of protein. Plus the regular vitamins and minerals you need, including vitamins C and B-complex.

Slender counts calories for you

With Slender, you don't have to get involved with measuring out tiny portions of this and that. And you avoid costly calorie mistakes which may undo your diet. Slender counts the calories, so you always know where you stand in the calorie battle.

How to slim down sensibly with Slender

If you want fast results to get your incentive up, go strictly Slender for a week. Then go back to other foods in diet proportions, but have your Slender for at least one meal. Whether you go strictly Slender again for another week later on depends on how much you want to lose. But you should ask your doctor before starting any program aimed at weight loss.

One thing's certain, you'll find Slender wears well in your diet. It's so rich and satisfying. Slender from Carnation. Dieting without nonsense.

Rx for healthy HAIR

□ Ever notice the words people use to describe hair? Healthy. Shiny. Alive. Or limp. Dull. Dead. Actually, the hair you see on the head is dead, so to speak. Dead tissue. But you don't have to overkill it. Here are some ways to keep yours alive and healthy.

○ Beautiful hair is healthy hair. It must begin with a healthy body — a body that is in nutritional, metabolic and harmonal balance. So watch your diet and check with your doctor to see if you need vitamin supplements. Cleanliness is all important. If the scalp is not kept clean, pores become clogged. Hair loss and other hair problems often stem from tiny, mild infections which can be stopped with shampooing before they start.

▪ A tip for oily hair: After shampoo and rinse, give your hair a last-minute spurt of cold water; it will temporarily discourage oil glands from producing.

○ Shampooing sometimes leaves hair tangled and full of static; a cream rinse will solve this problem and also help remove any residue of soap. Besides rinses sold in the drugstore, there are some good ones right in the kitchen: vinegar for brunettes and lemon for blondes are still old standbys. But don't use a lemon rinse on hair that's been overbleached — the acid in the lemon could damage the hair.

• How to brush (very important): there's more to brushing the hair than counting to one hundred. Bend over at the waist, hair thrown forward. Starting at the nape, press the brush against the scalp to churn up circulation, then brush down and out to the very ends of the hair, sweeping away dirt, distributing natural oils, stirring in air — and, consequently, "body." Never brush harshly and never brush back from the hairline where hair's weakest and most apt to break.

□ You don't have to stand on your head to get good hair . . . but, if you can manage it, it helps you manage your hair. Anything that urges blood to the head nourishes the scalp. Better circulation is bound to mean better hair.

○ S.O.S. for swimmers: Despite the great back-to-nature feeling of swimming without a cap, don't do it. Salt water adheres to the hair shaft, making it sticky and unmanageable . . . and chlorinated water raises havoc with almost any hair, especially blond or blond-tinted. For added insurance against water-logged hair, wear a band of terry cloth or chamois under the cap. Chamois is particularly effective because its thick nap is so absorbent.

- The best comb is one with wide teeth that have rounded edges, so that combing won't "cut" your hair or scratch your scalp.
- Don't tease. Don't back comb. Avoid wearing a ponytail; it puts tension on the hair which may make it fall out, especially along the sides.

□ Hair is a long skinny strand of something called keratin, the same protein basis as nails. There are about 100,000 to 150,000 hairs per head and they're replaced with a brand new set about 12 times during a lifetime. Anywhere from 40 to 100 hairs are lost per day, so don't be alarmed to see your brush or comb collecting them by the end of the day. Each hair grows between 1/4 and 1/2 inch per month, lives two to six years and is then pushed out and replaced by a new one.

How about that? Your Uncle Elmo and Aunt Delilah are visiting from North Dakota and today's going to be a big day, because you're all going to tour the Queen Mary.

Which brings up a complication. Where will you eat? And will it be luncheon or dinner?

Dining aboard the Queen is most enjoyable, now that the Lord Nelson prime rib au jus restaurant is open. But perhaps your guests would like something different, such as fresh sea food, a steak sandwich or luscious barbecued spareribs.

In that case, I have a suggestion. Try the Reef restaurant at 1200 S. Harbor Scenic Dr., just a few hundred yards from the Queen. It's owned by David Tallichet's Specialty Restaurants Corp. of Long Beach which also operates the Lord Nelson and many other facilities aboard the Queen.

Now in its lucky 13th year, the Reef is a superb tropical restaurant with a large parking lot. Its dining rooms have large picture windows overlooking the blue waters of the harbor. In the distance can be seen the impressive skyline of downtown Long Beach, which seems to change every month or so as new structures are added.

Each Saturday and Sunday, the Reef delights visitors from the Queen Mary by serving both luncheon and dinner. Manager Ralph Fulton and his colorfully costumed staff offer luncheon from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., emphasizing steak sandwiches, Reuben sandwiches, teri-burgers and scrumptious fresh salads.

RALPH FULTON
Luncheon or Dinner?

Dinner is served from noon on. Offered are beautiful entrees prepared by a skilled continental chef, Deter Jochmann, who's from Germany. Featured are filet of mahi mahi Waikiki, $4.25; Tahitian drumsticks (barbecued spareribs), $3.95; roast prime rib au jus, $5.95; jumbo shrimp Calcutta, $4.65; teriyaki steak, $6.25; beef brocherre, $4.95, and several other choice steaks. All are with fresh relishes, tossed salad, baked potato or rice, hot cheese bread and beverage.

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

FOR REASONS which I've never been able to understand, many of the Mexican restaurants in Southern California don't feature sea foods.

An exception is Ashley's El Encanto, 1731 E. Fourth St., a Long Beach landmark since 1938. Its owners are Grace Ashley and her sons, Damron and Diamond. They are well aware that Mexico — with its vast coastline — is renowned for catches of game fish, large shrimp and lobsters.

For years Diamond and Damron have made regular trips to the Guadalajara region of Mexico, where they acquired many of the traditional recipes offered at Ashley's. One of their most interesting dishes, served every day, is called pescado Vera Cruzana.

GRACE ASHLEY
Mexican Sea Treat

Caricatures by Tony Korba

Pescado is the Spanish word for fish. The dish consists of a generous serving of haddock, a tender, boneless whitefish which falls apart at the touch of a fork. It is broiled and then topped with a lively (but not too lively) Mexican caldillo sauce. The price, $2.25, includes fresh coleslaw or tossed green salad, fried beans, Spanish rice, warm tortillas or bread and tostaditos (appetizers of tortilla chips dipped in a snappy sauce.)

Decorated like a colorful Mexican hacienda, Ashley's serves every day from 11:30 a.m. to 11:45 p.m. The menu offers dozens of luncheon and dinner ideas, ranging from a la carte dishes to combination dinners, salads and 95-cent children's plates.

Among the dinner entrees are chili verde con carne, $2.95, consisting of small strips of beef in a sauce of peeled green chilis, tomatoes and onions. Another favorite is gallina en mole, chicken in a Spanish sauce, $2.25. The combination dinners, priced from $1.95 to $3.25, feature enchiladas, tacos, tamales and chili rellenos.

Ashley's lounge, which seats 35, was recently redecorated. The new furnishings include a huge gold mirror behind the bar, red flock wallpaper and Spanish-style wrought iron candle holders. □

Analysis of shed baby teeth from city children is proving to be a new diagnostic test for detection of chronic lead poisoning.

Urban children in lead environments were found to have a tooth lead level almost five times higher than that of suburban children.

The detection process utilizes knowledge that lead is absorbed and stored in bone and soft tissue. And baby teeth are easily obtainable and thus offer a practical means for examining the lead content of children.

In the past, an analysis of lead-blood levels has determined whether lead has been deposited in the body. Lead-blood levels, however, are unsatisfactory determinants of past lead intake, for once lead intake ceases, blood values return to a normal level.

The new test is conducted with an instrument known as an atomic absorption spectrometer.

The test was worked out by a research team comprised of a Harvard psychiatrist and two scientists at the University of Pennsylvania Center for Oral Health Research.

Details are in the journal Nature.

Lead poisoning affects an estimated 400,000 children each year. The disease attacks urban ghetto children between 1 and 6 years old who eat flaking lead-based paint and bits of painted plaster or putty. Eating one chip of paint the size of a thumbnail for three weeks can raise the blood level to toxic levels.

Children with lead poisoning often suffer convulsions or severe brain damage in the form of cerebral palsy or mental retardation.

A fluoride preparation may be effective in prolonging the survival of teeth transplanted between individuals, Harvard research shows.

In animal experiments, the investigators showed that putting tooth transplants in a bath of concentrated phosphate-fluoride is highly effective in inhibiting root resorption (destruction). The resorption process leads to the rejection of teeth transplanted between individuals.

Central incisors removed from Rhesus monkeys were subjected to root canal treatment. Then the donor teeth were immersed in the special solution for 20 minutes.

One incisor was placed in the phosphate-fluoride solution and another in normal saline. After 20 minutes the teeth were transplanted into the sockets of another Rhesus monkey.

In eight animals in which teeth were processed in the fluoride preparation, survival of the bottom third of the root was prolonged by 27 per cent.

In a study supported by the National Institute of Dental Research, Harvard researchers at the school of dental medicine will now use the special bath for human tooth transplants.

Government researchers are studying the possible value of using television videotapes in the treatment of suicidal patients.

The study is taking place at the National Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., where Dr. Walter T. Davidson explains the rationale of the approach.

After suicide attempts, patients frequently deny that they had any suicidal intent, says Dr. Davidson.

But after patients have seen themselves on tape showing the intensive care they needed when taken to the emergency room, it becomes almost impossible for them to deny the seriousness of their actions, the doctor explains.

So far, the tapes appear to have facilitated treatment in about 15 patients.

The research project is being conducted in collaboration with the Center for Studies of Suicide Prevention of the National Institute of Mental Health.

A child won't suck his finger if he has a pacifier, Argentina researchers have learned.

They studied 539 children 2 to 12 years old. The youngsters were found to suck either a pacifier or a finger, but never both. Of 393 children given pacifiers, only three became finger suckers.

In addition, it was learned that users of pacifiers gave them up sooner than did finger suckers their habit.

The researchers then designed a pacifier which, if used early in life, should prevent youngsters from becoming a thumb sucker.

The report is in an Argentina dental journal. □

Q. What are the statistical chances for Spiro Agnew's eventual elevation to the Presidency, assuming (a) that he's retained by President Nixon on the 1972 ticket and (b) that the Republicans win in November? —Arnold Burke, Chicago, Ill.

A. Of the 35 Presidents before Nixon, 12 were succeeded by their Vice Presidents—eight as a result of the President's death, and four by election in their own right. That adds up to historical odds of 1 in 3.

With two-term Presidents, the odds are even better. Of the 12 who served two or more terms, six were succeeded by their Vice Presidents, three by death and three by subsequent election. So if a Nixon-Agnew ticket is reelected, according to history there's a 50-50 chance that Agnew will become President.

PRINCESS GRACE AND DAUGHTER CAROLINE.

Q. Does Princess Grace allow her daughter to be photographed in a bikini, but forbid swimsuit photos of herself because she has a potbelly?—T.G., Binghamton, N.Y.

A. Judge for yourself.

Q. That Japanese sergeant who hid in a cave on Guam for nearly 30 years—did he get a huge lump sum in back pay from the Japanese Army?—L.B.B., San Diego, Calif.

A. Shoichi Yokoi's back pay was $128.10. He also received $324 from the Ministry of Health and Welfare, will get an annual pension of $418. In addition, his countrymen have contributed $15,000 to date.

Q. What are the physical, moral and mental qualifications required to be a Washington lobbyist?—Violet M. Gonzalez, Bogota, N.J.

A. He must be able to hold his liquor, keep his mouth shut, and sell his viewpoint while making the men in Congress think he is helping them serve the public. The best lobbyists are shrewd, discreet, charming salesmen.

Q. Is Joseph P. Kennedy 3rd a student? Do all his travels mean he is getting into politics?—Linda Taylor, Bridgeport, Conn.

A. Joe is 19 and not now attending school. He has been to several—Our Lady of Victory School and Georgetown Prep in Washington, Milton Academy in Milton, Mass., and Manor Hall Tutoring School in Cambridge, Mass., where he earned his high school diploma. He is deeply interested in politics, has worked for his uncle, Sen. Ted Kennedy.

Q. Could you please tell me how many motor vehicles are registered in the U.S.? Also how many are cars, trucks or buses?—James A. Poole, Erie, Pa.

A. Automobiles: 88,840,541; buses: 189,085; trucks: 17,789,280; publicly-owned vehicles: 1,616,997; total: 108,435,903.

Q. Has Richard Nixon traveled more miles than any other President in history?—Elmo Menetre, Truth or Consequences, N. Mex.

A. No, but he's working at it. As of last March, Nixon had logged 312,173 miles, including his China trip. Lyndon Johnson racked up 523,060 miles while in office.

THE REV. MR. BILLY GRAHAM AND MRS. GRAHAM.

Q. I have faith in Billy Graham—even when I hear people say he's a millionaire. Is it true that he takes only $18,000 in annual salary?—J. E. Abraham, Allentown, Pa.

A. Though annual operating expenses for Graham's organization run over $15 million, the evangelist draws an annual salary of $26,500. He also has personal income from family property in Charlotte, N.C., and book royalties, which go into a trust for his wife and children. An inheritance from the sale of his father's farm gave him money to build a 10-room house atop a mountain outside the resort town of Montreat, N.C. When he leads a crusade, a corporation is set up in each city to receive and dispense all monies. It publishes an audited accounting as soon as the crusade is over.

Q. Why do they call the Army Chief of Staff William C. Westmoreland "Wind Dummy Westy"? —D.B., Washington, D.C.

A. The general got his nickname when commanding the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky. After several of his men were injured during training, Westmoreland himself led more than 100 jumps. Dummies were tossed out to check wind conditions, and thus the title—one of respect. The general is slated to retire July 1.

Photos From President Nixon's China

by Lloyd Shearer

The President and Mrs. Nixon in front of the Great Wall of China. "As we look at this wall," he said, "what is most important is that we have an open world." The photograph has become one of Nixon's all-time favorites.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Each time President Nixon leaves the White House on a trip, he is accompanied by one to four photographers: Ollie Atkins, Byron Shumaker, Jack Kightlinger, and Bob Knudsen, a quartet of the most experienced, talented, and personable lensmen in the country.

On the President's recent trip to China, Atkins and Shumaker were given the photographic assignment. "It was a dream job," says Shumaker, "because we had completely open coverage except for the President's visit to Mao Tse-tung's house in Peking. The Chinese would not let us cover that event. One of their own photographers covered it, and shots in black and white were handed out to the press. Everywhere else we went in China the doors were wide open."

So wide open, in fact, that Atkins and Shumaker shot 120 rolls of color (with their Nikons and Leicaflexes) and a single roll of black and white, all of which were processed back here.

The best of these photos have been collected in an album, copies of which have been presented not only to President and Mrs. Nixon but to such White House staff men as Bob Haldeman, Dr. Tkach, Henry Kissinger, Ron Ziegler, Dwight Chapin, the President's secretary Rosemary Woods, and about eight others who went along on the historic trip.

The photos on these pages as well as the PARADE cover shot come from the President's China album.

On famous wall

"President Nixon's favorite," according to Atkins, "is the shot of him and Mrs. Nixon at the Great Wall of China. To him that wall symbolizes China, its long history, its industrious people, its great sense of time and endurance. In many ways it symbolizes the whole fantastic, unforgettable trip."

Atkins, who is the top White House photographer (salary—$28,000 a year), travels with the President on most trips and in each case sees that a photo album is made of the journey for the President's album collection. By now the collection is voluminous.

"The President always makes it a point," Atkins explains, "when a visiting foreign dignitary comes to this country to order a photo album for the statesman. The photo album is sent by our State Department back to the visiting dignitary's home country, but it's the President who originated the idea. He is a most considerate man."

Album

Cameras everywhere

Over the years the President and Mrs. Nixon have gotten accustomed to being photographed incessantly from every angle, but never have they been more intensively photographed by still and TV photographers than they were in China. "And never," according to Atkins, "did they enjoy it more. They felt they were making history and in fact they were."

The President drinks a toast with Premier Chou En-lai at the official dinner given in the Great Hall of the People in Peking.

At banquet in Hangchow hosted by Nan Ping, head of province's Revolutionary Committee. Chopsticks gave President no trouble.

And still another banquet, the final one—in Shanghai. The usual thimble-sized drinks were downed and glasses clinked around the table. In a toast, Nixon summed up the historic visit: "This was the week that changed the world."

The First Lady beams during visit to Shanghai Children's Palace. In background are writers William Buckley (l.) and James Michener.

The Fish Lure Guaranteed to Catch Fish...or it costs you nothing!

FISH GRAB MY HOOK WITHOUT CAUTION— Attack Ravenously!

I Catch Fish Like Crazy

WORKS WHERE OTHER LURES FAIL!

My Secret is My French, Patented Lure That Works in Lakes, Ponds, Streams, Salt Waters, Saves You Time, Work, Money and Disappointment

Perfect for Amateurs, Experts, Trollers, Coasters, Shore Fisherman, All Kinds of Fresh Water Game and Pan Fish Plus Salt Water Fish!

What It Does For You!

- Catches More Fish
- Catches Almost All Kinds of Fish
- Saves You Money on Other Plugs, Bait and Lures
- Saves You Work of Catching Minnows
- Catches the Fish that Won't Bite on Worms, Bugs, Plugs, Spoons, Canned Bait, Flies, Cut Bait or Spinners!

By EMILE PLANES
(AS TOLD TO PAUL STAG)

Here is how I catch more fish than I ever caught in my life before . . . More fish than I ever dreamed of – and BIGGER fish than I ever suspected possible. Here is how you can catch bass, pike, perch, bream, trout, salmon, crappie, pickerel, walleyes and many, many other kinds of fresh water game and pan fish plus many salt water fish . . . the same way I do.

Since I invented my fishing lure, I catch so many fish, such BIG fish, and catch them so FAST, people gather to watch me. I've been followed FOUR TIMES in ONE day by a fish warden to find out if my methods are legal. But my entire secret is my fishing lure that's GUARANTEED to CATCH FISH – or it costs you nothing. Yes, GUARANTEED to catch fish even when other lures or even live bait fails or no cost.

My lure works in lakes, ponds, streams, salt water, saves you time, work, money and disappointment, is ideal for amateurs, experts, trollers, casters, shore fishermen. My lure catches fish differently from anything you've ever seen before in fresh and salt water. Even veteran U. S. fishing guides have been surprised at its astonishing catches. And the French government itself has certified my lure by actual patent as UNIQUE.

An Underwater Discovery

I am a Frenchman, a science teacher, a skin diver and I have fished all my life. For years I have studied fish underwater – WHILE FISHERMEN ABOVE WATER were trying to catch them. What I discovered changed every idea I ever had about fishing and fish lures.

Lures Can Frighten Fish Away

I watched UNDERWATER exactly how fish reacted to every lure, live bait, every fishing maneuver and trick used to catch them. I watched fish approach even the best performing lures, seem ABOUT TO STRIKE – then suddenly TURN AWAY. Something about even the best performing lures was obviously often KEEPING THEM FROM CATCHING fish. As for the average lure, mostly they seemed actually to BORE the fish – as though they looked to the fish as they looked to me UNDERWATER – shiny, painted bits of metal, plastic and wood. I saw live bait after it was cast turn white and die before my eyes – and saw fish often approach, prepare to strike – THEN TURN AWAY.

Minnows Irresistible

Then I saw the same fish approach actual live swimming minnows and without caution or suspicion STRIKE RAVENOUSLY. I saw the same fish that rejected the lures again and again attack without caution LIVE SWIMMING MINNOWS. In fact, these little minnows seemed to DRAW many fish from a distance – even before being seen.

Why Lures Often Fail

My talks with fish scientists and my own studies convinced me it was the swimming motion of minnows, particularly the swishing tail that attracted many fish, concluded that no lure I had ever used had SUFFICIENTLY duplicated the living minnow and its motion.

How, I asked myself, could a fish lure be created that would attract fish just as the actual living swimming minnows did – and that once attracted would get the same ravenous STRIKE as live minnows – WITHOUT the hesitation, suspicion and FEAR aroused by the lures I saw used?

My Man-Made "Minnow"

After 19 years of study and testing, I have finally created such a man-made "minnow," so like a living, swimming minnow in shape, form, texture and motion that fish ravenously STRIKE – without caution – and I catch more fish, bigger fish – faster than ever before in my life.

Because my man-made "fish" looks, darts, wiggles, even "feels" like a minnow . . . bass, pickerel, pike, perch, trout and many other kinds of fresh and salt water fish attack voraciously – without suspicion or fear – even when they're not biting for another fisherman on the lake.

Astonishing Catches Reported

I call my lure VIVIF. Once I perfected VIVIF I started selling them to other fishermen. Soon news of astonishing catches came in–first France –then from other countries.

Yes, from all over come reports of amazing catches – of fish biting where other lures failed – of the sureness, the simplicity, the effectiveness of this VIVIF lure. And what does this mean to you?

Simply this. Now YOU can get more out of fishing than ever before. Now YOU can catch more fish, bigger fish than ever in your life. It is GUARANTEED – or you pay not one penny. It means now no longer need you come back with an empty creel from a long day's fishing. It means no longer need you spend hours of work digging worms and catching minnows or other bait. It means you can save the endless expense of continually buying expensive spinners, flies, plugs, bait and lures. It means you can often catch the fish that are not biting on worms, bugs, plugs, spoons, canned bait, flies, cut bait or spinners or no cost. It means you can troll, cast, or shore fish with my lure with equal success. It means you can go out after and come back with large mouth bass, small mouth bass, pike, pickerel, perch, bream, trout, walleyes, salmon, red tuna, striped bass, blue fish, weak fish and do it time and again –or your money will be refunded at any time. VIVIF is catching fish in 25 countries for delighted fishermen. 3,000,000 VIVIF's have been grabbed up. Already reports from U.S. fishermen say VIVIF is the greatest lure they have ever used. I predict VIVIF will be the world's fastest selling fish lure. But test the magic power of VIVIF yourself without risking a penny.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

HOW NIXON KEEPS INFORMED

The President gets his news in a daily, breezy and highly concentrated digest. Any inference that the President is poorly informed, however, would be unfair.

He spends hours every day poring over government intelligence reports. Each morning, for instance, he receives a bound book with the legend on the cover: "Intelligence Checklist for the President. Top Secret." It is the CIA's morning summation of the world's events, with punchy headlines on the left-hand page and capsulized information on the right. There is also a section of commentary. Dissents by top officials from the conclusions of CIA's majority appear as footnotes.

A similar book, called the "Daily Digest," contains often parallel information from the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency. Still another, in a grim black cover, is produced by another arm of the Pentagon, the National Security Agency. It is a distillation of electronic communications gathered by agents around the world and by satellites and other long-range listening devices.

NSA employs thousands of technicians in its sprawling headquarters at Fort Meade, Md.--halfway between Washington and Baltimore--to crack the codes of foreign powers and translate their monitored voice communications into intelligence information.

The State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research, which also produces daily intelligence summaries, adds its assessments.

All vie for the President's attention and approval. It isn't simply a matter of keeping him informed. All the agencies involved are painfully aware that the document delivered to the President is a sales brochure as well as a news briefing.

Our foreign intelligence, in total, costs the U.S. more than $1 million a day. To keep the money coming, the intelligence reports are unconscionably lavish.

At the White House, the State Department's information usually gets short shrift. The Defense Intelligence Agency's report is carefully studied, particularly for information on Indochina. The aural voyeurism of NSA occasionally produces startling developments. But the most literate, most titillating, more carefully read reports come from the CIA. In times of crisis, all these agencies keep the White House in constant touch with every twitch their agents spot. Even when the world seems calm, there is a steady flow. And wherever the President goes to sleep--in Washington, San Clemente, Key Biscayne or Camp David--another report from the CIA is waiting to be read before the lights go off.

INEXPENSIVE, LAMINATED CARDBOARD CHAISE.

CARDBOARD COMFORT

A Los Angeles architect named Frank Gehry has developed a complete line of furniture made from laminated layers of corrugated fiberboard.

Gehry first used fiberboard in constructing scale models of his architectural projects, then conceived the idea of applying it to furniture. "I thought it was high time to have some decorative shapes that were useful, clean and liberating," he says, "and no other material for the price has this kind of flexibility and strength."

The new collection is called "Easy Edges," and includes body-contoured chairs, bar stools and rockers, as well as tables and bed frames. In spite of its velvety surface, fiberboard furniture is immune to such domestic disasters as spilled catchup and stubbed-out cigarettes--and it never needs polishing. All of which should greatly appeal to the easygoing housekeeper.

THERAPY FOR CHILD ABUSE

Every year 60,000 cases of child abuse are reported--but many more go unreported. A mother whacks a wailing infant on the head and cracks his skull. But the pediatrician believes her story that the child fell out of his high chair. Or the injury may never receive medical attention.

Are parents who batter their children really monsters? "No," say Dr. C. Henry Kempe and Dr. Ray E. Helfer, authors of "Helping the Battered Child and His Family." According to the doctors, less than 10 percent of child abusers are psychopathic personalities. The rest, with therapeutic help, can change into the loving parents they'd like to be.

A spate of self-help groups called "Parents Anonymous" are now burgeoning across the country to prove just that. Modeled after Gamblers Anonymous, the groups aim to provide an atmosphere where abusive parents, without fear of recrimination, can confess their destructive tendencies and seek the means to stop it.

Relief can come in many forms. Sometimes just the opportunity given to the abusive parent to meet with others who sympathize helps.

Drs. Helfer and Kempe commend the work of P.A. But they warn that in some cases more extensive therapy may be needed. Ideally, they feel every community should have a sensitive child abuse team able to deal compassionately with parent and child.

They recommend that a neighbor or friend who knows of an incident of child abuse call such a team where it exists, or else notify the child protection division of his regional social services or welfare department. Abusive parents are urged to do likewise or call Parents Anonymous.

PUBLIC UNIONS

Unionization of government workers, policemen, teachers, firemen, etc. is proceeding at a faster rate now than for other workers. Does this mean that the nation is going to be faced with an increasing number of long strikes by government workers?

Not so, says Sam Zagoria, labor relations chief for the 15,000 municipalities in the National League of Cities. In a new book, "Public Workers and Public Unions," published by Prentice-Hall, he predicts that as public employers and public unions adjust to the changed relationship, most agreements will be hammered out at the negotiating table. The economic endurance contests of the industrial world will be rare, says the former member of the National Labor Relations Board.

He argues that unions are beginning to realize that strikes against the government, besides being illegal in 48 of the 50 states, have an uneven economic effect--the public employer continues to collect his tax revenues while the public worker loses out on salary.

MAO TSE-TUNG: LEFT TO RIGHT

IT'S ALL GREEK TO THE CHINESE Even for the Chinese scholar it is quite an ordeal to read a Mainland newspaper these days.

For centuries Chinese newspapers and books were printed to be read from right to left. A few years ago, however, printers began to produce them in the European-American fashion, from left to right. But some papers today, including the "Peking Daily," the official paper of the Communist Party of China, combine both old and new styles on the front page.

On Formosa, however, Chiang Kai-shek still retains the old-fashioned right to left.

HOW TO MOVE Almost 40 million Americans moved last year, and at least that many will move in the next 12 months.

One bright, young housewife, Susan Purdy, offers suggestions that can turn the whole experience into a triumph of efficiency:

Before any packing is done, get a notebook, a clipboard, several rolls of varicolored plastic or cloth tape, a couple of packages of 3x5-inch file cards, and some marking pens. On a floor plan of your new house or apartment, mark the main areas with strips of tape; red for kitchen, yellow for living room, blue for basement and so on. Put the code into the notebook. Use the colored marking pens to label the contents of each container.

Now put the matching tape on the packed containers and on each piece of furniture. Don't be stingy about it, put a strip on at least two sides and one end of the boxes. Some tapes may mar the finish on furniture, so put it on unfinished areas when you can. When you can't, use the file cards: punch a hole through one end for a piece of string, wrap a strip of colored tape all around the card and tie it to the table leg or whatever. Remember that dresser drawers will be taken out, so put a strip of tape in the bottom of each drawer.

At your new house, hang the clipboard, with the floor plan on it, near the entrance the moving men will use. The result will be that everything will be put where you want it, the movers will be grateful, and maybe best of all, they won't ask you a hundred times, "Where do you want this one, lady?"

One more tip: Use a different color tape, preferably fluorescent, for containers packed with fragile things.

They Talk Your Language

by Lois Hallin

SEATTLE, WASH.

A badly burned Pakistani seaman is rushed to a Seattle hospital. He speaks no English, is terrified in his strange surroundings, no one speaks Pakistani and he resists treatment. The man dies. From this tragedy less than four years ago, and at the suggestion of the State Department, assisted by the Foundation for International Understanding Through Students (FIUTS), the Language Bank developed in Seattle. It now has more than 350 interpreters in 80 languages and dialects. It is reached through facilities manned round the clock by the King County Medical Telephone Exchange.

Calls increase

Originating, financing, recruiting, promoting and keeping records of this service is the Altrusa Club of Seattle, a chapter of a national organization of business and professional women. When the Language Bank began it received only five calls a month, while last year there were more than 400, usually entailing from three to five telephone calls to locate an available translator.

A Taiwan soldier returning home found his family home destroyed. He could trace only a brother, reportedly in Washington, D.C. He took a ship to Vancouver, B.C., and confusing Washington State with Washington, D.C., jumped ship and made his way to Seattle, where, lacking necessary papers, he was arrested and jailed. Not understanding why he was being detained and finding no one who spoke his language, he attempted suicide. A quick-thinking jailer called the Language Bank in the middle of the night, an interpreter arrived and the man was comforted, and aided on his journey.

A group of Japanese tourists arrives in Seattle with no knowledge of English. Language Bank supplies a Japanese guide who takes them on a tour of the city. Other resident Japanese learned of an aged Japanese who was destitute and without family. They brought him food, magazines, interpreted his Social Security benefits for him, in fact have adopted him and continue to look after him.

A corporation needs a 30-page document translated—Language Bank sees that it is done quickly and accurately. A hotel manager wishes to talk with his counterpart in Italy who speaks no English; Air Canada calls for a Dutch interpreter; a resident returning from a European vacation wishes to write a letter of thanks to a friend he made in Yugoslavia—all jobs for the Language Bank.

Baby-sitters

The technique of operating a kidney machine has been explained in Portuguese and Mexican by Language Bank volunteers, interpreters have been supplied at murder trials, vari-tongued baby-sitters have been recruited.

How did all this get off the ground? Altrusa Club members researched the languages of the world through the Seattle Public Library, sent hundreds of letters to doctors, hospitals, clinics, law enforcement agencies, businesses, clubs, churches, airlines, hotels, outlining the service and asking for suggestions. Volunteers were recruited originally from foreign students at the University of Washington, who filled out questionnaires detailing the languages and dialects they spoke, degree of proficiency in each, area of knowledge—conversation, technical, scientific, medical, legal, secretarial—and time available. Word spread and many volunteers were recruited. They now consist mostly of housewives and employed foreign-born, since students usually are not permanent residents.

A "Linguistic Map" has been devised to assist in determining the origin of a visitor whose language is not easily identifiable. The visitor need only point to his place of origin and his language or dialect is revealed.

Sign talk, too

Sign language has also been added through the efforts of World Wings (former PanAm stewardesses) and retired stewardesses from all airlines, who have compiled and issued an illustrated booklet. Stewardesses with this training wear a Sign Pin, a great help to both deaf and foreign persons. These signs, taught at several centers in Seattle, may be learned in two hours.

Except in the case of businesses, law enforcement agencies, consulates or persons who require many hours of service, all this work is on a free, volunteer basis.

In Seattle there does not need to be a language barrier. A call to Language Bank, MA 2-6900, will bring an eager interpreter at any time of day or night.

Instead of telling us not to smoke, maybe they should tell us what to smoke.

For years, a lot of people have been telling the smoking public not to smoke cigarettes, especially cigarettes with high 'tar' and nicotine.

But the simple fact is that now more Americans are smoking than ever before. Evidently many people like to smoke and will keep on liking to smoke no matter what any one says or how many times they say it.

Since the cigarette critics are concerned about high 'tar' and nicotine, we would like to offer a constructive proposal.

Perhaps, instead of telling us not to smoke cigarettes, they can tell us what to smoke.

For instance, perhaps they ought to recommend that the American public smoke Vantage cigarettes.

Vantage has a unique filter that allows rich flavor to come through it yet substantially cuts down on 'tar' and nicotine.

We want to be straightforward. Vantage is not the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette.

But it well may be the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette a smoker will enjoy smoking. It has only 12 milligrams 'tar' and 0.8 milligrams nicotine. The truth is that smoke has to come through a filter if taste is to come through a filter. And where there is taste there has to be some 'tar.'

But what good is a low 'tar' cigarette if the smoker has to work so hard trying to pull the flavor through, he feels like he's sucking on a pencil?

Vantage gives the smoker flavor like a full-flavor cigarette. But it's the only cigarette that gives him so much flavor with so little 'tar' and nicotine.

A statement of simple fact we believe all of us can endorse. And that you can experience in your next pack of cigarettes.

12 mg. tar
0.8 mg. nicotine
FILTER AND MENTHOL

Filter and Menthol: 12 mg. "tar", 0.8 mg. nicotine—av. per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. 71 (Menthol by FTC method).

A Computer Reads Your Heart

by Sid Ross

MT. VERNON, ILL.

Although electrocardiograms (EKG's) have served as a major diagnostic tool in combating heart disease for many years, not every physician has the special training necessary to read and interpret them. Now a system has been devised which enables hospitals without an electrocardiograph specialist on their staff to get almost instantaneous EKG readings via long-distance telephone and computer.

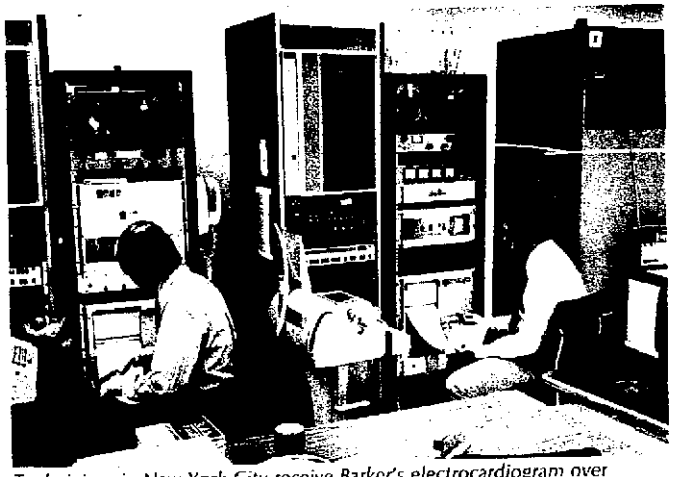

These pictures show the system in operation at Good Samaritan Hospital, a 150-bed institution in Mt. Vernon, Ill.

James Barker, a 67-year-old retired railway worker, was brought in suffering from severe chest pains. A nurse telephoned his physician, Dr. Morris Zelman, at home. Zelman ordered an electrocardiogram taken while he headed for the hospital. Technicians promptly wheeled an EKG cart to Barker's bedside, fastened the electrodes to his body, and took a heart tracing. This was immediately transmitted by phone as a series of tones to a computer center at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York, nearly 1000 miles away. Within minutes, the computer "read" the EKG and "diagnosed" the situation as an "acute cardiac episode." The report was promptly phoned to Mt. Vernon.

Into intensive care

Dr. Zelman, who had just reached the hospital when the EKG report arrived, quickly put Barker in the intensive care unit, where he began his eventual recovery. Zelman says the computer-phone hookup, called COMPU-GRAM and developed by Chromalloy American Corp. "gives you an expert consulting cardiologist at your elbow." Dr. Leon Pordy, a member of the medical team which developed the system, predicts that within five years 90 percent of the nation's hospitals will be using computers to diagnose heart ailments.

Technicians in New York City receive Barker's electrocardiogram over the phone. This is the Computer Heart Diagnosis Unit at Mt. Sinai.

This child has a good home, nice clothes, a loving mother- and Pin-Worms!

A tormenting itch in the rectal area, nose-picking and fidgeting are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms. It can happen to anyone in any family—young or old, rich or poor. It's so common, medical authorities say that 1 out of 3 children examined, and many parents, have Pin-Worms without knowing it. And because Pin-Worms bring on itching and fidgeting, they can distract children and affect their school work!

What's more, Pin-Worms are highly contagious, so they can spread from person to person, until the whole family is infected.

What can you do about it? Fortunately there is an easy-to-take medication that gets rid of Pin-Worms. It's called Jayne's® P-W® tablets. Ask your pharmacist. He'll tell you that Jayne's P-W tablets are specially formulated with an effective medical ingredient that gets Pin-Worms out of your system. Ask for Jayne's P-W tablets at your drug store.

Draft Exiles Who Can Come Home

by Martin B. Margulies

Unskilled exiles, who have a tough time finding jobs in Canada, stroll past a billboard in Montreal, Quebec, urging financial support for Canada's Olympic teams.

TORONTO, CANADA.

While Congressmen today are talking about amnesty for American draft resisters living in exile, many of the resisters don't need it. They could come home right now.

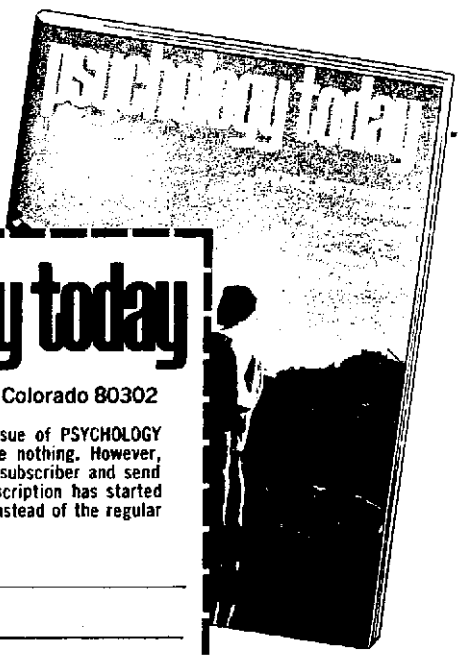

Steven, for instance. He and his wife came to Hamilton, Ontario, in 1969, after his request for conscientious objector status was turned down. But in processing his application, his local board committed important errors, any one of which would have made conviction impossible. Accordingly, the government dropped charges and Steven's induction order was canceled. Since he is now 26, there is no way that the board could try to draft him again.

Steven is one of an unknown number of draft resisters and military deserters, now living abroad, whose indictments have been dismissed (often without their knowing it), or who would have valid defenses to prosecution. Many don't realize that they can come back safely. To assist them, the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors (CCCO), a national draft counseling organization with headquarters in Philadelphia, has just inaugurated a "repatriation project." Its aim is to mobilize counselors and

Want to learn what modern psychology has learned about people? Including you?

Until recently, that was quite an order. Your choice would have been to plow through professional journals. Read weighty new books as quickly as they came out. Or trust the mass media—where psychology is often sensationalized, distorted, oversimplified.

PSYCHOLOGY TODAY has changed all that

PSYCHOLOGY TODAY is a new magazine that enables the educated layman to catch up with the social sciences. And keep up. With full coverage of all the different approaches to understanding the human condition. The viewpoints range from hard-core Freudianism to the newer behaviorists who, frankly, think Freud was all wet.

It's psychology the way you'd want it to be presented. Excitingly. Without tired jargon. No cliche-ridden definitions. And with contributions by many of the most famous names in the behavioral sciences—like Bruno Bettelheim, Kenneth B. Clark, Rollo May, Ashley Montagu, Carl Rogers and B. F. Skinner.

If you've been looking for the opportunity to speak your piece on business practices that frustrate and annoy you, you'll get the chance during Consumer Information Week May 1-6, sponsored by the Council of Better Business Bureaus. A highlight of the event will be a National Consumer Referendum. You will be able to "vote" in this referendum by filling in a questionnaire and mailing it to the CBBB in Washington. These consumer "ballots" will be available during May at many retail outlets and from Better Business Bureaus and other organizations. Plan to take part. For People With "Uppers" and "Lowers"

For the first time, science now offers a unique plastic cream that holds dentures—both "uppers" and "lowers"—as they've never been held before. It forms an elastic membrane that helps hold your dentures to the natural tissues of your mouth.

It's FIXODENT®—a revolutionary discovery for daily home use. So different it's protected by U. S. Patent #3,003,988.

FIXODENT not only holds dentures firmer, but it holds them more comfortably, too. It's so elastic you may bite harder, chew better, eat more naturally.

The special pencil-point dispenser lets you put FIXODENT exactly where it's needed. Resists oozing over and gagging.

Just one application may last for hours. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get easy-to-use FIXODENT Denture Adhesive Cream at all drug counters.

lawyers who will scrutinize the selective service and military files of emigrés, to see whether they still face prison.

How many of the estimated 35,000 to 80,000 exiles will be able to return? No one can tell for sure, but the percentage may be staggering. A former counselor from Buffalo, who has helped to "repatriate" four men already, says: "There's an infinite number of possibilities. I've never searched a file yet in which I didn't find at least three clear flaws, and 10 or 15 more arguable ones." And Chicago counselor Jeremy Mott, from CCCO's Midwest office, reports that, of 20 men whose cases he's investigated, 17 could come home with "practically no risk of prosecution."

Many will benefit

Many of the emigrés will benefit from the retroactive application of court decisions handed down after they left the country. Others were processed illegally even under the law at the time. For example:

- Steven, the young man from Hamilton, asked his Arkansas draft board why it had rejected his CO application. The clerk replied: "The board is not required to place in the file of a registrant their reasons for not granting a classification." Although most draft boards were taking this position three years ago, subsequent court decisions have made it clear that they were incorrect.
- Twenty-two-year-old Dee also applied for CO and was turned down. When he asked his Oregon draft board for a personal appearance, the chairman wrote back: "We see no purpose in discussing the matter further." However, anybody who seeks a personal appearance within the time period established by the regulations—formerly 30 days, now 15—is entitled to get one.
- Joe, 28, was already living in Toronto when he received his notice to report for a physical examination. He never showed up. His Massachusetts board promptly labeled him a "delinquent" and sent him an induction order. It was common practice in those days for boards to punish men who allegedly violated the regulations by drafting them immediately. In 1970, the Supreme Court declared the "delinquency" procedure illegal. The Justice Department thereupon dropped charges in over 600 pending cases, Joe's among them.

Investigation needed

All this doesn't mean that exiles can step blithely across the border without investigating their cases thoroughly. Not everybody whose board acted improperly can still do something about it. Young men who neglected to challenge their classifications by seeking personal appearances and appeals may find themselves barred from raising otherwise sound defenses at their trials. However, failure to appeal might be excused if the appeal would clearly have been useless, or if the young man was ignorant of his appeal rights through no fault of his own.

Of those who do return, some will be classified and processed for induction all over again, though their chances of obtaining deferments will certainly be better than when they left. Others, because of age or high lottery numbers, are immune.

It appears, though, that most of the emigrés don't want to come back, except for short visits.

Steven, for one, is a well-paid computer programmer analyst. He and his wife own an attractive ranch-style house in a quiet neighborhood. Both plan to become Canadian citizens.

"If I went back," says Steven, "I'd only have to pay war taxes again, and I've had the delightful experience of not paying war taxes for the past several years."

"But having my indictment dismissed did take a lot of psychological pressure off. Before that happened, my boss asked me to attend a business conference in the States, and I had to decline. And I do want to visit my family."

Dee, who helps publish "Amex," a magazine for American exiles, is in Canada to stay. So is Joe, a former music student who earns his living rebuilding pianos. "But," says Joe, "it's nice to be able to see friends, and go to New York for the ballet. Also, it's always at least a potential disadvantage, in terms of career possibilities, to be excluded from a country with the cultural and economic resources of America." Joe will travel to the U.S. shortly, for the first time in seven years.

Roots in Canada

"Few of the resisters would want to return," concludes the Rev. Robert Gardner. Gardner, an American, co-ordinates the Ministry to U.S. Draft-Age Immigrants, sponsored by the Canadian Council of Churches.

"A lot of Canadians and Americans think of the draft resister as a shaggy, long-haired kid," Gardner says. "As often, he's a pinstriped, well-groomed young man on Bay Street (Toronto's Wall Street). Some of the guys who came up in the mid-60's are in law school. They have roots here now."

It's a different story among the deserters, who by and large are poorer, less articulate, and less educated than the draft resisters. Many deserters never applied for discharge, but simply left their units and headed north. As a result, there are no errors in their files which would permit them to return. At the same time, they lack the means and the job skills to remain in Canada.

Partly for this reason, counseling groups in Canada are cool to the CCCO repatriation project, claiming that it would favor middle-class youngsters while doing nothing for those who need help the most. Also, many argue that exiled Americans should hold out for a general, unconditional amnesty. "Amnesty," says deserter Jack Calhoun, "means that America has to come to terms with the war in Indochina, by recognizing that we up here have done nothing wrong."

Legal questions

To CCCO's Eric Wright, however, part of the project's strength lies in the very fact that "instead of concentrating solely on the legality of the war, it also focuses on the legality of what selective service did." As such, he believes, it may help to make general amnesty legislation more palatable to the public. Bob Seeley, his co-counselor at CCCO, explains: "The whole amnesty debate is predicated upon the assumption that these guys broke the law. But now it appears that this may not be so."

If Seeley is correct, the amnesty question indeed takes on a new dimension, the latest in an almost daily series of new dimensions to America's most tragic war.

SWARTHMORE CAMPUS' PET POPULATION HAS ADMINISTRATIVE OKAY.

Going to the Dogs

While most college administrations are fighting to keep pets off the campus, Swarthmore has done a complete about-face.

At Swarthmore, all pets must be registered and tagged. Owners pay a $35 refundable fee to cover any damages created by the pets and agree to obey the town ordinance against free-roaming pets.

Most Swarthmore pets are mutts with literary names such as Myshkin, named after Dostoevski's "The Idiot."

College psychiatrist Silas Warner says pets represent honesty, freedom, and sincerity. They are generally friendly, emotionally uncomplicated, and rewarding. The pets also encourage the responsibility which helps the transition to adulthood.

Dr. Alex Hillerson, a neighboring veterinarian, says that pets give students something they can love, or reject, on their own terms.

And the students? "Dogs pep things up." "Cats make things feel more like home." "They always have time to play."

Two young Floridians, Sherrill Potts and Louise Agen, became America's first women ocean engineers when they graduated from Florida Atlantic University's College of Engineering last month. Sherry, pictured here on the submersible, Alvin, will soon have a paper on underwater photography published by the prestigious Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. She hopes to return there to work.

Louise, or Sandi as she prefers being called, comes by her career choice naturally. Her mother is a mechanical engineer. "There are lots of women engineers now," she says, "so why not women ocean engineers?" Sandi has already had a problem, however, with the male-dominated field. One of her first job applications was rejected because the firm didn't have "facilities" for female engineers. She presently seeks work in the Washington, D.C., area where her fiancé, also an ocean engineer, is employed.

Despite Sandi's job-hunting problems, both young women are optimistic about their new careers.

Young Officeholders

One week after his recent inauguration as mayor of Evansville, Ind., Russell Lloyd kept a campaign promise to "involve young people in city government."

He named 17-year-old Ann Schmidt to the Recreation Commission, which promptly elected her its vice president. At Evansville's North High School, Ann ranks in the top 5 percent of her class, is a member of the National Honor Society and has participated in student government for four years.

The mayor's second appointment was another 17-year-old, Thomas J. Shetler, to the Park Board. Although the other members are all over 60, Tom says there are no problems. "They were all my age, once. Part of my job is to remind them of that time."

In explaining his appointments, the mayor said, "I knew that both Ann and Tom were intelligent, and had fine school records. I felt that they could speak for youth without taking a radical view."

Doctor Developes Home Treatment that

RINSES AWAY BLACKHEADS

HELPS DRY UP ACNE-PIMPLES

In 15 Minutes or Your Money Back!

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque 15 Minute Treatment Must Show Immediate Improvement or — YOUR MONEY BACK!

A leading New York Doctor working with a cosmetic laboratory, has developed a simple medicated home-treatment that rinses away blackheads and whiteheads in a matter of minutes. It was demonstrated recently on five teen-age girls and three teen-age boys. The results were breath-taking. Blackheads really rinsed away. In fact, many could be seen on the cloth used to wash off the Masque. But this wasn't all! Acne-pimples improved after one application, enlarged pores reduced, and rough, muddy complexions became cleaner, clearer and smoother looking. These results certainly indicate why teen-agers, both boys and girls, are now saying "this is one product that really works", for good, clear, clean, healthy skins . . . and why mothers of teen-agers have heartily endorsed its use. The Masque Cream Treatment is indeed a remarkable discovery, not only for healthy skins, but also for the confidence, poise and self-esteem a fine complexion brings to teen-agers!

Anyone Can Use It

If you suffer the agony of teen-age blackheads, whiteheads, acne-pimples and rough, unsightly complexions give yourself this home treatment at our risk. Apply this delightfully Mint-Scented Cream and within 2 or 3 minutes an absorbing agent called Argilla dries and turns this cream into a plastic-like masque. You will now feel as though hundreds of "tiny fingers" were softly kneading the skin, loosening pore-caked dirt, blackheads and foreign impurities. As it firms and hardens, its suction-action draws out waste matter from the pores. . . . In 15 minutes you simply rinse the masque away with lukewarm water which dissolves it immediately. When you wipe your face, you can see that blackheads and other pore "filler" actually come off on your towel. And your skin feels clean . . . really clean . . . refreshed, smooth like velvet!

Start Now to Improve Your Complexion

Now is the time for action. Don't take a back seat or be a wall-flower because of bad skin. If you want to get your full share of fun and parties . . . clear up your complexion and let Mint Julep Masque "Lead the Way"! You owe it to yourself to try a single fifteen minute home treatment to convince yourself that this new Queen Helene masque-cream can work wonders for you.

Attention! MOTHERS of Teen-Agers

Queen Helene Mint Julep Masque is a MUST for you, too! It will help tighten sagging skin on face and throat, relax tired face muscles and stimulate a fresher, cleaner, more youthful complexion. Try a Medicated Mint Julep Masque Treatment YOURSELF. You'll be delighted with the skin-tightening experience and more alive feeling that comes with every home-treatment.

Queen Helene Mint Masque is only $3.00 for the six ounce jar, enough for over 3 months of daily home treatments. Buy it today! Start using it immediately! RICH RICH L&M

Kings and Super Kings: 19 mg. "tar," 1.3 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report (Aug. '71).

EDITOR'S NOTE: Anyone who has seen London Lee perform knows he's a rich man's son. That's his identification mark, the opening for him to joke about his childhood, his family, and his current experiences. Yet, the "rich kid" was brought on stage almost accidentally. "When I decided to be a comedian I went to California and got a job driving a cab, and at night I worked in a little club called The Summit. Money was immaterial. I got a jokebook and started. And then one night onstage I said: 'You won't believe this, but my family's very wealthy. I don't have to do this!' The audience looked at me skeptically. I said: 'It's true. I wanted to play with poor kids when I was little. I finally went to my father and said: Buy me what the poor kids have. He said: What do you want? My mother said: Buy him a slum. My father said: All right but let's make sure it's in a nice neighborhood!' Those lines started the rich kid image."

London (who quips he got his name "after the city of my birth; I'm thankful I wasn't born in Elizabeth, New Jersey"), has been on all the major TV talk shows, and starred at top nightclubs. Here are some of his rich stories.

My Favorite Jokes

by London Lee

I was overindulged when I was a child. My father bought me a German shepherd. I beg your pardon. Not a dog—a German shepherd.

My father loved me very much. I remember when I was kidnapped they said, "We're holding your son for $100,000 ransom." How would you feel if you heard your father say: "Finders keepers."

Talk about wealthy . . . My sister had a small wedding. But my father gave her a catered divorce.

"Let's play cops and robbers and lawyers and Supreme Court!"

"This is scrumptious!"

Where do parents learn all those rotten things they tell their kids not to do?

I like to discuss parents and their pearls of wisdom in my act. They say to their kids, "Where did we fail? I can't take it anymore, why don't you get a job?" You come home late and they ask, "What could you possibly do until 2 o'clock in the morning?" I figured, at my father's age if he didn't know, why should I tell him?

Or something like: you come home late to dinner. Your mother says, "As far as I'm concerned you can eat your dinner cold." What's for dinner? Tunafish salad!

Or they hit you with: "I want my kid to have what I never had." They save up money so they can send you to camp in the summer, so you can have what they never had—poison ivy!

"If your mother can take the time to defrost this meal then you can take the time to eat it."

Parents think they're hip, aware. To them "taking a trip" is four days in Puerto Rico. "Out of sight" is where your father wants you to be.

And then parents can be unpredictable. I remember my mother borrowing my car when I was a kid. I'd just gotten it. And she drove it into a tree. I said, "Ma, it's brand-new, how could you do it?" She said, "It wasn't my fault. I blew the horn."

"Well, it's not exactly the diagnosis I had in mind, but I guess it'll have to do."

In New York there's a tremendous fear about walking around the streets. People don't feel safe. Anyway, I even went and bought a bulletproof vest for protection—and a midget shot me in the foot.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

MAGGIE AND TERRY FIND IT IMPOSSIBLE TO PENETRATE THE RED TROOPS' NET.

I AM SORRY, HERR LEE. I THOUGHT THAT KNOWING THE COUNTRY, I COULD FIND A WAY TO REACH THE BORDER.

NOT YOUR FAULT, MAGGIE. THEY JUST HAVE THE AREA STAKED OUT TOO WELL... IF WE WAIT, THEY'LL FIND US EVENTUALLY, OR WE'LL BE STARVED INTO THE OPEN.

BUT WHAT YOU PROPOSE, HERR LEE, TO LET OURSELVES BE SEEN, IS IT A CHANCE?

NOT MUCH OF ONE, BUT I'M PINNING ONE FAINT HOPE ON BALDOR.

HE AND HIS CREWS WILL COME ZINGING IN TO SHOOT THE FINAL SCENE. WITH LUCK, HE MAY EVEN TRY TO DIRECT THE OPERATION IN TERMS OF DRAMATIC IMPACT.

AND IF THERE IS CONFUSION, WE MAY TURN IT TO OUR ADVANTAGE, NO?

SOMETHING LIKE THAT... WHATEVER HAPPENS, WE'LL NEED REST TO BE READY FOR IT.

SUCH WEAK THINGS FOR ONE'S LIFE TO DEPEND ON — LIKE THAT WE HAVE A PISTOL AND THAT THERE ARE TWO OF US...

4/30

YOU'RE QUITE A GAL, MAGGIE. YOU DIDN'T HAVE TO BUY INTO THIS. DON'T SUPPOSE BALDOR WOULD EVER SUSPECT IT OF YOU...

LATER...

STILL LATER...

MAGGIE?... MAGGIE!
